TAFT GLAD HE SAVED NATION FROM 'ANARCHY AND CHAOS'

President's "Swan" Song at Party Feast Takes Form of Rejoicing Over the Downfall of Theodore Roosevelt

Welcomes His Own Defeat, Which He Interprets as a Victory in Saving "Popular Government From Ruin"

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Speaking before 1,500 Republicans of nation-wide prominence, probably the largest assembly of the G. O. P. ever gathered together at a banquet, President Taft tonight sang the "swan song" of the administration and uttered a scathing denunciation of Theodore Roosevelt.

Samuel J. Elder, president of the Boston Republican Club, was toastmaster. Secretary Knox and Postmaster General Hitchcock were among the prominent guests present.

We were beaten in the last election, said the President. We ran third in the race. Why is it that we gather here with so much spirit, and with so little of the disappointment and humiliation supposed to accompany political disaster?

Is it not that in spite of the defeat recorded at the election in November, we were still victorious in saving our country from an administration whose policy involved the snapping of the foundations of democratic, constitutional, representative government and whose appeals to the people were calculated to arouse class hatred that has heretofore been the ruin of popular government, and whose contempt for the limitations of constitutional law and the guarantees of civil liberty promised chaos and anarchy in a country that has until this time been the model of individual freedom and effective popular government.

The result of the Chicago convention was a triumph for the permanence of Republican institutions the importance of which cannot be exaggerated, and I wish to emphasize this in order that it be known that we meet in no spirit of despair but rather to rejoice in a victory for law and order and the institutions handed down to us by our fathers.

To Eat Cake and Have It Too.

It is true that we were defeated at the polls by our old-time opponent, the Democratic party. It is true that they are now going to work out again the problem of eating your cake and having it too, by showing how it is possible to change from a system of protection for manufactured industries to one of a tariff for revenue only, without affecting the industries to their detriment, and without halting production or lowering wages.

It is true that we are to witness a change of office-holders from Republicans to Democrats, and we are to see how economical the new administration is to be as compared with the old. We have been through this before. It may be that this time they can do what they have not succeeded in doing heretofore, and if so and they can maintain the prosperity of the country at its present record level, then we can be Americans before we are Republicans and rejoice at their success.

President Taft uttered a prophecy of the bright future which he saw in store for the Republican party.

It is not very usual, he said, for the deceased to participate in the wake, but I think that a few remarks about the character of the deceased and the manner of his taking off may not be amiss.

No Aristocrat, Says Taft.

It has been charged against me, said the President, that I am an aristocrat, and that I have no sympathy with the common people, and I have no doubt that this impression has gone abroad and has settled deep in the minds of many people. Now I don't think it is true. I think I am as sympathetic with the common people, as earnestly desirous of their happiness, as anxious to see that they have justice accorded them and that they enjoy all their rights under the law and the Constitution, as fully and completely, as anyone.

Mr. Elder in introducing President Taft said:

We unfeignedly hope for our victorious opponents' sound and wise legislation, and for the country, continued and unalarmed prosperity.

We trust they have learned the bitter lesson of twenty years ago, bitter to the country, and bitter to them. We have no desire to secure future party triumph at the price of business disturbance and disaster.

There are no closet doors in the house of this administration which we shrink from opening. There are no skeletons inside.

Le Gallienne Becomes Poet With Hobo Hoof

He Takes to a Vagabond Life With Wife No. 3 and Daughter.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Richard Le Gallienne, who wrote "The Poet With the Coward's Tongue" in reply to William Watson's "The Woman With the Serpent's Tongue," sailed today for Marseilles on the steamer Canada to spend the next four months "as a hobo."

"I have given up city life for good," he said, "as I can find in nature all the dramatic contrasts of city life; the same conflict, the same tyranny, the same injustice. In flowers I find the same goodness and beauty as I do among human beings; I also find the same ugliness.

"The gypsy and the hobo have the right idea of life. Free and unconventional, they can roam at will. If men like the Goulds, Vanderbilts, Morgans and other millionaires were to follow their example, they would soon obtain the rest of soul that they cannot get by the expenditure of their millions."

The author of "If I Were God" was disinclined to speak further of his plans, and referred the interviewer to Mrs. Le Gallienne III., who formerly was the wife of Roland H. Perry, American sculptor. Her daughter, Gwendolin, was with her and is going to tramp and camp by the roadside with her mother and the poet.

Mrs. Le Gallienne said that as soon as they arrived in Marseilles they would put on comfortable shoes and suitable clothing, carry knapsacks on their backs and begin a tramp of 450 miles to Paris.

NORWOOD'S JOB AT STAKE.

Senator Is Attacked Before Governor Foss.

That Charles Augustus Norwood of Hamilton is also holding a position as special justice of the Third Essex Police Court at Ipswich, in violation of the State Constitution is charged in a statement made to Governor Foss.

The Governor is expected to act on the matter this week. It is believed that he will ask Senator Norwood to resign from one of his two positions.

Senator Norwood has been special justice of the Third Essex Police Court since 1908. While holding this office in 1911 and 1912, he also served in the House of Representatives. He is now serving his first term in the Senate.

SUTCLIFFE DIVORCE SUIT.

Daughter of E. H. Gary Petitions for Decree.

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—Mrs. W. W. Sutcliffe, daughter of E. H. Gary, chairman of the board of directors of the U. S. Steel Corporation, has sued her husband for divorce. The suit is on file at Wheaton, Ill., Mrs. Sutcliffe's home. Desertion is the ground named in the petition. No alimony is asked.

According to her attorney the Sutcliffes separated two years ago on account of incompatibility of temperament. They were married about twenty years ago and have one child, a son nineteen years old.

LOAN FOR COPLEY SQUARE.

Mayor Prepares First Order in Beautifying Plan.

Mayor Fitzgerald will send to the City Council tomorrow a loan order for $45,000 to provide for the preliminary work of beautifying Copley Square according to the plans by Architect Frank A. Bourne which have been approved by the Art Commission.

The total estimate for relaying and beautifying the square is $200,000. This provides for a central monument or shaft to cost in the vicinity of $50,000. As there is strong opposition to the plan, the City Council will probably grant a public hearing.

GRAFTS PIG SKIN ON MAN.

Ohio Surgeon Uses Three Square Feet of Cuticle.

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio, Jan. 4.—Three square feet of pig skin was grafted on the chest and right shoulder of Clyde Rich, twenty, in an effort to save his life today.

Rich was severely burned by electricity in an explosion in New York city four months ago. He has been in a number of hospitals, and his recovery has been declared impossible several times.

The operation was performed by Dr. Harry Silver at his home here, and it is thought to have been successful.

ELOPES IN BALL COSTUME.

Dorothy Fosdick Astonishes Coast Artillery Dancers.

STAMFORD, Ct., Jan. 4.—Miss Dorothy Fosdick, aged twenty, adopted daughter of Robert A. Fosdick, a wealthy lawyer and former city official, and possessed in her own right of a fortune, has always been doing dashing things, but her impromptu elopement in a ballroom costume with Harold Doty, son of F. W. Doty of New York, took her friends by surprise. The elopement took place after a little supper following the ball of the Seventh Company, Coast Artillery, C. N. G.

BROOKLINE YALE BOY IN AUTO ESCAPADE

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., Jan. 4.—A somewhat sensational escapade resulted early today in the arrest of three Yale students, among them one who said he was Cyril Walter Bigelow, of Brookline, Mass., and claimed relationship with Poultney Bigelow, the author. Bigelow, together with Elias Howard Alofsin, a junior, son of Hermann Alofsin of Norwich, and Vincent Deich, a former student from Ohio, were visiting the resort district here and borrowed the taxicab of Edward Brown and attempted to go to New York.

Chased by the owner and four Bridgeport officers, the party was captured at the point of drawn revolvers by the police in Norwalk, where all gave fictitious names. Taken to Bridgeport afterward, they were held on a charge of theft under bonds of $300 each to await trial January 7. Damage to the car, resulting from collisions with sign posts along the road, is estimated at $250.

The party was accompanied to Bridgeport by Henry D. Cowles, Jr., son of the former chief of police of New Haven, who left before the automobile was taken. Cowles afterward helped get bail for the students.

HELD UP MAN; GOT 57 CENTS

Albert Chamberlain of No. 167 Washington street, Lynn, and David Coleman of No. 58 Covelly street, Lynn, arrived in their home city last night on a freight. Both lads are less than fifteen years old and were arrested for running away from home. At the police station the boys confessed that when they ran away they held up a junk man in the Ipswich woods with a revolver with blank cartridges and got fifty-seven cents.

Orchestra Is Instructed to Play No Music to Tempt Anyone.

BOSTON society has triumphed over the "Turkey Trot."

The issue was sharply drawn at the most exclusive dance of the season, the Assembly, at the Copley-Plaza. The insidious "Turkey Trot" and its allied measures, despite its appeal to the younger and more vivacious element, was rigidly suppressed.

In fact, it was officially tabooed.

This the more conservative leaders, who cling to the cherished ideals and the unswerving standard, endorse the example of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish at Newport, of Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge at the recent debut of her grandniece, Miss Constance Gardner, at the Copley-Plaza, in barring the "Turkey Trot," and of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson in announcing that such dances will not be permitted in the White House.

Iron Rule Bars Turkey Trot.

The victory which the conservative ones achieved at the assembly is all the more marked because it was only by the firmest authority that some were prevented from "Turkey-trotting."

The patronesses had ruled in advance that this dance was not to be permitted.

S. Hooper-Hooper, who had direct charge of the assembly arrangements, issued instructions that the "Turkey Trot" positively must not be danced.

Mr. Hooper-Hooper even went to the pains of having trusted lieutenants stationed at vantage points to bring him reports of infringement of the rule.

Some of the more irrepressible guests, who perhaps thought the order was in the nature of a "dare," tried to indulge in the forbidden dance. Invariably they were notified they must cease, that the Assembly would not permit that dance.

Protests were futile. Some of the dancers, who see no harm in the "Turkey Trot," or who think Boston is too straitlaced, left early. The number of those who left for this reason is put as high as 150 out of the 700 guests present.

The determination which Mr. Hooper-Hooper exercised was shown when he instructed the orchestra not to play music

AUTO HITS MOVING TRAIN.

Machine Smashed but Driver Escapes Injury.

Ralph Preble, a chauffeur, while driving a limousine through Melrose yesterday, was unable to stop his automobile, and the machine crashed through the gates at the West Foster street crossing of the Boston & Maine Railroad, collided with a moving train, smashed the machine. He escaped without injury. He was driving slowly to the garage. When he approached the gates he applied the brakes and the emergency brakes also, but they refused to work.

MORE OIL INTRIGUES REVEALED TO CLAPP COMMITTEE IN NEW LETTERS GIVEN BY MR. HEARST

Missives Ordered Into Records and Archbold Will Likely Be Recalled to Explain Under a Gruelling Examination the Meaning of Veiled Passages; Bailey and Several Others are Brought in the Light

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Another chapter in the history of the efforts of the Standard Oil crowd to control legislation of Congress and debauch members of the Senate and House through the liberal use of its enormous corruption fund, was written today when the Clapp committee investigating the relationship of the Standard Oil Company to public men directed that copies of all letters submitted by William Randolph Hearst be printed as a part of the records of the hearings that have been held.

When Mr. Hearst was before the committee December 17 he submitted letters bearing upon the subject of his evidence and trafficked at length concerning them. Mr. Hearst then volunteered the statement that he had other letters and at the request of the committee he promised to send them to Washington. These letters subsequently were considered in executive session.

A casual scrutiny of them convinced the committee that despite the fact some of them appeared to be vague, they were of sufficient importance to justify being given official publicity. Accordingly Chairman Clapp called a meeting for this afternoon at which all the letters were laid before the newspaper men and copies ordered to be inserted in the official records.

As a result of an executive session it is probable that John D. Archbold may be recalled before the committee.

Some of the letters submitted by Mr. Hearst were those written by the vice-president of the Standard Oil Company. In a few instances, while their meaning is plain, the statements are couched in language intended to be vague, and the committee wishes to know what the subject matter is to which they refer. Copies of these letters will be sent to Mr. Archbold and he will be requested to send his explanations to the committee. If Mr. Archbold does not do this he will be summoned as a witness.

With a view to following every clew that has been suggested, the committee directed that a summons be issued for Willie W. Winkler and Charles Stoup, two colored boys, who, Fowler says, abstracted the letters from the Archbold files.

Senator Clapp and his associates believe there is much beyond these letters that Archbold can make clear. They will insist that he explain so that the country may know just how far the scheming of Standard Oil went toward controlling men and public affairs. If Archbold again takes the stand, members of the committee, in the light of information submitted today by Mr. Hearst, will conduct him through a cross examination that will be more gruelling than anything this Standard Oil magnate has yet experienced.

Letters Made Public.

The letters today made public by the committee follow:

Feb. 13, 1900.

My Dear Sir:

I am very sorry indeed to have missed your call on Saturday. On receipt of your favor of the eighth, which indicated that you might come on Monday, I immediately wrote you, telling you that I would not be here on Monday as it was a holiday. I do not usually come to Boston on Saturday, and as no suggestion was made of your calling then I did not advise. I am very sorry.

I will, of course, be glad to see you any day except Saturday.

I am contemplating a little absence of ten days or two weeks, to leave here possibly a week from now.

Very truly yours,
JOHN D. ARCHBOLD.

Hon. J. L. McLaurin,
Washington, D. C.

Dec. 12, 1901.

My dear Senator: I have your kind favor of yesterday. WE HAVE OF COURSE NOTED YOUR RECENT DISAGREEMENT WITH EVIDENCE WITH THE UTMOST INTEREST. Think you have done just right in not being goaded by him into doing a foolish thing.

I am very greatly interested in the suggestion of the law practice, and will see to it that it is kept in mind, with the hope that something may develop in which I can be of service to you in connection therewith. With kind regards, I am,

Very truly yours,
JOHN D. ARCHBOLD.

Hon. John L. McLaurin,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.

My Dear Mr. Bibley:

I duly received your favor of the 4th and herewith return you Senator McLaurin's very interesting letters. I wrote Senator McL. some days ago ex-

TO ASK ROCKEFELLER ABOUT COPPER DEAL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Whether William Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnate, shall apologize to the House of Representatives for flouting it, will probably simmer down to an inquiry as to how ill he may be on the day he is expected to testify before the Pujo committee.

It is feared that Mr. Rockefeller, after defying for nearly two months the power of the House of Representatives and of the United States, may in the end escape from testifying in the money trust investigation on a plea of ill health.

At its meeting today to consider the Rockefeller case the Pujo committee took no definite action, but decided to wait until January 13, when, according to the subpoena, he is to come to Washington.

Mr. Untermyer is exceedingly anxious to quiz Mr. Rockefeller concerning a deal in Amalgamated Copper, put through in 1902, in which it is declared a profit of $30,000,000 was divided between Mr. Rockefeller, the late H. H. Rogers, Thomas W. Lawson and Albert C. Burrage, a Boston multi-millionaire. The committee also desires to go into a 1907 Rockefeller-Rogers conference.

Mr. Rockefeller is not the only Standard Oil official, employe or associate who has dodged subpoenas. Efforts have been made unavailingly to serve Thomas W. Lawson, Albert C. Burrage and certain Standard Oil employes.

IF DEMOCRATS SAY THE WORD PEOPLE WILL NAME U. S. SENATOR

DEMOCRATIC leaders were making ready last night to insist that Democrats in the Massachusetts Legislature shall go into a caucus, nominate a Democrat for the United States Senate to succeed Mr. Crane, and loyally vote for this Democrat on every ballot from on and after Thursday, the 16th day of January.

In this manner, these leading Democrats said, an election by the Legislature will be impossible.

In the meantime, the Legislature can pass a bill providing for the election of a United States Senator by the people, and such a popular election can speedily be held.

Such, last night, was the program of many Massachusetts Democrats who are Democrats 365 days in the year, Democrats after election as well as before election, and Democrats from principle.

Republicans who heard about the plan told reporters for the American that it is "ridiculous."

Some of these Republicans said that they had heard, or had read, the inaugural of Governor Foss with considerable interest. They thought the Foss paper, on the whole, a really statesmanlike document. In the matter of the United States senatorship, however, these Republicans said, they will be compelled to part company with the Governor of Massachusetts and cling fast to the law of the United States of America, touching on and appertaining to the "Election of United States Senators."

What the Law Says.

This Federal law provides, in part, that:

At 12 o'clock meridian on the day following that on which proceedings are required to take place as aforesaid, the members of each house shall convene in joint assembly, and the journal of each house shall then be read, and if the same person has received a majority of all the votes in each house, he shall be declared duly elected Senator.

But if the same person has not received a majority of the votes in each house, or if either house has failed to take proceedings as required by this section, the joint assembly shall then proceed to chose, by a viva voce vote of each member present, a person for Senator and the person who receives a majority of all the votes of the joint assembly, a majority of all the members of both houses being present and voting, shall be declared duly elected.

IF NO PERSON RECEIVES SUCH MAJORITY ON THE FIRST DAY, THE JOINT ASSEMBLY SHALL MEET AT TWELVE O'CLOCK MERIDIAN OF EACH SUCCEEDING DAY DURING THE SESSION OF THE LEGISLATURE, AND SHALL TAKE AT LEAST ONE VOTE, UNTIL A SENATOR IS ELECTED.

The Republicans have a majority of fifty-one votes in joint convention. The Republican managers say that a Republican will be elected to the United States Senate within three or four days, at the longest.

Democrats—real Democrats—hold this to be impossible. They say the Republican machine candidates are Weeks, McCall and Draper, while the anti-machine candidates are Curtis Guild and William B. Plunkett.

"Machine" Lacks Majority.

These real Democrats believe that a majority of the Republican members of the Legislature will not go into a Republican caucus, hence that there can be no simon-pure Republican caucus candidate, and that the election will be delayed from day to day for the good reason that no machine candidate will ever have a majority vote of the Legislature in joint convention.

If these Democrats are right, Curtis Guild and William B. Plunkett must now control, between them, at least fifty-one votes, equivalent to the Republican majority in the Legislature. Men close to the State Committee or Republican machine, say this is nonsense.

These Republican leaders, moreover, declare that there will be a Republican caucus, that the caucus will pick a Republican candidate, and that every Republican who expects to remain in the Republican party will vote for this candidate or take the political consequences.

So stands the Massachusetts senatorial contest ten days before House and Senate take their first vote separately.

It is undeniable that many Democrats in the Legislature are opposed to holding a Democratic caucus. These Democrats would like to be free to vote for the Republican they "like the best."

One Democratic Hope.

A Democratic caucus will undoubtedly nominate Mayor Fitzgerald for the Senate. It is not expected that the Mayor will or can be elected by the Legislature.

The one hope of the Democrats behind the caucus plan is to postpone an election by the Legislature, to the end that a Senatorial election bill may be passed and Mr. Crane's successor chosen by the people of Massachusetts.

Such a plan is possible only if the Republican organization is so powerless that it cannot get Weeks and McCall and Draper into one room, after a ballot of two, and, having ascertained that among them they have pledges enough to elect, induce two of them to step aside.

The program of the Democratic statesmen here referred to is simplicity itself. They want the people to rule.

There are Democrats in the Legislature who say they would thank these statesmen to let them alone, to the end that Democratic Legislators may use their "best individual judgment."

There are indications, in fact, that the pussiest-footed pussy-foot campaign in the history of pussy-foots is about to put on hob-nailed boots and make a loud noise.

After several weeks of the whispered round-up and the sub-cellar conference, in other words, the Senatorial fight is about to be pulled out into the open by its long ears.

MUST TURN IN TIME CARDS AT HARVARD

Professors With "Nothing to Do Till Tomorrow" to Give Accounting.

Time flies—but not at Harvard, unless an accounting is given of it by the professors and instructors at the university.

When "Tad" created the famous "nothing to do till tomorrow" cartoon, he overlooked the Harvard professors and instructors who must give an accounting of every moment of their time.

Comptroller Taylor has furnished them with lists containing spaces for reports on the FEW following questions:

The number of hours spent in actual instruction.

The number of hours spent in preparation for each lecture or recitation.

The number of hours spent in conferences with students; in the various branches of collegiate administration; in personal research work; correcting examination papers.

And ninety-three more items.

It doesn't say whether or not all these hours of work are to be crowded into one day.

And the reason for it all is stated in the following letter sent to the instructors and professors by the college office:

In line with changes and improvements of known success and efficiency made in the general accounting system of the university, the college has decided to take up a cost-accounting as a further aid to the administrative understanding of the numerous elements of expense which form the cost of instruction.

For the proper grouping and allocation of such costs, a considerable amount of ancillary data derived from various sources is essential. Data to be used as a basis for pro-rating salaries to the various classified functions are sought by means of the enclosed schedule, which is accompanied by an explanatory set of instructions.

Your co-operation in filling out this schedule and in returning the same to this office prior to March 1, 1913, is respectfully invited.

WOULD ABRITRATE CANAL.

Taft Willing to Submit Panama Tolls for Decision.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—In a speech at the luncheon of the International Peace Forum, President Taft made the statement that if the dispute in the matter of the Panama Canal tolls were not settled by diplomacy, he would be willing to submit the treaty to arbitration.

"This is just the time," he said, "when I am in favor of arbitration. It is the time when we are afraid we might not win that tests our faith in arbitration."

Gov. Wilson Sorry He Isn't an Architect

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 4.—President-elect Wilson worked away in his study for five hours on letters and documents of state today, and then swung out into the open air for a brisk hour's exercise. He was not disturbed by callers throughout today and seemed relieved that he had been able to do a little quiet research work by himself.

The Governor walked vigorously. He stopped here and there to greet friends, called at the postoffice to mail some letters, and hiked to the outskirts of the town. On the way back, he directed his course through the university over which for so many years he had presided. It was apparent that the old scenes were very dear to him.

"How I wish I had been an architect," he exclaimed once as he cast his eye over the beautiful architectural scheme of the university, and to be unparalleled on this side of the ocean.

"That is native stone over there," he said as he pointed with his cane to Cuyler Hall, being erected in memory of Cornelius C. Cuyler, '79, a classmate of Governor Wilson, killed in an automobile accident in France two years ago. The President-elect explained the construction and purposes of all the buildings to the correspondents who walked with him.

"It has been said that the buildings of Princeton are planned for fifty years ahead," one of the correspondents remarked.

"Yes," replied the Governor, "that's true, as I helped plan them myself."

On the way home the Governor dropped in at a hardware store. He insisted that the other patrons be waited on ahead of him. Then he bought a ball of twine for household use, tried it to see if it was strong, and continued his journey.

Tomorrow the President-elect will spend at home.

$25,000 ALIENATION SUIT UP TOMORROW

Rev. W. B. Ayers of Wollaston Charged by C. A. Boynton With Stealing Wife's Love.

The trial of the $25,000 alienation suit of Chester A. Boynton of Revere against the Rev. William B. Ayers, pastor of the Park and Downs Congregational Church of Wollaston, is to begin in the Suffolk Superior Court tomorrow, it became known last night. In the suit Boynton, who was formerly assistant treasurer of the church, alleges that the affection of his wife, Mrs. Helen Boynton, was alienated by the pastor. The filing of the suit caused a stir in church circles throughout the State and resulted in a split in the Wollaston congregation.

Refer to Former Charges.

About the same time that the church leaders learned of the setting of the date for the trial, news reached them of a letter to Boynton's friends from the Suffolk South Association of Congregational Ministers, in which both the pastor and Rev. Dr. Asbor Anderson, secretary of the National Council of Congregational Ministers and defender of Rev. Mr. Ayers, are mentioned.

The letter, which is signed by E. H. Byington, secretary of the Suffolk South Association, makes the statement that the association is in no way responsible for anything Dr. Anderson has said in defence of the accused clergyman.

The letter refers to the church trial of Rev. Mr. Ayers on charges brought by Boynton's friends a year ago. The association declares that enough was proved at the hearing to cause the council of ministers to take the "unusual step of putting the pastor under the supervision of a committee of ministers."

Defended by Dr. Anderson.

Rev. Dr. Anderson spoke at a meeting of the Park and Downs Church last Fall, at which the pastor's friends—forming the majority of the congregation—declared the accused clergyman was exonerated of all charges made against him. Dr. Anderson read a statement declaring all the charges unfounded and false. During the reading of this many women in the church wept. By its vote the congregation showed its belief in the innocence of Rev. Mr. Ayers, whose friends, always said he was a victim of "enemies."

The letter from the Suffolk South ministers is addressed to "The petitioners of the Park and Downs Church." It reads in part as follows:

What Ministers Say.

You state that the defendant has been made aware of proceedings of the association which have not been given out. This is simply due to the fact that he is himself a member of the association and as such has a right to be present at all its meetings, hear all its discussions and know its actions. As for his counsel, Dr. Anderson, this association is in no way responsible for any utterances made by him subsequent to the hearings.

While the most serious charges against Mr. Ayers were not established, and we did not feel justified in removing him from our membership, enough was established to lead us to say plainly in the statement we issued that we "disapprove of certain things he has said and done." Enough was established to lead us to take the unusual step of continuing him with "supervision," as appears clearly in our statement, a "supervision" not legal but "friendly," as should be among Christian brethren, but nevertheless a "supervision." The statement we issued was in some ways a vindication of him, and in some ways a vindication of you; and we do not see how any fair-minded person can view it otherwise. A period of "supervision" was adopted that Mr. Ayers might be given a chance to show that he would refrain from repeating the words and deeds of which we disapproved.

Only ten days remain for the candidates in the AMERICAN'S $40,000 contest to compete for the special automobile prize offered.

Here is the New Year's offer:

First—A special vote bonus will be given for each subscription turned in during the two weeks beginning Wednesday, January 1 and ending Wednesday, January 15, at 10 p. m., as follows:

| Sub. term. | Regular value. | Bonus value. | Total |
|---|---|---|---|
| 6 months | 1500 votes | 750 | 2250 |
| 12 months | 3500 votes | 1750 | 5250 |
| 36 months | 7500 votes | 3750 | 11250 |

Second—A four-cylinder "Little" runabout automobile will be given free to the candidate who polls the highest vote BY SUBSCRIPTION between Wednesday, January 1 and Wednesday, January 15, at 10 p. m.

Subscriptions tell the story and it will be a pleasant one for the fortunate winner of this handsome four-cylinder "Little" runabout.

See the Car Yourself.

After 10 o'clock tomorrow morning this automobile will be on display at the Contest Headquarters, at No. 5 Winthrop square. This arrangement has been made for your benefit, candidates, so come in and look this car over, see for yourself just what this big special prize is and then—go out and earn it with your subscriptions before January 15 at 10 p. m.

It is not often that one has an opportunity to earn a beautiful automobile as a result of ten days' effort, but that is just what will happen in this case.

By rounding up subscriptions from friends, relatives and even acquaintances some candidate will have earned the right to drive this beautiful automobile away from the Contest Headquarters free, clear and unencumbered.

And there is no string, or priviso, or other condition than the simple one of SUBSCRIPTIONS—the one polling the highest vote BY SUBSCRIPTION gets the car.

Make Most of Your Time.

Candidates must not forget while working for this special automobile prize that they are also working for a better standing in the great $40,000 prize list.

The end, the grand finale is in sight—the big contest ending on February 28, only a comparatively few weeks from now.

It is no time for inactivity, no time for dilly-dallying. It is a time for action, SUBSCRIPTION action and plenty of it from now until the finish.

The golden prize-winning subscription days are slipping by, candidates. Don't fail to make the most of them.

EUROPE FOR USHERS AT WEDDING? NO!

Leslie Herrick's Bridal Aids Deny Story They Were to Go on Honeymoon Trip.

Charles Thompson, "Tom" Riley, William Brennahan and "Dan" Cuthbert, Lynn shoe salesmen and chums of G. Leslie Herrick of Chicago, formerly of Lynn, are earnestly explaining to all home friends that being ushers at Herrick's wedding doesn't mean a trip to Europe with the bridal couple.

G. Leslie Herrick, now the Chicago representative of his father's concern, the Herrick Shoe Company, was married to Miss Ida Burns of the North Shore set in Chicago. The wedding took place last Saturday in the North Shore Baptist Church, Chicago.

The ushers were five of Herrick's friends, fellow traveling men in the shoe trade. The four Lynn men given above and Michael Rosenthal of New York composed the quintette.

Last Monday a Chicago paper printed a story that as result of a bet made on the first one married, Herrick was to take his five ushers abroad when he and his bride returned from a Southern honeymoon.

Lynn folks could hardly wait for "Tom," "Dan," "Charley" and "Bill" to get back home. Some of the girls said: "That's a horrid mean trick, for those fellows to think they'll be wanted on a trip to Europe with Mr. Herrick and his bride."

Some of the fellows in Lynn allowed that marriage is expensive enough without taking all the ushers abroad, better no ushers than that.

But "Tom" Riley stopped all the chatter last night when he said:

"There's nothing to that trip-to-Europe story. It's a joke by some Chicago reporter. We were ushers at the wedding all right, but there's no trip abroad for us. The only trips we get are hustling on the road. I wonder if Herrick has heard about it yet."

LIGHTSHIP IS SAFE.

Outrode the Gale at Nantucket and Is O. K.

NEWPORT, Jan. 4.—The Nantucket Shoals lightship, No. 85, is reported safe. It was feared for a time that the lightship had been lost in the heavy gale of Friday night.

A message received late this afternoon read: "We are all right. Rode out the gale in good style."

Another Langhorne Romance Is Broken
Phyllis and "Reggy" Brooks Are Separated

Society Hears One of Beautiful Sisters and Husband Have Parted.

In the homes of North Shore and Newport society colonists the chief gossip last night was the news of the shattered romance of Mr. and Mrs. "Reggy" Brooks of New York and Newport. The story which came from a Virginia town that the couple had signed articles of separation was discussed with all the more zest from the fact that the rift in the second in the married lives of the five Langhorne sisters, famous for their beauty on two continents.

Mrs. Brooks is the fourth of the "Langhorne Graces." The third daughter was Nannie Langhorne, whose marriage to Robert Gould Shaw, 2d, of Boston and Hamilton was a society event. The troubles of the Shaws and their divorce, followed by the marriage of the accomplished Mrs. Shaw to Waldorf Astor made a big sensation seven years ago.

Phyllis Married Well.

Mrs. Brooks was Phyllis Langhorne, daughter of Colonel Langhorne of Virginia. Like each of her sisters, she married "well." Her friends until yesterday believed hers happily married. Besides Mrs. Astor, Mrs. Brooks' sisters are Mrs. T. Moncure Perkins of Richmond and New York, Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, wife of the artist, and Mrs. Paul Phipps of London.

The winning of Phyllis Langhorne eight years ago was romantic. She was athletic, talented and beautiful. No girl in Virginia could ride behind the hounds better than she. As a horsewoman, in fact, she had few equals in the country. When she made her debut she was called the "Gibson girl's sister." Her coming-out party, engagement and wedding, like those of each of her sisters, was talked of far and wide.

Brooks, the Winning Suitor.

"Reggy" Brooks was only one of many suitors. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mortimer Brooks of Rockhurst villa, Newport. Among those at the wedding were Brooks' sisters, Mrs. Eugene V. R. Thayer of Boston and Lancaster and Mrs. John R. Livermore of New York.

Last night it was reported the couple had been separated for some time, the wife living at Meudon, N. Y., on an estate given her by her father, and her husband living in a cottage on the mountainside overlooking his wife's abode.

Mrs. Brooks is now only thirty-three, and is as charming as ever. Invariably she spends the Winter months at Mirador, where she maintains a stable of hunting horses.

She is fond of riding to hounds with members of the Albemarle Hunt Club in Virginia. Last season her hunters, Castleman and Tom Brown, were winners in several horse shows in Virginia.

According to the articles of separation Mrs. Brooks will receive a settlement of $12,000 a year and the custody of her two children. Mr. Brooks will be permitted to see the children whenever he desires.

Crushed to Death at Sullivan Square

Scores of people at the Sullivan Square Terminal of the Boston Elevated Railroad were shocked when an unidentified man was ground to pieces under the wheels of a train that rolled into the station about 7 o'clock last night.

No one knows how the man came to be under the wheels. He may have intended suicide. He may have fallen under a car accidentally. No one could be found who saw him alive.

The tragedy took place on the upper level. The trainmen's first hint that anything was wrong was when a bumping was felt in the cars. They investigated, and the body of the man was discovered.

IDEA! TURKEY TROT IN THE Y. M. C. A.

Basketball Was Neglected at Taunton and They Even Had the Bunny Hug.

TAUNTON, Jan. 4.—There were out-of-town visitors at the Y. M. C. A. building the other day, some with whiskers, some wearing white lawn ties, and all extremely dignified, when a troop of bright, clean, alert-looking youngsters marched quietly into the building and headed in a most orderly manner for the gymnasium.

"Boys from the high school," one of the Y. M. C. A. officials explained to the distinguished strangers. "They have a remarkably fast basketball team, and we are glad to have them practise in the gym. It is good to have them here, under exactly the right influence."

"Looks like a rather large crowd for a basketball team," one of the visitors said, and it was explained that the players usually brought some friends along.

Nothing more was heard from the schoolboys for twenty minutes, then there was music in the air.

It was catchy music. It made you want to move around a little. There was a touch of "We rowed, we rowed we rowed right up the river."

"Why," said one, "it's RAG, and in the Y. M. C. A."

Instead of the neglected basketball, the boys were throwing their shoulders up. They were practicing the Turkey Trot, the Worm Wiggle, the Bunny Hug and other combinations.

Word has gone forth that the cancelling of all games of the Taunton High basketball team for one month is due to the illness of two indispensable players.

The fact is said to be as above set forth. Everybody has been suspended for a month and the naughty piano in the Y. M. C. A. gym is not only covered, but locked.

"FIRED" WHOLE FORCE.

Stranger from New York Told Workmen to Quit Work.

"Lay down your picks and shovels," he commanded. "You're no good. Get out. You're fired. Call around to the office and get your pay."

Foreman Valley called Patrolmen Cummings and Downey, who took the stranger before Chief Kendall. The stranger said his name was Max Steenson of No. 537 West Fifty-fifth street, New York. He said Mayor Gaynor had heard that the work being done in Medford street was poor and had sent him over to take charge of the job. A Lincoln penny and a bunch of keys were found on him. He was held for observation.

HATPIN IN INAUGURAL.

Mayor Hickey of Brockton Urged to Demand Shorter Pins.

BROCKTON, Jan. 4.—Mayor-Elect Charles M. Hickey may champion the crusade started here by the women for shorter hatpins. The Mayor-elect, while putting the finishing touches on his inaugural, was visited by an ardent anti-hatpin woman and promised to consider the question later.

"JOAN OF ARC" WILL LEAD SUFFRAGISTS

Police Order Barring Them from Pennsylvania Avenue Stirs Protest.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—The brilliant Suffragists' parade planned for March 3, will be shorn of a great deal of its glory by the declination of the police department to allow the ladies to march on Pennsylvania avenue.

The Suffragists are infinitely mad about this order and they will try to have it revoked. They are not satisfied with a proposed compromise that they parade on Sixteenth street. This is a magnificent thoroughfare, but it is not Pennsylvania avenue, which men have used for years when they wanted to show themselves to best advantage. The police department thinks that on March 3 Pennsylvania avenue will be crowded with arriving contingents of sightseers, military and civic bodies, etc.

It was announced today at headquarters that a woman clad in full armor, riding as a charger, would represent Joan of Arc in the parade. Probably Mrs. Richard E. Burleson, wife of Lieutenant Burleson of the Third Field Artillery, stationed at Fort Myer, will be the Joan of Arc on this occasion. It is understood, however, that Mrs. Burleson is being considered also as marshal of the parade, and it may be that some one else must play the part of Joan.

Word has been received that four of the most prominent suffrage workers in the country have signified their intention of taking part in the parade. These are Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt of New York, president of the International Suffrage Association; the Rev. Dr. Anna Shaw of New York, president of the National Association for Woman's Suffrage; Miss Jane Addams of Chicago, and Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, also of New York, auditor of the National Association for Women Suffrage.

Mrs. Richard Y. FitzGerald of Boston, recording secretary of the National Association, is also coming to take part in the pageant if she can reach the city on that day. The committee hopes to have the presidents of the various State organizations here.

IDENTIFY METHUEN BODY.

Former Mill Employe Believed to Be Suicide.

METHUEN, Jan. 5.—The body of the young man found in a field off Brown street by some boys yesterday morning was identified as that of William Bedford, a former resident and employe of the Arlington Mills. It is believed he committed suicide by shooting.

The police are searching the town for his sister, who is thought to be living here. He was about twenty years old, and had left Methuen three years ago. The identification was made by some of his former fellow-workers.

FRUIT MEN DENOUNCE NEW HAVEN METHODS

Declare Conditions Have Grown Worse During Last Five Years.

The New Haven system was sharply scored yesterday in a report submitted by the transportation committee of the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange at the annual meeting of the Exchange.

The salient features of this report were:

That conditions on the Boston & Maine Railroad and other New Haven lines have grown from bad to worse during the five years of New Haven control.

That if the New Haven does not see fit to deal properly with Boston and New England interests it would seem only reasonable to insist that the management of the Boston & Maine should be placed in the hands of New England men, who would consider the interests of New England as paramount to those of New York.

Get This For Colds

Prescription for Positive Results—Don't Experiment.

"From your druggist get two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Globe Pine Compound (Concentrated Pine). Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Shake well. Take one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bed time. Smaller doses for children according to age. This is said to be the quickest cough and cold cure known to the medical profession. Be sure to get only the genuine Globe Pine Compound (Concentrated Pine). Each half ounce bottle comes in a tin screw-top sealed case. If your druggist is out of stock he will quickly get it from his wholesale house. Don't fool with uncertain mixtures. It is risky. Local druggists say that for the past six years this has had a wonderful demand. Published by the Globe Pharmaceutical Laboratories of Chicago. —Advertisement.

TURKEY TROT IS BARRED AT SOCIETY ASSEMBLY

The Boston society, at its dances of dances, excluded a step which, springing up since the 1912 assemblies, has caused more comment, vexation and youthful jubilation than any terpsichorean movement of modern times.

Seven Hundred Invited.

Another feature of this first Assembly of the 1913 season, but which passed into insignificance when the "Turkey Trot" issue arose, was the enlarged number of invitees, no less than seven hundred. As the Assembly has hitherto been restricted to four hundred, the more generous direction exercised by the patroness and by Mr. Hooper-Hooper and his associates was a topic of discussion as well in advance of the Assembly date.

According to the story which has developed since the Assembly ended early yesterday morning, the news of the anti-"Turkey Trot" edict was circulated about the Back Bay the first part of the week.

There was much discussion of the rule and such speculation as to how successfully it would be enforced if efforts were made to break it. The assembly began at 10:30 Friday night. The list of patronesses included the names of Mrs. Gorden Abbott, Mrs. Bryce J. Allanbin, Mrs. L. Agassiz, Mrs. Oliver Ames, 2d., Mrs. William Appleton, Mrs. Henry L. Burnham, Mrs. R. V. R. Crosby, Mrs. William C. Endicott, Mrs. Augustus P. Gardner, Mrs. Henry S. Hunnewell, Mrs. Guy Lowell, Mrs. Guy Norman, Mrs. Francis Peabody, Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, Mrs. Philip J. Sears, Mrs. Daniel Thayer, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, jr., Mrs. Roger Wolcott.

Such was the list, but a few were unable to attend on account of being in mourning.

The invitation list represented the wealth and culture of Boston and those residents of the North Shore and other localities who participate in Back Bay festivities.

Watch for the Uninvited.

Utmost care was taken that the hotel territory reserved for the assembly was not invaded, accidentally or otherwise, by any one not entitled to be there. Those not bringing their invitations—which, by the way, were $30 a couple—were requested to sign a book. These precautions were considered advisable on account of the unfortunate occurrence at a recent dance when a college boy obtained admission, later indulged indiscreetly in wine, and thereby brought a complaint from his father on the heads of the management.

There was dancing from 10:30 to 1 a. m., when supper was served in the tea room and main dining hall.

After supper the cotillion was danced, Mr. Hooper-Hooper leading with Mrs. Bryce J. Allan. At 3 a. m. a buffet lunch was served in the main dining room. Then there was a final round of dances until 4 a. m., when the first 1913 assembly was ended.

How They Pouted!

Some of the younger members were provoked when told they must not dance the forbidden measures. More than one girl pouted, and many a slippered foot tapped impatiently.

Many couples conged to defeat Mr. Hooper-Hooper by beginning the dance in corners of the ball room, but invariably Mr. Hooper-Hooper was informed and the "turkey-trotters" were positively told to desist.

MILEAGE? A HALF MILE IS 40 CENTS

All Aboard for Holbrook, Randolph and Stoughton, Cars Going South I Track 1.

For MILEAGE DE LUXE, commuters living in Holbrook, Randolph and Stoughton say their town is easily IT.

For a three-mile ride on the Bristol & Norfolk Street Railway the commuters in the three towns have to pay fifty cents.

For a half-mile ride over the same line in Randolph and Stoughton the commuters have to pay forty cents.

The commuters say it's the costliest mileage in New England. Not only that, but it's the highest mileage in America. And further than that, the commuters in the three towns say they could win the world's championship for hands down. They say, in talking of their protest to the State Railroad Commission about the mileage de luxe, that if they don't pay, their only recourse is to "heel and toe" it homeward.

Commuters Protested.

Lieutenant Caleb West of the Coast Artillery Corps, in bringing the matter formally to the notice of the Railroad Commissioners, declares the fare rates are "between the devil and the deep blue sea."

The de luxe rates were put into effect just before New Year's by the Bristol & Norfolk Street Railway Company. Commuters at once made a New Year's resolve to register a big "kick" on Beacon Hill. Here's the notice they got from the railway company:

Car connecting with 12:08 midnight train from Boston, fare will be collected as follows, viz.:

Holbrook to Mann's Corner, (Randolph) 10; Holbrook to North Stoughton Turnout 50.

Signed Bristol & Norfolk St. Ry. Co.

E. W Clapp, Supt.

The commuters, naturally enough, stood aghast. From Holbrook to the turnout mentioned is but three miles. That means an average of over thirteen cents a mile.

From Mann's Corner in Randolph to the turnout is only a half mile. That means the sum of forty cents for the one-half mile. As the commuters figure it up, a mile would cost them eighty cents. They say it has everything else they ever heard of "skun a mile."

Pike's Peak is Easier.

"Why," one commuter says, "over in Germany you can ride a mile on a Zeppelin airship for 8 cents.

"In Paris you can ride on the auto railway to Marseilles at the rate of ever less than that airship price.

"You can ride up Pike's Peak for far less. You can mount the tallest Alps for less. You can ride on the Twentieth Century Limited in state—aw, but what's the use! Even the Standard Oil Steamboat Company charges less for its ride to Pemberton and Nantasket.

"Certainly, we have the most costly owl car in the world."

Superintendent Clapp, when asked about it, replied:

"Don't say anything about this. We're going back to the old rate of twenty-five cents for the trip. You don't need to print anything about it in the paper."

TEACHERS SAIL FOR ROME.

To Study Montessari System of Child Education.

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 4.—Miss Clara E. Craig of Rhode Island Normal School, Miss Mary E. Gough of 657 Broadway, and Miss Sarah L. Kennedy of 540 Broadway, sailed for Rome yesterday as members of the first training course for American teachers given by Dr. Maria Montessori, whose system of child education has aroused wide interest. The class will include some of the best-known American teachers.

Miss Craig has been sent by the State, while Miss Gough and Miss Kennedy are taking the trip on their own initiative.

How to Cure Rheumatism

Prominent Doctor's Best Prescription Easily Mixed at Home.

This simple and harmless formula has worked wonders for all who have tried it, quickly curing chronic and acute rheumatism and backache. "From your druggist get one ounce of Toris compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them in a half pint of good whiskey. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful three times a day and at bed-time." Good results come after the first few doses. Your druggist does not have Toris compound in stock he will get it for you in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take a patent medicine instead of this. Insist on having the genuine Toris compound in the original, sealed, secured, yellow package. This was published here last winter and hundreds of the worst cases were cured by it in a short time. Around this page appear the pictures of the men and women who have planned this sale. Many of them have been in our employ ever since the store opened. Our confidence in them could not be more amply demonstrated than by our action in turning the management of this great six-day sale over to them. Naturally we're proud of them, for they have arranged a sale which, from a standpoint of value-giving, has never been equalled by this or any competing store. Each department vies with all the rest in the values it presents. The management has offered splendid inducements that make every effort worth while.

Most Amazing Evidence of Conspiracy to Control Legislation; Archbold to Explain.

pressing my great admiration for his wise and courageous course and saying to him that I would be very glad to confer with him at any time either in person or by letter. Of course, the situation now is entirely changed and the campaign will not be made at present. This is undoubtedly very favorable to Senator McL, as the trend of events is certainly tremendously in his favor. I am especially delighted this morning over Governor McSweney's reply to Tillman.

TILLMAN IS SO RANK A DEMAGOGUE, AND THE LOGIC OF EVENTS IS SO MUCH AGAINST HIM, THAT IF McLAURIN WOULD ONLY KEEP COOL, PERHAPS DOING A LITTLE JUDICIOUS NAGGING OCCASIONALLY, TILLMAN WILL HANG HIMSELF.

It would be the greatest possible mistake for McLaurin to lose his temper and be drawn into anything like a personal encounter with Tillman. It would be so far beneath his dignity personally, and would so injure the great step of progress which he has had the courage to undertake on behalf of his State and the South, that it would be almost a national misfortune.

Very truly yours,
JOHN D. ARCHBOLD.

Hon. J. C. Sibley, Franklin, Pa.

United States Senate:
Bennettsville, S. C., May 29, 1902.

Dear Mr. Archbold:—I have pursued my fight so vigorously that they called on Tillman. I met him at Gaffney and beat him at his own game. I called his bluff and now the fight is for two seats in the Senate instead of one. I CAN BEAT TILLMAN IF PROPERLY AND GENEROUSLY SUPPORTED. There is no time to lose, however. I enclose an account of both meetings for your information. With kindest regards, I am,

Yours sincerely,
JOHN L. McLAURIN.
January 13, 1902.

Dear Mr. Sibley:

I am duly in receipt of your favor of the 10th, in all of which we are much interested. We appreciate your courtesy in bringing any such matters to our attention, and value beyond expression your kind and friendly attitude.

With reference to our Ohio friend, our feelings are most cordial. AND WE WILL BE GLAD TO LEND A HAND IN A REASONABLE WAY. HOW WOULD IT DO FOR YOU TO SAY TO HIM THAT I SUGGEST HE SEE ME FOR A LITTLE TALK? IF THIS PROVES IMPOSSIBLE WITHIN THE NECESSARY TIME, HE CAN WRITE ME UNDER PERSONAL COVER AND I WILL ANSWER HIM PROMPTLY AND CONFIDENTIALLY.

I cannot learn that we or any of our people are taking or have taken any active interest in the New Jersey Senatorship matter. What you said to Mr. G. met the case thoroughly and we thank you very cordially for it.

OF COURSE, I AM VERY MUCH INTERESTED AS TO WHO YOUR "DARK HORSE" MAY BE AND IF YOU ARE IN A POSITION TO INTIMATE TO ME IN CONFIDENCE WHO IT IS, IT MAY BE POSSIBLE TO EXTEND SOME AID.

Heartily reciprocating your kind wishes for the New Year, I am,

Very truly yours,
JOHN D. ARCHBOLD.

Hon. J. D. McLaurin,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.

Yesterday, being holiday, did not receive your message until today. Have delayed answering; hope to see you. Glad to see you any day next week except Saturday.

J. D. ARCHBOLD.

Joseph C. Sibley, Chairman, Committee on Manufactures, House of Representatives, United States.
Washington, D. C., March 7, 1903.

My Dear M. A.—The illness of Mrs. Sibley has prevented my coming to New York. Senator B. was to have gone over with me. I think we will go anyway as he has business there.

I HAD A CONVERSATION WITH AN IMPORTANT "OFFICIAL" YESTERDAY, AND HE TOLD ME THERE WAS BUT ONE THING TO DO, AND THAT WAS TO START A "BACKFIRE" LIKE MYSELF, HE IS MUCH ALARMED AND AS AN OFFICIAL MEMBER OF THE REIGNING FAMILY HIS HAND AND TONGUE ARE TIED. HE THINKS THE WORK SHOULD BE DONE IN THE EDUCATION OF THE PUBLIC SENTIMENT, BETWEEN NOW AND THE MEETING OF CONGRESS IN OCTOBER, IF HAS. I THINK, BEEN DECIDED TO CONVENE CONGRESS IN EXTRA SESSION AT AT THAT TIME, THOUGH THE SPEAKER WILL TRY TO HAVE IT GO OVER UNTIL NOVEMBER IF HE CAN'T DO BETTER. I WILL KNOW IN A DAY OR TWO HOW HE SUCCEEDS. LONG (SENATOR) AND CURTIS (REPRESENTATIVE) ARE THE strong men in the Kansas delegation. I have explained matters to them and I think their influence will count some when they go home.

CAMPBELL IS A CLEVER BOY; HAS NO STRONG POINTS ON PLACE YET DEVELOPED; HE SEEKS NOTORIETY, BUT IS HAMMERS IN HIMSELF. This agitation is the language of another, "Started from the top," and will run its course. It is not a deep seated and profound conviction of wrong.

The one thing is to get delay until temperate action can be secured. We will recover from Lawsonitis if we get pure air for a while. I think the pendulum will swing to the other side after a while, but I don't want the d—— to pay before it gets back.

An efficient literary bureau is needed, not for a day, not a crisis, but a permanent and healthy control of Associated Press and kindred avenues. It will cost money, but will be the cheapest in the end and can be made self-supporting.

The next four years is more than any other epoch to determine the future of this country.

No man values public opinion or fears it so much as Roosevelt. He seeks popularity as much as he. Mild reproof or criticism of his policies would nearly paralyze him. Today he hears only the chorus of a rabble and he thinks it is public sentiment.

I don't know whether the industrial corporations and the transportation companies have enough at stake to justify a union of forces for concerted action. It seems to me necessary. I am in a position where I see both sides of the game and still think our friends play politics once in four years, while the other side play it all the time.

Sincerely yours,
SIBLEY.

"HIS FOREFEET IN THE TROUGH"

Henry Clay Pierce, president of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, testified in the ouster suit brought by Missouri against the company in September, 1906, to Bailey's money transactions with the Standard Oil Company. He told John P. Gruet, secretary of the Waters-Pierce Company, how along in 1899 he had taken Senator Bailey kindly by the hand, and, leading him over to the office of H. H. Rogers, had introduced him to the authorities of the Standard Oil Company, and that "THE SENATOR IMMEDIATELY PUT HIS FORE FEET IN THE TROUGH AND HAS KEPT THEM THERE EVER SINCE."

He also testified that LOANS WHICH HE HAD PERSONALLY MADE TO SENATOR BAILEY WERE AFTERWARD CHARGED TO THE OIL COMPANY AS LEGAL EXPENSES.

GROWS BEAUTIFUL, HEAVY HAIR WE PROVE IT—25 CENT "DANDERINE"

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance; freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will, you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp—Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower; destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

HEADACHY, CONSTIPATED, BILIOUS TAKE DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS"

Removes the scum from the tongue, sweetens a sour, gassy, bilious stomach; cleanses your liver and 30 feet of bowels without gripe or nausea.

If headachy, bilious, dizzy, tongue coated, stomach sour and full of gas, you belch undigested food and feel sick and miserable, it means that your liver is choked with sour bile and your thirty feet of bowels are clogged with effete waste matter not properly carried off. Constipation is worse than most folks believe. It means that this waste matter in the thirty feet of bowels decays into poisons, gases and acids, and that these poisons are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which should suck only nourishment to sustain the body.

Most people dread physic. They think of castor oil, salts and cathartic pills. They shrink from the after effects—so they postpone the dose until they get sick; then they do this liver and bowel cleansing in a heroic way—they have a bowel washday. That is all wrong. If you will take a teaspoonful of delicious Syrup of Figs tonight, you will never realize you have taken anything until morning, when all the poisonous matter, sour bile and clogged-in waste will be moved on and out of your system, thoroughly but gently—no griping—no nausea—no weakness. Taking Syrup of Figs is a real pleasure. Don't think you are drugging yourself; it is composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics, and constant use cannot cause injury.

Ask your druggist for "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," and look for the name, California Fig Syrup Company, on the label. This is the genuine—old reliable. Any other Fig Syrup offered as good should be refused with contempt. Don't be imposed upon.

BAILEY A DISASTER AND A DESOLATION TO HIS PARTY, SAYS LEWIS

By ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—With the boot of public opinion assisting him, Mr. Bailey has resigned and abandoned that seat in the Senate where he has so much smirched and disgraced himself. Mr. Hearst's exposures of Mr. Bailey's corrupt relations with Standard Oil have made it impossible for Mr. Bailey to remain. Naturally upon principle embalmed in the couplet which runs:

"No thief e'er felt the halter draw
With good opinion of the law"

Mr. Bailey doesn't like it. And because he doesn't, he it and because further he blames Mr. Hearst for his troubles, he—like a toad spitting venom—arose in his Senate place and assailed Mr. Hearst.

What Is Thought of Bailey.

To know a source is to know a fact. Who is Mr. Bailey? Mr. Bailey of Comanche county was in the Texas Legislature and gave his vote to Mr. Bailey for United States Senator. As he did so Mr. Gaines spoke feelingly and, come think, convincingly of Mr. Bailey. As showing what they think at home of our Senate Benedict Arnold read what Mr. Gaines said:

I am convinced beyond a reasonable doubt that Senator Bailey is substantially guilty of all the infamous conduct with which he is charged. In my own opinion Bailey is not only unworthy of the great office of Senator, but he is absolutely infamous. I regard him as I do any other criminal.

I cannot escape the conclusion that he is a traitor to his country who has betrayed his people into the hands of commercial pirates for gold. Left to vote my own sentiments, I would gladly defy all the minions of infamy and vote against him; but a man must live up to his ideals. My ideal of a good government is one in which the people's will is supreme.

I think it is better for a Representative to vote for a bad man, yes, a moral leper as I believe Bailey is, than to shatter an ideal of representative government, the obscenities of which is the home of the action, and break faith with his people.

Many Others in Agreement.

Having discharged with scrupulous fidelity my promise to our people I desire to take place for the future among those who despise and defy him.

Strong words, strong in courage and honesty.

And there was many another member whose heart echoed the Gaines sentiment and shared the Gaines feeling, but who —because also "instructed"—gave him his Bailey vote.

There are writers who make a specialty of the world until they seem to have taken a vow to speak ill of no one only of Mr. Bailey but every one else. How much more Christian to cultivate forbearance and a mildness of spirit!

Who would be a peevish Sir Peter Teazle and spit from there? Why be a damned wicked world, and the fewer we be, the better.

Sometimes I think those writer who so vigorously assail Mr. Bailey do him very much honor. Exaggerating his political importance, they draw much of their angry energy from fear, and these excited ones might with a safe propriety suspend two-thirds of their violence. Mr. Bailey is not the public peril they would think he is.

Consider the record. There is less in Mr. Bailey to flee from than to laugh at. In the House and Senate roundly twenty years he has strikingly done nothing.

Nowhere in the body of our laws are to be found so much as his predatory "touch" marks, whether for good or ill. Doubtless he might have evolved a measure and worked it in one line devil or leg station until he had beaten it into a statute; doubtless he has the intelligence, but if that be a fact he has lacked the impulse to do so.

Consider the Record.

I have watched Mr. Bailey from the gallery, and I cannot understand that impression of the tremendous in connection with him which in some quarters seems to obtain. What is he?

Nothing. What has he done? Nothing. Who will remember him a day beyond his Senate stepping down and out? No one.

And while there he has been as often laughed at as listened to.

Rightly tested, there is nothing in Mr. Bailey upon which to feed one's respectable alarm. He is a weak, vain, troubled, unhappy, unrespected man. His hour approaches him for the muddy morass wherewith he has worn it. One day he will die, and his epitaph be written: "He publicly came to nothing and privately came to grief."

True there are pressat in Mr. Bailey certain seeds of destruction. He cannot build; but now and then, when the world's back is turned he can tear down.

The beast is a cheap one. It will hardly save him from oblivion. Construction is the task difficult; destruction is easy. Even so poor a beast as a rat has been known with its vermin teeth to spoil a Ribeiro.

Let us step rearward to a Bailey beginning. He was born in 1865, in Capiah County in Mississippi." Mr. Bailey was bitterly poor and it is that youthful poverty, perhaps, which so promoted the yellow importance of money in his eyes that he has since been willing, trafficking with Standard Oil, to trade his honor for it!

An uncle helped Mr. Bailey gain an education, helped him with admission to the bar. Being admitted, he crossed over into Texas at the age of twenty-two, and settled in Gainesville, where he has ever since lived. Speaking of Mississippi, it is a Bailey boast that he, more than anyone else, is to be credited—or discredited—with having introduced the shotgun into Mississippi bayou politics.

Mr. Bailey had reached his twenty-eighth year when he was elected to the House of Representatives. This was in 1891. He broke upon Washington all awkwardness and vanity. No Narcissus was ever more deeply in love than himself.

It was then—fleeing for distinction—that in refusing an invitation to dine at the White House, Mr. Bailey took his position concerning evening clothes. In those, his present Senate days, Mr. Bailey no longer shies at evening clothes. He has been wearing them successfully for several seasons; and, so reconciled to their feel and look has he become, he no longer, when he would don them, has to be blindfolded and backed in.

In his earliest Congress Mr. Bailey in nowise ennobled himself. He talked politics—when the House would let him—which was?; often, for the campaign of 1892 was close at hand. He talked politics then, so he is talking politics even now—politics of that discouraging old world sort which Ben Butler had in mind when he said: "The Democratic party is like a man riding backwards in a carriage; it never sees a thing until it's by."

Regarded from party angles, Mr. Bailey was to his fees—limit a disaster and a desolation. He has been one ever since. It is the —aileys who for twenty years have been getting between the dull heels of Democracy and tripping them up.

While Mr. Bailey is sometimes a public disaster, he is never a public defeat. Nor does he, even for a moment, interrupt the march of history. He is too little; the country is too big; his evil effect is more imagined than suffered.

Doubtless the Baileys are adders and poison dwells in their fangs. But they are, when all is in, merely adders of an hour and their venom owns no immortality. They sting the heel of progress, to be ground beneath the heel of progress; after which progress goes limping on its way.

One doesn't like a Bailey in public life, just as one doesn't like a burglar in a hotel. And yet, while we are punishing our criminal colonists, one need not despair. The one real peril that belongs with folk of the dingy stripe of Mr. Bailey is the example they set others before whom they sometimes shine with the false lustre on a difficult coast. Should some misguided youngster be dazzled by what he might regard as Mr. Bailey's successes, set his wren-head course by him, that youngster would be the first to be scrolling on every manner of sunken dishonesty, every fashion of ignoble reef.

Rats As Disease Propagators

The public is beginning to realize that rats and mice are not only harmless nuisances, but dangerously fast at first water.

The investigations, by eminent medical authorities have placed the question that the Bubonic plague, and other fatal epidemic contagious diseases are the direct means of spreading the germs of these plagues, that terrible scourge which has cost thousands of lives.

The Government of the United States is early in the West Indies to keep the plague from spreading to this country by the way of ships from plague ports.

California has also outbreaks of bubonic plague, so it is necessary to use the greatest effort to rid the country of rats if we would reduce the possible chances of their coming in outbreak of epidemic.

If the people only took out to keep this pernicious race of rodents, it would soon be an easy matter to exterminate them. But so many people do nothing in this respect that their promises become breeding places for rats to inspect the places of those that are killed or driven away, making the work of extermination unnecessarily difficult.

If every person who was bothered with these pests would only sprinkle "Mason Rat and Mouse Powder" where they run, and get their neighbors to do the same, both the drug and department stores everywhere for 25c and $1.00; 3 and 10c extra by mail. Also different powders for other pests. Name kind when ordering.

TURKS GAIN DELAY IN FACE OF NEW WAR

Allies' Army Is Ready and the Turkish Fleet Skirmishes Off Dardanelles.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Bringing the peace negotiations to a halt at the crest of the crisis, the Turkish delegates pleaded this afternoon for more time to submit an answer to the Balkan ultimatum, and were granted until Monday.

War now seems inevitable unless the Turks appeal to the Powers for mediation. The Turkish delegates today, while asserting it would be necessary for them to get fresh instructions from Constantinople, let it be understood that they would not yield to the Allies' demand for the surrender of Adrianople.

Army Ready to Renew War.

Dr. Daneff, the chief Bulgarian delegate, said tonight:

We expect the Turks will be unable to give us acceptable conditions. The negotiations will then be broken off. We have an army which can continue the war. Of course, if the Turks wish to submit the matter to the Powers, we cannot prevent them from doing so.

Starvation at Adrianople.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—A dispatch from Sofia states that two officers escaped yesterday from Adrianople, and reported that the inhabitants were imploring the commandant to surrender the fortress. The officers themselves were in a famished condition. They described the conditions within the city as horrible.

Turkish Generals Want War.

BERLIN, Jan. 4.—A despatch from Constantinople, printed here, states that Izzeys Bey has sent a telegram to the government from Tchatilja, signed by twenty-five Turkish generals, demanding a resumption of hostilities.

PIETRO MASCAGNI, WHOSE OPERA IS CALLED SACRILEGE

RELIGIOUS PRESS SCORES MASCAGNI

Opera "Parisina" Sets to Music D'Annunzio's Story Located in Shrine of Loretto.

ROME, Jan. 4.—Signor Mascagni, returning to Rome this week, has been warmly welcomed by musical circles here, where, notwithstanding his erratic nature, the composer is still idolized. But the statement he makes about his forthcoming opera, "Parisina," has provoked a storm of protest from the religious press, which may impair the success of the work, wherein Mascagni has set a libretto by Gabriel D'Annunzio to music.

From Mascagni's description of the plot, it appears that D'Annunzio gives much cause for offense by setting the main love scene in the famous sanctuary of Loretto, which the angels are traditionally reported to have removed from Palestine to prevent its profanation by infidels.

The drama, which is essentially a poem of blood and passion, with a ghastly climax, is replete with D'Annunzio's warm sensuality, and religious opinion is outraged by the association of such a worldly story with Italy's holiest shrine.

As to the music, Maestro Mascagni says it is "exclusively melodic." So apparently, the composer has abandoned all attempts to follow such progressives as Debussy and Strauss, and has completely returned to his original inspirators—Bellini, Rossini and Verdi.

But even the music is a strange mixture of religious and profane themes. In the second act, for instance, while the hero for the first time reveals to the heroine, Parisina, his sinful love, religious chants are heard from the sanctuary, and this solemn music accompanies the love duo and underlines the lovers' first kiss.

BAN WEDDING NONSENSE.

Wants Law Against Gayly Decorated Carriages at Marriages.

READING, Pa., Jan. 4.—In an address on the "Foundation of the Home, or Marriage," the Rev. Elam J. Snyder, pastor of the Grace Reformed Church of Alsace, scored the public exhibition of wedded couples, and declared that the law should step in and prevent criminal foolishness.

He said that the practice of driving newly-married couples about the public thoroughfares in gaily decorated conveyances is a disgrace. In the formation of a home, he said, the tendency nowadays is live in a hotel or apartments is to be seriously deplored.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

THE MOST VALUABLE MEDICINE IS Made From The Choicest Grains

Barley is a very old grain. It was an important article of food in the primitive days when men were strong. The mighty Greeks ate bread from barley flour. Since the beginning of history, drinks made from barley have been used in cases of illness. All the ancient nations recognized its wonderful curative powers.

Barley is a costly grain, yet the very choicest barley, regardless of cost, is used in connection with other selected grain in making Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. Others so-called "malt whiskies" which you can buy in the store at a less price than Duffy's Malt use cheaper material with a meagre amount of malt; but bear this in mind—these imitations, while they are made to look like Duffy's Pure Malt Whis key, have not the Medicinal Strength-Giving Properties nor palatability and fine flavor that characterizes Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

Don't trifle with your health.

When convalescing from illness, or elements—elements which can only be when the system is run down, or in cases of colds, coughs or affections of the throat or lungs, no medicine is so effective as REAL Malt Whiskey taken in small doses. And the Malt Whiskey half a century. $1 per large bottle of which has the utmost of strength-giving any druggist, grocer, or dealer.

LIQUOR WORTH $2,000 SEIZED AT BANGOR

BANGOR, Me., Jan. 4.—Sheriff W. W. Emerson, who took the oath of office last Wednesday, conducted four successful liquor raids late today. Liquor to the value of $2000 was confiscated.

The raids are the first made in two years. The action of Sheriff Emerson has caused consternation among residents of the city. Before his election Sheriff Emerson promised to enforce all the laws.

There has been but little uneasiness since Emerson put on the gold badge Wednesday. Today, with seven other deputy sheriffs, he started out. The first raid was at Peter McCauley's place on Franklin street. The raiders got two wagon loads of beer and whiskey.

A place conducted by Joseph N. Jameson, between the police station and City Hall, was next visited. Two wagon loads of liquor was captured. Up to Pickering square marched the sheriffs. Four wagon loads of liquor was removed from a place owned by the Crowe brothers and about the same quantity was taken from the place owned by A. F. Cox.

"Are you going to keep up this sort of thing?" one of the irate liquor dealers asked the sheriff.

"Don't ask," was his reply.

Only Woman Senator Rather Likes Smoking

Mrs. Helen Robinson, of Colorado, Makes a Hit with the Members of the Senate.

DENVER, Jan. 4.—The presence of the first woman Senator in the United States caused excitement and curiosity among the Senators at the Capitol here today. Mrs. Helen Ring Robinson, making her debut as a lawmaker, wore a primrose gown and listened to her confreres address her as Mrs. Senator Robinson, to distinguish her from Senator W. C. Robinson of El Paso.

Mrs. Senator Robinson had a bunch of violets on her desk and a bevy of women about her, who congratulated her and the women of Colorado upon the political innovation. She was placed in the front row of Senators, to the right of the centre aisle.

A few inveterate users of tobacco were troubled with a fear that perhaps they could not smoke in the Senate, because of the presence of a woman member.

But the Senator brought joy and relief to the smokers and made herself so popular that she could have had the job of President pro tem. for the asking, when she said that she would not have the sacred custom broken and that she rather liked the smell of a good cigar.

EXCHANGE LOWELL OFFICIALS' POSITION

LOWELL, Jan. 4.—Commissioners George H. Brown and James E. Donnelly exchanged positions today when the Lowell Municipal Council voted Brown from Streets and Lighting to Finance and Donnelly from Finance to Streets and Lighting. The two commissioners were recently elected for two years as members of the Municipal Council. Under the charter form of government five officials comprise the Municipal Council and a majority vote assigns the five to their respective departments.

Mayor James E. O'Donnell, Commissioners Andrew E. Barrett and Lawrence Cummings, with one year to go, were said to have instructed the change, though Commissioner Donnelly joined with them in the voting. Commissioner Brown opposed.

WOMAN FOR PRESIDENT.

Mlle. Denizard, Suffragist, Is Candidate in France.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—Mlle. Marie Denizard of Amiens, a well-known suffragist, announces herself as a candidate for the Presidency of the republic.

SAGE TEA DARKENS FADED GRAY HAIR, KEEPS THE SCALP CLEAN AND HEALTHY

Cures Dandruff, Stops the Hair from Falling Out and Makes It Grow.

There is nothing new about the idea of using Sage for restoring the color of the hair. Our grandmothers kept their hair dark, glossy and abundant by the use of a simple "Sage Tea." Whenever their hair fell out or took on a dull, faded or streaked appearance, they made a brew of Sage leaves, and applied it to their hair with wonderfully beneficial effect.

Nowadays we don't have to resort to the old-time tiresome method of gathering the herbs and making the tea. This is done by skillful chemists better than we could do it ourselves; and all we have to do is to call for the ready-made product, Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, containing Sage in the proper strength, with the addition of Sulphur, another old-time scalp remedy.

This preparation gives youthful color and beauty to the hair, and is one of the best remedies you can use for dandruff, dry, feverish, itching scalp, and falling hair. Get a fifty cent bottle from your druggist today, and you will be surprised at the quick results. All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented.

Sculptures to Adorn City Hall and Library

Classic Figures and Allegorical Fountain

Four Models of "Industry," "Education," "Charity" and "Justice" on Exhibition.

Two public ornaments for Boston, one a proposed beautiful allegorical garden scene for the courtyard of the Public Library and the other embracing decorations for the front of the new City Hall have been completed by Robert W. Burnham, a sculptor who lives at No. 20 [illegible] street. Mr. Burnham was recently appointed instructor in modeling at Harvard.

The City Hall facade model will be put on public view [illegible] the Copley Gallery, No. 103 Newbury street. It is the miniature of four female figures typifying Industry, Education, Charity and Justice. These figures are to be fourteen feet high and are to be in classic costume to blend with the general Grecian effect of the entire front of the building.

They are to surmount the four Corinthian columns. Justice on the right will be typified by a woman holding a sword in her right hand and a book in her left hand. Charity holds an infant in her right arm and her left arm is outstretched to symbolize the protective instinct.

Education is expressed by a child at her left, the globe held in her extended right hand. Industry holds a shovel in her right hand and a cog wheel in her left.

The four figures are to be hewn from [illegible] stone to match the limestone of the building. They are to top columns eight [illegible] high.

Mr. Burnham collaborated with Cif[illegible] Peabody, architects of No. 500 Boylston street, in modeling the library courtyard garden. [illegible] is to be submitted to prominent Bostonians interested in beautifying the city and the Boston Art Commission for approval.

Just underneath the library balcony, to which the interior great stairway ascends, is a great bust "Nature," hewn out of rough stone, to be about fourteen feet high. From the lips of this head will flow a fountain. The "Waters of Truth" caught by two life-sized figures, a man and a woman, representing authors, which receive the water in Grecian vases and then allow it to flow on two other figures standing at the right and left sides of the courtyard. From the hands of these figures the thirsty public may drink.

[illegible] right of the [illegible] are two sphinxes, one [illegible] colonnades. Also facing [illegible] the stone figures [illegible] when the spectator looks across from the opposite side of the arena [illegible] background [illegible] extending the Waters of Truth to the thirsty.

ZERO WEATHER HEADING THIS WAY IN WAKE OF BIG GALE

Cold Wave, Which Will Sweep the Whole Country, Forecasted for New England During Early Days of This Week

Terrific Winds Cause Death and Destruction Around Boston; Falling Chimney Kills a Workman at Wellesley

Six Hurt in the Wreck of Cambridge Restaurant; Roofs Blow Off and Much Damage Is Done in Various Places

A COLD wave with the mercury sinking to zero is due to give Boston and New England their first touch of real Winter within the next day or two following the terrific gale which has swept the coast for the past thirty-six hours causing death and destruction in its wake. Throughout New England the wind, keeping practically a sixty-mile speed, has felled chimneys, blown off roofs, tied up shipping and caused losses estimated at many thousands of dollars.

The cold wave predicted was made in a dispatch from Washington last night. By Wednesday it is forecasted the frigid temperature will have forced the entire country to take to woolens, furs, overcoats and furs to keep from freezing. The big storm which began Friday afternoon made itself felt all along the Atlantic coast, and westward over the entire United States.

Samuel Dodge, carpenter, sixty, was knocked from the roof of the Taylor block, Wellesley square, yesterday, by a falling chimney and was killed. Dodge was repairing damage done by fire to the roof.

The gale blew over a heavy chimney, which fell across Dodge, breaking his back and probably causing death then. But Dodge rolled from the roof and fell two and one-half stories to the ground, breaking his neck. His home was at Great Plains avenue and Park Tree road, Waltham.

Blown off her feet by a gust while proceeding down Mason street from Tremont, Miss A. E. Marden, forty-five, of No. 1-0 Boylston street, was rolled over and over on the pavement before she was halted by the curbing.

Miss Marden's eyeglasses were broken and her face was cut and bruised. She was given first aid treatment in the Adams House.

Six Hurt in Cambridge.

Six people in Roeder's Dairy Lunch room, No. 627 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, were seriously injured when a whole side of bricks and mortar fell upon them as a brick chimney from a four-story building at No. 601 Massachusetts avenue was blown over. Twenty other people in the lunchroom were also hurt. Four of the six were taken to the Cambridge Relief Hospital.

The injured are:

Frank J. Carr, thirty, No. 7 Dimock street, Roxbury, assistant superintendent of the John Hancock Life Insurance Company of Boston, broken left leg, cuts and bruises about the body.

Nathaniel Elholz, thirty-four, No. 70 Harold street, Roxbury, assistant superintendent of the John Hancock Life Insurance Company, head and shoulders hurt.

Two other men, who were hit on the head by falling bricks, went to their homes.

Walls Bulge, Roof Falls.

William Bismick of No. 10 Howard street, Cambridge, and Charles Preedin of No. 288 Washington street, Cambridge, were buried under a fence they were repairing and were sent to Cambridge Relief Hospital.

A man opened an outer door in Middlesex County Courthouse, Cambridge, and the inrushing gale blew out the window in the door of the District Attorney's office.

The roof of an unfinished two-story house on Franceton street, Medford, was lifted up, the walls bulged out and then the roof fell in.

Chimney Halts Consultation.

Dr. B. A. Andrews of Revere was examining the throat of Mrs. George Crawford of No. 88 State road, Beachmont when the chimney of the house next door came through the sidewall. The bricks ripped a hole a yard square and grazed Dr. Andrews' shoulder. Mrs. Crawford fainted.

WOMAN IN TRAGEDY REVEALS LOVE PLOT

Mrs. Murdock Says $100,000 Suit Was Planned Against Millionaire Edey.

SLEW WIFE AND SELF

Woman Who Eloped Declares Double Divorce Was to Be Sought.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Mrs. Nellie Murdock, wife of Gardner Murdock, the Bellport liveryman, on the witness stand this afternoon at the inquest into the deaths of Henry C. Edey and his wife, told an amazing story of events that led up to the millionaire's shooting of his wife and himself. She declared that last July Edey proposed that double divorces be obtained so that Mrs. Edey could marry Murdock and Edey wed Mrs. Murdock.

She calmly admitted that a suit for $100,000 for the alienation of her affections planned by her husband against Edey was to have been divided into thirds so as her husband and their lawyer to receive equal shares in whatever Edey might settle for.

So sensational was her story that a spectator interrupted the proceedings to call Coroner Moore's attention to the fact that the woman's twelve-year-old son was in court listening to his mother's confession.

"Do you want your son to stay here and listen to all this?" asked the coroner of the witness.

"Oh, I suppose he had better leave," she replied calmly.

Woman Is Defiant.

The village hall where the inquest was held was crowded when Mrs. Murdock took the stand. She is a woman of about forty with a dark complexion and dark hair. While passably good looking she was not a striking appearance at all. A murmur of surprise went over the room when a view of the woman for whom Edey was willing to sacrifice his home was obtained.

Mrs. Murdock did not seem nervous as she was called, but assumed a rather belligerent attitude.

She said that she was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Corwin, and when asked if she was living with her husband, replied: "Not as man and wife."

"Had your husband prepared to sue Mr. Edey for alienation of your affections?" she was asked.

"Yes."

"For what amount?"

"One hundred thousand dollars."

This was the first time that this amount had been mentioned since the tragedy, the belief being that the suit was intended for half that sum.

"Did you sympathize with your husband?"

"Yes."

"You still love him, then?"

"No."

"Then why do you sympathize with him?"

"Because I think that he deserves sympathy."

"Why?"

Eloped to Texas.

"Because Edey broke up our home."

"How was that?"

"He got me to leave my home last July [illegible] got his wife to go to Texas with my husband. I was to stay here [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] Mrs. Edey."

"Did you give your consent [illegible]?"

"Yes."

"Now, Mrs. Murdock, did you expect to get anything out of this alienation suit?"

"Yes."

"How much?"

"Well, whatever we got was to be [illegible] [illegible] was to get a third and Mr. [illegible] and I were to divide the rest."

It was at this point that the presence of Mrs. Murdock's little son was called to the attention of the coroner. After the halt occasioned by the removal of the boy by Mrs. Murdock's mother was over, the witness was asked:

"Did you ever live with Mr. Edey?"

"No."

Mrs. Edey Returned.

"Did Mrs. Edey and your husband live together while in Texas?"

"I don't think so."

"Who was to bring the divorces in the two families?"

"Mrs. Edey was to divorce her husband and my husband was to divorce me."

"Who planned all of this?"

"Edey."

"And what spoiled the plans?"

"Mrs. Edey's return to her husband."

"It was then that your husband decided on the alienation suit?"

"Yes."

"And you promised to help him?"

"Yes."

While Mrs. Murdock was testifying the bodies of Edey and his wife were being buried side by side in a Woodlawn Cemetery plot.

BOSTON DEATH RATE HIGH.

Increase of 53 Over Corresponding Week Last Year.

The first weekly report of the Boston Board of Health for 1913 shows an increase of fifty-three deaths over the number for the corresponding week last year, when 208 were reported. This makes the death rate for the week 18.51, as against 15.06 last year. The number of infectious diseases recorded is also high.

BOSTON BABY HUNTER BACK ON JOB AGAIN

John W. Slavin and His Force Seeking Infants Whose Birth Has Not Been Reported.

FINDS HUNDREDS YEARLY

Declares There Are Scores Born With No Physician in Attendance.

John W. Slavin, the official "Baby Hunter" for Boston, has started out to add a few hundred more infants names to the city records kept by Registrar Edward W. McGlenen.

Mr. Slavin and his workers have "hunted" and "found" an amazing quantity of babies for Boston.

The average man, who happens to find a baby somewhere, will make a terrible fuss and talk about it for months. But in the past fourteen years, Mr. Slavin has "found" over 225,000 babies in this city.

Naturally, most of these have been reported by physicians before the "Baby Hunter" gets around because Mr. Slavin and his staff do not begin work until the year is up. The canvass they will inaugurate this month is to list the 1912 babies. Their principal work is to locate the babies not reported by physicians or others attending the mothers.

Has Long Had Contract.

John W. Slavin is listed in the directory as a real estate dealer at No. 127 Federal street with residence at No. 18 Vaughn street, Dorchester, which is perfectly true. But he is also the official "baby hunter," as Registrar McGlenen calls him, for the city. For the past fourteen years he has had the contract to canvass every house, home and lodging, in the city and get a list of all the births.

Hence the title: "baby hunter." It is not so ferocious as it sounds.

Assisted by about a dozen helpers, Mr. Slavin maps out his campaign and oversees the work. While some births are obscure or are concealed so skilfully that it is impossible to hear of them, Mr. Slavin and his staff get practically all. There may be a few, say fifty, that escape.

Mr. Slavin said of his work:

His Own Story.

Of course, the physicians report the bulk of the babies. I get thousands of duplicates—thousands. In fourteen years I have turned in, say 225,000 babies' births, but naturally the greater part of these have been already reported.

But there are some that are not obtained except from my returns. Those are the babies born without physician or other attendant.

Not many such? you say. Well, you'd be surprised to learn what a great many babies there are whose mothers see neither physician or nurse. They are being born constantly in the poorer districts and it is up to me to find these.

We don't begin until the year is over. In about forty days we call at every house in Boston and take stock of every infant born in every house for the preceding year.

Three Classes He Seeks.

I divide [illegible] into three classes: those [illegible] [illegible] of the city whose parents moved to another part of the city [illegible] outside of Boston [illegible] parents [illegible] here to live, those that have in some manner [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of the city registrar's records.

[illegible] children of the [illegible] cases that the baby hunt calls to light. They go to swell the year's figures. We put the baby on the books—give them class—that is when my system discovers them they are recorded and become Boston babies.

Those whose parents came from some place outside of Boston are also given status when we discover such children, for their names or the fact of their birth—if the name has not been selected, are sent back to the town where they were born. Thus such babies get on the records.

Sometimes when parents move across the city at about the time a baby is born the name fails to get reported.

Penalty for Neglect.

There's a penalty now if the physician who attends a mother at childbirth doesn't report the birth, and everything is being done to make the doctor faithful to this injunction. Perhaps some day in the dim future every baby will be reported—but that day hasn't arrived yet.

Mr. Slavin was born in the North End. He and Mayor Fitzgerald were playmates down there. They went to the Eliot School, though Mr. Slavin was ahead of the Mayor.

In addition to his job of child hunting, the "Baby Hunter" is the official school census-taker in Boston.

HOW DID THIS GIRL MEET HER DEATH?

Two Pictures of [illegible] Donovan, Victim in Maiden Death Mystery

SEARCH GIRL'S HOME, EXAMINE BODY, AFTER PARENTS VISIT FOSS

Man From Whom Mildred Donovan Sought Divorce Denies He Knew "Kid Carter." "Why Papa You Do," Declares His Little Daughter

DETECTIVES from the State Police for the first time took a hand, last night, in the investigation of the Mildred Donovan death mystery.

This new activity followed the visit of the parents and brother of the dead girl to the State House, where they saw Governor Foss.

The father is sure his daughter was slain, but thinks the mystery will be explained soon.

Governor Foss communicated with Chief Jophanus H. Whitney. Two detectives were sent at once to the home of the dead girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Menard, No. 102 Otis street, Revere. The detectives interviewed the girl's relatives, saw her body and looked carefully over her effects. They learned two things, among others:

That a gold locket was missing from her body.

While the detectives were in the house, a reporter of the Sunday AMERICAN talked with John A. Donovan, the husband of the dead woman, with whom she had not been living and whom she had sued for divorce. Donovan and his little daughter Dorothy were at the Menard home, where the body of the mystery victim awaits burial.

Donovan, who lives in East Boston, had maintained absolute silence since the tragedy. He refused to discuss it in any way. He was in the basement of the Menard house when the reporter found him.

Donovan is a well built man. His face is rather thin. It is of a florid tinge. His hair is black. He was dressed in mourning.

"Where were you?" asked the reporter, "on the night your wife met her death?"

"God was with me that night," he replied quickly. "I can prove an alibi."

Donovan walked back and forth. Occasionally he pushed back his hair with his right hand.

"Well, where were you?"

"Oh, I won't say."

"Were you in Revere that night?"

"I won't talk about that."

"Were you in East Boston all that evening?"

Donovan stopped his walking and faced the reporter.

"Yes," he replied, with feeling, "I was in East Boston and I did not leave that district that evening. I could not account for the other 364 days of the year, probably, but on that night God was with me, and how thankful I feel!"

"Did you know William H. McPherson—the man whom 'Kid Carter' shot?"

Donovan seemed puzzled. He shook his head.

"No," he replied slowly, "that I have read that [illegible] once lived in Waltham. I want to see a picture of him before I answer that. (He hesitated awhile and then went on.) There is a lot I'd like to say, but I want to keep quiet until after the funeral. That is tomorrow afternoon."

"Do you know Kid Carter?"

"No," responded Donovan, "I never saw him."

Little Dorothy Donovan, with shining face and glistening black hair, had been wandering in and out of the room. She heard the last question and the answer of her father. She stopped near her father and looked at him.

"Why, papa, you did, too, see him!"

Donovan patted the girl on the cheek. She ran out of the room.

"Are you positive that you don't know "Kid Carter?"

"Yes," he replied shortly.

"Did you ever know anybody named McPherson?"

"Well, I don't think so, but I'd like to have a look at that man before he's [illegible] or see his picture."

Bitter Against Fighter.

Donovan took several steps across the floor. Then he returned. He seemed to have been thinking of "Kid Carter."

"Kid Carter," he asserted, "is a dog. I have no use for a man like [illegible]. I'm awfully upset since [illegible] and so are my [illegible]."

TEN BROCKTON GIRLS WOULD WED FRAWLEY

BROCKTON, Jan 4.—Arthur N. Frawley, the Bostonian who wrote a letter asking Mayor Howard of this city to find him a wife, can have his pick of half a score of pretty Brockton girls. Just ten young women have written Mayor Howard telling how much they'd like to become Mrs. Frawley.

In his letter to the Mayor, Frawley stated the things the woman must be in order to win [illegible] and [illegible]. He said he would give $200 to charity if the Mayor would find a wife who was kind, weighed 150 pounds, was thirty years of age, and measured five feet eight inches in height.

One of the ten girls who have replied says:

"If he means business I will meet him, and if he looks good to me I will marry him."

[illegible] never had a sweetheart—at thirty, mind you—and suggests that the $200 be given to the Brockton Day Nursery.

Another writes:

"Mr. Frawley wants a Venus, it seems. I can fill the bill. I am considered good looking and have many admirers."

The Mayor refuses to divulge the names of the [illegible] [illegible] Mayor [illegible] a name or two to some eligible bachelor.

Things Police Know in Mystery and Questions Still Unanswered

KNOWN FACTS

Mildred Donovan's body found off Lynn street, near Linden square, New Year's Day about 1 p. m.

Gold locket and gold bracelet set with diamonds missing.

Death the result of asphyxia, medical examiner's report.

FACTS NOT KNOWN.

Where did Mildred Donovan die?

Who was with her?

What caused the attack of epilepsy if she had it?

How did the body reach the spot where it was found?

Where and when did "Kid Carter" leave Mildred Donovan?

folks. I really don't know where I'm at."

Donovan stepped into the next room, walking swiftly, nervously. He returned. The reporter handed him a cigar. Donovan took it.

"I smoke sometimes," he said. "I'll light this later."

"Did Kid Carter know that you were married to Mildred Menard?" inquired the reporter. "His mother says he didn't and represented that she was a single girl."

"Of course he knew it," replied Donovan in a tone of disgust.

"When did you last see your wife alive?"

"It was six months ago this very night."

"You did not see her New Year's Eve?"

"You don't know how glad I am that God was with me that night. I can account for every moment of my time from the time I left work to go to supper—every moment from that time on."

"Where did you go that night?"

"Well——"

Donovan stopped. He was at the point of telling his movements and thought better of it. He explained:

"As I said, I'd like to say a lot, but you know that my wife is going to be buried tomorrow and I am not in condition to talk now. After the funeral I'll have something to say and I'll tell just where I was that night."

Menard Answers Questions.

At this point Mr. Menard walked into the room. He and Donovan talked a few minutes about the funeral arrangements.

"I have arranged for four hacks," Menard told Donovan. "Is there anything else you would like to suggest?"

"No," answered Donovan. "I guess that will fix things [illegible]."

The reporter [illegible] Mr. Menard. He had certain questions, explaining he wanted to [illegible] upon which they had been contradictions.

"Yes."

"Did she wear two bracelets and is one missing?"

"Yes."

"She asked me for twenty-five cents and I gave it to her."

"Did she know William H. McPherson in Waltham?"

"Yes," put in Donovan, "did she know anybody named McPherson?"

"Eliminate McPherson."

"Oh," replied Menard as though sure of his ground, "eliminate him from the case."

Did she give Kid Carter her husband's watch charm, watch chain and stickpin, as has been reported?"

Did she have those things?" Menard asked Donovan.

"I gave her the watch charm," said Donovan. "I had no chain or stickpin."

Little Dorothy came into the room. She sidled up to her father.

"We'll be going in a few minutes," he told her.

"Is there any further light you can throw on the case," Menard was asked.

Mystery Near Solution.

"I will say this," he replied, "that I feel certain the solution of the mystery is close at hand.

"There is another thing I would like to add by way of correction. There was no whiskey found in the stomach of my daughter. She was a total abstainer. She would not take any stimulant even when it would have relieved her when she was ill. The report that the doctors found whiskey in her stomach is erroneous and it hurt us very much to have it go before the public."

Detectives Make Search.

The State detectives made a thorough examination of Mildred Donovan's effects last night. They had access to all her letters and papers. What they found could not be ascertained. The fact that they made the search would seem to indicate that the detectives believed the woman met with foul play and was not the victim of an epileptic attack.

The body of the dead woman lay in the parlor of the Menard home. It was surrounded by a wealth of flowers. One of the largest floral pieces was from her husband and bore the word "Wife."

Acting Chief Foley of [illegible] charge of the State inquiry [illegible] He declared yesterday he did [illegible] [illegible] by a fall.

[illegible] when the [illegible] he was found.

"Note."

"Could not there have been mud [illegible] that had been washed off by the [illegible]."

"No, because if there had been [illegible] would have shown in her mouth, eyes and ears."

"Then how do you account for the fracture of her nose?"

"That's the mystery that is yet to be solved. We'd like to know that just as much as you would."

"Couldn't the small cut have been made by the stone in a ring on a man's hand?"

"Well, you have just as good a right to speculate on it as anybody."

Acting Captain Foley is deeply interested in the report to be made by Professor Whitney of the Harvard Medical College, who is making an analysis of parts of the dead woman's body and the contents of her stomach. The report was not ready yesterday.

Sure Girl Was Slain.

Frank A. Menard, the father of Mildred Donovan, said yesterday:

My girl was murdered. That is our firm belief. We ask that the Governor have the State police investigate the case. We [illegible] fault to find with the work the different police forces have [illegible] so far. The police of Boston, Malden and Revere have all been engaged on the case. But we believe there should be some central, [illegible] authority in the work of investigation. The [illegible] have [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] their own local territories are concerned. The whole [illegible] is necessary, we concluded.

Medical Examiner Thomas M. Durell of Somerville said that, despite [illegible] to the contrary, he had not yet received any report from Professor Whitney of the analysis of the stomach [illegible] organs of Mrs. Mildred Donovan, he added.

Furthermore, if Professor Whitney's report shall show that further investigation is necessary I will so state to the newspapers and public. But, in case of any suspicious conditions, I shall make my own report direct to District Attorney Higgins and will give out no public statement whatever. You may draw your own conclusions.

SAW WOMAN AND MAN NEAR PLACE BODY WAS FOUND

Charles Loome, a Malden contractor of No. 28 Taylor street, told the AMERICAN about seeing a man and woman standing near the spot where a few hours later the body of Mrs. Mildred Donovan was found, he said.

"About 7 o'clock on the morning the body of Mrs. Donovan was found I was walking down Broadway into Lynn street. I saw a man and a woman engaged in earnest conversation. They were ten feet from the spot where Mrs. Donovan's body was found. When I first saw them they were walking slowly. Then they stopped and talked for a half a minute or so. I watched them start again to walk toward Linden square. The woman wore a [illegible] blue suit and jacket. She carried a handbag. The man wore a light colored coat that looked like an auto garment. He also wore a cap. He looked very much like the pictures I have seen of Kid Carter."

Marcel Vogt of No. 18 Grover street said he saw a man and woman walk past his street about 7:15 on the morning of the crime. "The man wore a light coat and cap," says Vogt.

KID CARTER!—Like Yum, He Never Had a Chance

Short Tragic Career of James Brandon Jennings Should Be a Warning to Boys and Young Men of New England

By CLEMENT L. POLLOCK.

THE short, tragic career of James Brandon Jennings may be read by the boys of New England with much profit. Seldom has the bark of a young man who disregarded all the signals for a safe and successful cruise come to such a sudden and complete wreck.

Who, for instance, that came honestly by a good name like James Brandon Jennings would aspire to change it to "Kid Carter?" And even this soubriquet, with the distasteful odor of the prize ring clinging to it, was self assumed with characteristic egotism by its wearer.

Sporting men tell me that there was once a promising fighter named Kid Carter. He bade fair to become a second John L. Sullivan. He had courage. He took a wonderful amount of punishment. Then he dropped out of the fistic arena.

It was with this man that young Brandon compared himself. He was the only one who did it. For the "Kid Carter" of whom I write was never a fighter of skill or courage. The distinguishing feature of his career was brutality.

All Is Past for "Kid Carter!"

"Kid Carter" sits in a cell of the Charles street jail gazing back along the crooked trail of his past. There is no other direction for him to look now. It is a gloomy series of pictures.

In his modest home in Everett, kept with the deft hand of a careful housewife, sit a father, mother and sister. Their hearts are crushed. But they still cling to their boy, disgraced though he is, especially the mother. For nothing, NOTHING that a boy does will altogether kill the love of his mother. Love is what mothers are made of.

Speaking of her son, Mrs. Peter Jennings made this motherlike ex[illegible]

"James was always an unlucky boy. We called him Patsy on that account—'Unlucky Patsy.'"

"Tad," the noted cartoonist of the AMERICAN, saw just such an "Unlucky Patsy" when he drew those powerful pictures delineating the [illegible] of "Yum," who [illegible] a chance.

[illegible] of the past that rise at night in "Kid Carter's" lonely cell are recalled only sufficiently in this chronicle to point a moral—to show how utterly foolish is the maudlin plaint of the young man, born with a quarter of the opportunities of James Brandon Jennings, who whimpers "I never had a chance!"

Lincoln Hadn't "Kid Carter's" Chance.

Jennings had this chance: He had a hard working, honest father. He had a loving, warm hearted, moral mother. He had a brother who is a decent young man. He had a sister of whom any boy might be proud. He had a home that was marked with thrift in which he was taught all the things that should inspire a boy to high endeavor.

Lincoln did not have the advantages that young Jennings had, for Lincoln was [illegible] to squat before a wood fire and by its light study the lessons that laid the foundation for a real education. Jennings had open for him the schools, libraries and colleges of Boston. In addition to the stimulus that there is in New England for any one who earnestly desires to [illegible] himself.

Jennings had the chance but he would not take it. How often was driven into him the folly of his course only those who loved him know. His ears were deaf to good advice and his heart adamant against falling tears.

General laziness, that manifests itself in loafing in the streets, remaining from school, frittering valuable time away with gangs of hoodlums, using bad language and listening to evil stories—this was the first downward step of Jennings. When the egotism that has swelled his head wears away through the erosion of prison life, so that in the place of a stone in his breast, there reappears a heart with something of the contrite spirit of the boy that was, he will probably recall with vividness those early fatal days.

Boys of that character do not talk of Washington, or Lincoln, or Garfield—they are more likely to discuss Johnson or some other fighter with a like mental capacity and moral code.

Jennings had also in his favor a sound body. That came to him through a father and a mother that he forgot as soon as he could shift in a way for himself. When he measured his height, when he stood on the scales and noted his weight, when he ostentatiously exposed his muscles, it was ever with this boastful comment:

"I'll Show You," Said the "Kid."

"Say, you fellers just wait till I get into the ring. I'll show you some thin[g] [illegible] your peepers. Is there any fe[llow] here that don't believe it?"

"Sure, [illegible] Kid, sure they [illegible] the stuff all right all right, [illegible] back or some one of Jennings's companions would feel the weight of his fist.

These proud exhibitions were usually made in a pool room or in a saloon. From there to some cellar where the gloves were kept, the party would repair and the making of a king of the roped arena proceeded with the sputtering flare of a candle to light the dingy, malodorous training quarters.

One of the first things that the boxer does is to select a name. It is usually "Young Something-or-Other." Some of the friends of Jennings, doubtless influenced by the fear of being "mussed up," as Skinny Shaner would say, suggested that there would be something of the bulldog about Jennings—that he would never give up.

"He reminds me of 'Kid Carter,'" one of the more knowing devotees of the sporting columns remarked.

"Kid Carter—Kid Carter," mused Jennings. "That'll do for me."

And so the Chelsea boxer with a little of the reflected glory of the man whose name he had promptly appropriated began to exhibit the predominating characteristic of a prize fighter—he talked about himself and lost no opportunity to [illegible] some one in the face.

A "Sport" and a Criminal!

"Kid Carter" was thus born to the sporting world. Coincident with it he began his criminal career.

Criminals hate law. They hate officials of the law—policemen, court officers, judges. One of the favorite ways that an unprincipled fighter has of showing his prowess is by "licking a cop." That's how "Kid Carter" started out—except that he slipped up in his design.

The exhibition took place at a dance at the Salem Willows seven years ago, the records show. "Kid Carter" and others were there. He was [illegible] Policeman Duffy of Salem warned him to keep quiet. It was the baiting for which the pugilist had waited.

"G'wan! Chase yerself or I'll hit you in the nose. I'm 'Kid Carter'—'Kid Carter' of Chelsea—see!" boasted the young fighter.

But Duffy didn't "see." "Kid Carter" aimed one of his most reliable and most practiced blows at the policeman. Somehow it did not connect. The fighter was not only whipped, but he was arrested. He was sentenced to nine months in the House of Correction.

It is not my purpose to follow the career of "Kid Carter" through the past seven years—if it could be called a career. So far as the reporters have disclosed it, it is free from anything that is ennobling. It would be difficult if not impossible, to glean from his life as a fighter a chronological table, such as is printed on the day of a big fistic encounter showing the dates of the battles, the antagonists, the number of rounds, the result.

None of the glory and gold that have come to some pugilists rewarded "Kid Carter." Instead, there is a record of brutal attacks on men and [illegible] infractions that caused him to [illegible] about like a hunted man. The natural concomitant of this kind of life is drinking, the use of drugs, the blighting life of the underworld.

That was "Kid" Carter's portion. Back to his home the news was carried by gossips who shook their heads and croaked that they had "told you so." The serpent's tooth of the thankless child gnawed at the hearts of his parents. And finally the day came when the father delivered his fiat:

"You are no longer a son of mine. You may never again enter my home."

The "Kid Carter" craft was headed straight for the rocks. He did not seem to care. The end was inevitable but seldom comes so swiftly. The young fighter returned a few weeks ago from a tour of the West. It had not netted him any money, at [illegible]

The Tragedy of the Cemetery.

Barred from home he sought a kindhearted girl he had known as a boy. She was Mildred Donovan, who was trying to obtain a divorce from her husband. She took him into her home, where she lived with her father and mother. "Kid Carter," visiting his mother by stealth, introduced Mildred Donovan to his mother and sister. He refrained from telling them that the woman was married, but led them to believe that he was in love with her and planned to make her his wife.

"Kid Carter" left Revere after dinner on New Year's Eve in company with Mildred Donovan. She was to intercede with his mother in Everett to get some money for the penniless outcast. What happened after 7 o'clock that night to this generous spirited young woman is conjecturally [illegible]

She was found dead the next afternoon at the roadside, partly [illegible] by a clump of bushes, near Holy Cross cemetery, Malden. There is mystery in this death. There may be crime behind it.

Half crazed with liquor or morphine, "Kid Carter" rolled into a South End saloon just about the time the pitiful Malden tragedy was discovered. He shot down a man that, so far as is known, he had never seen before. The victim of the mad bullets died next day.

The double tragedy, one directly and the other at least indirectly connected with "Kid Carter," marked for him the ending of the Old Year and was rung on the dolorous tongues of the New Year's bells.

And it was then too late for him—the "Unlucky Patsy" of his mother, the "Yum" who "never had a chance" of "Tad"—to turn over a new leaf.

Boer War Hero 'Cop' Surrenders to Cupid

Sergeant Murphy, Victor of Many Engagements, Is Happily Vanquished.

The marriage became known to the city only yesterday, although the ceremony took place last July, of Miss Alice J. Herrick of Winchester [illegible] of Lieutenant Governor David I. Walsh and Sergeant Michael P. Murphy, a hero of the Boer war, now a patrolman on the Boston police force.

The couple were wed in Providence and Murphy did not tell any of his brother policemen until last week yesterday of being married and they gave the details of his quiet wedding.

It was a case of love at first sight. Some time ago Murphy went to Winchester to see a man named Herrick about [illegible]

Drops Alienation Suit Against Aged Uncle

Settlement of Maine Case Is Reached After Several Witnesses Are Heard.

BATH, Me., Jan. 4.—The $10,000 alienation of affection suit brought by Stuart Allen of Richmond against his uncle, Nathan Allen of Portland, came to a sudden termination in the Sagadahoc County Supreme Court, after two days' trial.

All the evidence had been submitted and a recess granted by Associate Justice Bird, prior to the opening argument by Judge Enoch Foster for the defence, when the latter announced that a proposition had been presented to him by Henry R. Drew, attorney for the plaintiff, that the case be withdrawn from the jury and that the entry be made neither party, no further action for this cause.

Nathan Allen, aged seventy-five, the defendant, denied that he had tried to alienate Mrs. Allen's affections. He said that he tried to look out for his nephew, in compliance with a request made to him by his brother, Wesley Allen, father of the plaintiff, before his death.

Several witnesses testified to the character and good reputation of Mrs. Stuart Allen. No financial agreement entered into the settlement of the case, both sides agreeing to pay their own costs.

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Cure.

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home. Saves You $2.

This recipe makes a pint of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually stops the most obstinate cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, croup, sore lungs, asthma, throat troubles, etc.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

Pine is one of the oldest and best-known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this recipe have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

INTRODUCTORY SALE OF THE LATEST Nemo CORSET INVENTION

TRIPLE-STRIP

LASTICURVE-BACK SELF-REDUCING AT $3.00

BEGINNING ON MONDAY, JANUARY 6

OUR POLICY always has been to place our BEST IDEAS within the reach of the masses. This Sale gives PRACTICAL PROOF of the soundness of this policy and its beneficial influence upon the public welfare. Never before has so much goodness been crowded into a $3.00 corset.

Nemo Self-Reducing Corset With Lasticurve-Back $3.00

322—Extra-long Skirt, Low Bust

324—Extra-long Skirt, Medium Bust

The introduction of the new Lastikops Cloth, in broad gores at the back of the corset, alone makes this new device possible. The NON-ELASTIC portion of the gores cover and extend below the back steels, producing an extremely long skirt which is laced clear down to the end, following the natural incurve of the figure. It is impossible for the edge of the corset to show through the dress. The ELASTIC part of each gore expands when you are seated, giving ample room for the "spread" of the hips, and producing an absolutely smooth back. This is the very best corset ever sold regularly at $3.00.

READ THIS, WISE WOMEN!

When you buy Nemo Corsets at FULL PRICE, you get greater values than any other make would be at HALF PRICE. And this is WHY:

1. Nearly all our trade is in corsets retailing at $3.00 and more, while with most other makers corsets at these prices are a side-issue.
2. For example: We manufacture these two new models in thousands of dozens, instead of by the gross. The resulting economy in material and manufacturing enables us to sell these corsets at only $3.00, though the actual cost of manufacture in smaller quantities would fairly justify a retail price of not less than $5.00.
3. By restricting our line to comparatively few models and making these few in tremendous quantities, we are able to make good our oft-repeated claim that—

Every Nemo Corset represents at least twice as much value, in material and making, as any other corset sold at similar prices.

ATTEND THIS SALE—SEE ALL THE NEMOS

This new corset is going to sweep the country. It is sure to be our most popular $3.00 model this year. Several hundred thousand pairs have been distributed amongst practically all the good stores in America, but even that vast quantity may prove unequal to the demand. So be early at the Sale; and, while your at it, look through the entire Nemo line—that's something every woman ought to do. KOPS BROS., Manufacturers, NEW YORK 2-2-3

COWBOY GIANT OVERWHELMED WITH STAGE AND MOVING PICTURE OFFERS.

LUTHER M'CARTY, who defeated Al Palzer in a Pacific Coast ring on New Year's Day, is paying dearly for his victory, which gave him the title of world's heavyweight champion. He is besieged with all kinds of offers for stage and moving picture work, hundreds of letters and telegrams are pouring in on him with all kinds of suggestions, and to add to it all charges of wife desertion are being [illegible] broadcast.

There is only one black spot in the new champion's career—a no-decision bout in New York with Jess Willard [illegible] McCarty [illegible] credited with the [illegible] of the [illegible].

OUTPOINTED IN SHORT NEW YORK BOUT.

Willard [illegible] Misso [illegible] Willard is a big, powerful fellow—nearly half a foot taller than McCarty [illegible] and aggressive. Like Palzer, Willard [illegible] his entirely on his punch for [illegible] ever boxer like McCarty's [illegible]

McCarty will not [illegible] to come, as he will make a vaudeville tour of the country, but it is promised that either Willard or Bombardier Wells [illegible] get [illegible] first [illegible] to talk business.

[illegible] the heavyweight champion of Canada [illegible] was acting as a substitute for a fellow who got "cold feet" at the last minute, and surprised the crowd by putting the Canadian out in two rounds.

Adams took a liking to McCarty and [illegible] sketch. It was while on the stage that the champion attracted the attention of Tommy Burns, the former heavyweight champion of the world [illegible]

Burns called McCarty [illegible] him to take up a ring career for a livelihood. [illegible] McCarty [illegible] It was [illegible] Morris, the Oklahoma giant, that he attracted attention [illegible]

[illegible] Morris was [illegible] McCarty [illegible]

After this bout he met two reverses. He [illegible] Stewart and Jess Willard [illegible] two rounds [illegible] weeks ago he was matched with Jim Flynn, the Pueblo fireman. McCarty worked hard for this bout. He figured that he would have to win now or quit. Flynn had been a stumbling stone in the [illegible] fast as [illegible]

His most recent bout with Al Palzer showed the fighting cowboy in his true colors, and no boxer ever had a brighter future.

HERE IT IS—THE FIRST BASEBALL CHALLENGE OF THE 1913 SEASON

HERE is the first baseball challenge of 1913. Although many say that the Winter has not set in yet, at least one amateur team is preparing for its baseball season and anticipates an early start, as the following letter indicates.

HYDE PARK will be represented by a very strong semi-professional baseball team this year as usual. This new addition to Boston has always been noted for the excellence of its teams in the past, and the Hyde Park A. A. has no idea of being beaten this year in this regard. It will have practically the same team that defeated such strong teams as the crack United Shoe Machinery Company, Beverly, Wakefield, Weymouth, Quincy, Attleboro, Mattapan, Readville [illegible]

Manager Devine has a few [illegible] would like to book with such teams as Southbridge, [illegible] Fitchburg, Clinton, Hyannis and Northampton. He has about all the available players needed for the season, but would like to hear from a good pitcher, preferably a left-hander.

On the Level, Who'd Expect It?

By G. Michelson

Harvard Hopeful of Clean Sweep Won at Football and Running

Harvard has a shining chance of winning the collegiate athletic championship title this year, having already received a powerful impetus with the football and cross-country bunting packed away in the Crimson's cedar chest.

Harvard's present [illegible] in the gridiron pastime has [illegible] its way to pin the tag of defeat on the Cornell crew when the dual race is held at Ithaca next May.

The present college year [illegible] auspiciously for Harvard. The football championship was whisked away by a string of nine consecutive victories over all kinds of oppponents, and the cross-country honors were plucked with comparative ease. It has been years since the Cambridge institution even had a start such as this.

Harvard has better than ordinary material for baseball. Last year's nine was strong enough, apparently, to go through the schedule with a fairly good showing, but the games at the latter part of the season ended with a rather poor showing. However the men are [illegible] taken individually [illegible] enable [illegible] to form a nine that can trim Yale, Princeton and Brown. Games with these three universities were lost by close scores last year, and added strength ought to give the Crimson enough extra punch to grab off a few victories this season to make up for former losses.

Captain Larry Gardner's Harvard trio of skaters makes a formidable collection, for the places of the valuable men who were lost through graduation can be ably filled by the incoming members of last year's freshman seven, particularly by Morgan Phillips and Bill Chadin.

Last year the championship in hockey was hung on the fence with the Crimson and the Orange and Black tugging at it. Each team had a successful season and each beat the other in a [illegible] game. There was no play-off of the tie.

After Hockey Title.

This year Harvard plays Princeton twice, and a third provisional game has been arranged for if necessary. There will be no doubt as to this year's hockey champion. The Cambridge seven will be in good condition to meet Princeton's representatives, for before their first contest Harvard will have a chance to get [illegible] against the Ottawa University and [illegible] Toronto University teams from Canada without risking any title honors [illegible] getting prepared for a stiff battle with Princeton.

[illegible] will have every chance to [illegible] for Harvard [illegible] somewhat [illegible] if Harvard [illegible] Cornell at its own game of rowing. [illegible] cross-country running was regarded as Cornell's best bet up [illegible] Harvard turned the trick [illegible] Wray [illegible] fill with his [illegible] as Coach A. Strubb was with his [illegible] [illegible] off with the [illegible].

A dual race with the Cornell oarsmen [illegible] best thing that could happen for [illegible]. The Crimson eight will have every chance in the world to beat its rival, and a river victory will come rather near to carrying the country's championship, although Columbia may have a slight claim to the title.

Good Track Prospects.

Track is the final major [illegible] Harvard has excellent prospects [illegible] Last year's team [illegible] [illegible] and Yale [illegible] and landed fourth place at [illegible] Intercollegiates. The incoming crop of freshman track athletes is the best of any [illegible] of sport at Cambridge for it was said last Spring that the freshmen were [illegible] good as the varsity. The [illegible] [illegible] boost Harvard [illegible] [illegible] track athletics this [illegible] Spring.

Lacrosse was the only sport in which the Crimson won an undisputed [illegible] last year and the cup is not likely to be transferred from Cambridge this season. Harvard clearly excels all other universities at the Canadian game and [illegible] [illegible] year's claim on the title is practically assured.

The soccer team, the golf team and the tennis team will all be up to the average and one of the three ought to win a championship.

With only two collegiate championship titles to dispose of, and both of them resting at Harvard, it looks like a clean-up year for that university. Only a few more high titles in the remaining sports will be needed to snatch the first place in athletics for Harvard.

WORCESTER HIGH TO HAVE REGULAR CREW

Prominent Business Men of White City Sign Petition for Continuance of Rowing.

WORCESTER, Jan. 4.—Prominent business men of this city, including four [illegible] Mayors, a former Congressman, ex-members of the city government, lawyers and doctors, have signed a petition for [illegible] continuance of rowing at the Worcester High School. The petition will be presented to the sub-committee on high school of the 1913 School Committee for acceptance.

Harold Thayer, who was the manager of the 1911 and 1912 Worcester High crew, had a number of comments to make on the attitude of the so-called advisory committee of high school athletics a year ago.

Said Mr. Thayer: "There has been [illegible] to the effect that [illegible] [illegible] the Worcester High [illegible] [illegible] Already [illegible] managers [illegible] Worcester High crews have [illegible] they have collected amounts ranging from $100 up to $400 or even $400, for the support of one year's rowing.

Times have changed from those [illegible] when these comparatively large sums were collected for the crew. The [illegible] comes in the order of the [illegible] of the advisory committee, which [illegible] the and the same thing, that there [illegible] [illegible] no soliciting of funds [illegible] the high schools.

[illegible] the manager of the crew and his assistants, usually voluntary aides, into the dilemma of stacking up against alumni and business men for funds with which to make the maintenance of the crew possible.

That business men have been willing to assist in maintaining the crew is a positive sign that the rowing game for the high schoolboys has merit and favor in their eyes. Yes, I am of the opinion that the advisory committee should not cramp the crew by limiting its workers to soliciting outside of the schools.

"If athletics are beneficial in making a well balanced boy, there is no reason why the school building should not once in a [illegible] be thrown open in order that the [illegible] treasury might be fattened by proceeds from dance or entertainment.

"It has been said that a 17-year-old boy is too young to row in a Worcester High School crew under present conditions. That boy is not familiar with the way crew men are ordered. [illegible] [illegible] minute for the crew and [illegible] [illegible] next [illegible] [illegible] steep up and down the lake [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] by the facts [illegible] [illegible] High School [illegible] They work into their duties gradually, first being put through setting up drills that strengthen all the muscles of a boy's body.

"Surely there are a horde of lads now in the schools who have one shoulder dropping down a little below the other, who are almost puny and who weigh not much more than 123 pounds. Give them rowing, put in another shell; have interschool rowing. Go to St. Paul's, Concord, [illegible], where every boy rows, and where some of the best specimens of young American manhood turned out of any secondary school are annually dumped into delighted colleges."

French Golfers Invite Americans to Play in Paris

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—An invitation which American golfers considered tantamount to a challenge from French golfers has been made public in the form of a letter to Secretary Robert C. Watson of the United States Golf Association from President T. Deschamps of the Golf de Paris Club.

Regarded as a challenge, it is the first with French golfers have offered the Americans, although American amateurs and professionals have competed on French [illegible] without "getting in the [illegible]."

A team of four professional golfers is invited to compete on La Boulie links near Paris in the French tournament which will follow the competition for the British championship title in the latter part of June, the contest to be for a substantial purse, together with a stated amount for traveling and maintenance expenses, if the team which [illegible] appears in the British open championship and will visit Paris.

The challenge has been acknowledged and its probable acceptance indicated, although no official action has yet been taken.

Trainer Rowe Refuses to Campaign Abroad

James Rowe, who gave [illegible] the great Keene racing [illegible] several years [illegible] to look after H. P. Whitney's breeding establishment in this country, has repeatedly declined to [illegible].

[illegible] worked his way from the position [illegible] stable boy and jockey to the very top of his profession. He started horses for a while but when the late Mr. Keene engaged him as trainer he proceeded to earn greater fame. He developed the racing quality of the immortal Sysonby, the mighty Colin, Peter Pan, Maskette and other famous thoroughbreds which won nearly $2,000,000 on the American turf.

Yet all the time that Rowe had charge of the Keene horses he kept the stable secrets to himself. He seldom wagered on the string, and although he was on friendly terms with noted plungers and bookmakers, he withheld important information.

Rowe still hopes that racing will come back some day. Then he will have the Whitney horses to train and will try his best to repeat former triumphs.

FAST BASEBALL TEAM EXPECTED AT TUFTS

Big Squad Out for Nine; Regular Indoor Cage Practice Starts Next Month.

The outlook at Tufts for a fast and winning baseball team for the coming Spring is much better than it has been for years.

[illegible] three men of last year's team are [illegible] by graduation, Captain Hooper, [illegible] [illegible] Quinn [illegible] third base and [illegible] [illegible]. The rest of the team remains intact.

Adams Mainstay in Box.

"Nick" Carter, who did much fine pitching last season, is one of the few men to be lost by graduation. "Win" Adams, the mainstay in the box last year, remains, but two or three other men must be developed to help Adams.

Mack, a second string man, who was out of the game last season with a broken collar bone, will be back in trim and should make a strong bid for a position.

Lee, the varsity second base man of last year, has had considerable experience as a pitcher, having pitched for Goddard Seminary before entering Tufts.

Krepps Is Promising Twirler.

Among the new twirlers is Raymond Krepps, who comes to Tufts from Mercersberg Academy with a fine record. His excellent work in the Freshman-Sophomore game this Fall when he held the Sophs to two hits, was a sample of his ability.

Both of last year's regular catchers—Jameson and Geary—will again be in line this year, as will Comee, the heavy hitting second-string man. In addition, Huntington, the varsity catcher of two years ago, has returned to college after a year's absence.

Of the freshman candidates, Hill of Peabody High and Nellis of Roslindale appear to be the most promising. With this line, Tufts is sure to be well fortified behind the bat.

At first base Captain Bennett will be a fixture. His hitting and fielding last season was of stellar order, and he is sure to repeat during the coming season.

COAKLEY TO COACH.

Former Mayor League Star Signs With Williams College.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Jan. 4.—Andrew Coakley, the former Holy Cross star and major league pitcher, has signed a contract to coach the Williams College baseball team the coming season. For two seasons past Coakley has coached the purple team, and has been eminently successful in developing strong nines.

PLAN FENCING MEET.

American and English Amateurs May Have Tourney Here.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—American amateur fencers who have cherished for several years the project of an international match, said today that a provisional challenge had been sent to the English amateurs to visit this country and compete for an international trophy similar to the Westchester polo cup or the Davis cup in lawn tennis. J. Sanford Saltus, long a patron of American fencers, is said to have offered to provide the trophy.

Eddie Hanlon Is Ready to "Come Back"

The present generation of young baseball fans do not remember the days when Hanlon was the fleet footed center fielder and captain of the champion Detroits of 1887. They do not recall Hanlon as leader of the Pittsburghs several years later, and they barely remember him as manager of the champion Baltimores of 1894.

Hanlon is wealthy and retired now. He has made money in real estate and is enjoying life, yet he hankers for another whirl at the national game. He said that he had informed a well known club owner that he would gladly invest some money and would take hold of his team if he was needed. Hanlon declared that his champion Baltimores were the best collection of ball players that ever wore the same uniform.

"The infield, with Doyle on first, Reitz at second, McGraw at third and Jennings shortstop was a [illegible]," said Hanlon. "They were fast as the wind, good hitters and bunters, always scrappy and in the game. Then we had Joe Kelley, Steve Brodie and Willie Keeler in the outfield, all stars. Robinson and Clarke were the catchers and how they did throw to bases! The pitchers were hard workers—McMahon, Gleason, Hemming, Esper and Pond. I shall never forget them. I had another great team in Brooklyn later, with such men as Fielder Jones, Kelley, Keeler, Jennings, Tom Daly, Lave Cross, Charley Farrell, Jim McGuire, McGinnity, McJames, Kennedy, Hughes and others. If the American League hadn't wrecked that team we would have gone on winning pennants for several years."

TO HOLD SWIMMING MEET.

First Preliminary Races to Be Held Wednesday Evening.

The first of a series of preliminary swimming meets under the auspices of the Bath Department will be held in the Cabot street swimming pool on next Wednesday evening. The following events are open to young men under twenty years of age: 25-yard dash, 100-yard dash, relay race, fancy diving and life saving. The winners of the first three places in each event will be eligible to compete in the finals which will be held in the Curtis Hall pool. Entries for this and other preliminary meets which will be held in all the public baths should be made to the instructors at the various pools.

Baseball Popular in Philippines

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Baseball is the most popular sport so far introduced by the Americans into the Philippine Islands, and it is doing more than its share in civilizing the brown people of the [illegible] ago.

The United States Bureau of [illegible] authority for the statement that the American national game is the most favored pastime among the natives, although physical culture is taught in the schools, and sports of all sorts are encouraged.

"Baseball seems decidedly the most popular," say the American teachers, "and it has practically been adopted as the national game of the Islands."

The creation of 'fans' in the Far East was announced today with the opening of an exhibit in the National Museum here of the handiwork of the Filipinos.

Manufactures of every description are on view together with the educational paraphernalia used in the islands in instructing the natives.

BRITISH PAY 25 CENTS.

That Solves Problem Why English Sporting Events Outdraw U. S.

To see a world series game of baseball costs all the way from $1 up. For any one of the big football games the average man pays about that price. At these rates about 40,000 people see some of the biggest athletic events. More cannot be crowded into the enclosures.

In England crowds of 125,000 people are not uncommon at the big football games. Anything under 80,000 is poor business. At these games the charge for any sort of a view is a shilling, 25 cents.

The English sometimes wonder why, with the intense interest, more people do not see the big games in America. The answer is easy. If there were room and the admittance charge were a quarter a couple of hundred thousand would pack the grounds to see world series games.

Thompson a Heavyweight.

"Cyclone Johnny" Thompson, who a few years ago was battling in the lightweight division, may soon be considered a white hope. Thompson during his trip to Australia about a year ago took on weight so rapidly that he soon scaled in the middleweight division. Now he tips the beam at 190 pounds.

Frenchman Seeking Jean Dubuc as Coach

Jean Dubuc, "sometimes" star recruit pitcher of the Detroit Tigers, modestly admits he has been made a splendid offer to coach the Paris club in the French Union Baseball League. The Gay Paree team wants Jennings' best hurler for five years.

If Dubuc succeeds in getting the proper inducements from Manager Jennings of the Detroit Club he may remain in America.

It is said that Dubuc has been offered $3,000 a year more than he agreed to sign for as a member of the Tigers. Dubuc admits he would rather remain in America, and hopes to get the "raise" that will warrant his remaining with the Detroit team with a clear conscience.

Dubuc was a star pitcher of the Montreal Club in the International League, after he left Buffalo. Hugh Duffy, the manager of the Chicago White Sox, saw great possibilities in this pitcher, and he wanted him for Comiskey's club. The Montreal magnate wanted $10,000 for him, and the deal fell through. Dubuc looked to be worth that much last year, when he won thirteen games in a row, but he had a big slump near the close of the season.

Willie Richie Claims He Is Being Abused

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 4.—Talk about kicking a man when he's down, they kick twice as hard when you're on top, says the new lightweight champion, Willie Ritchie. "My fight with Wolgast was a tough one, and I left the ring with a few scratches that wouldn't heal over night. I was entitled to a few weeks of rest and had a legitimate right to grab some stage money.

"I haven't said that I wouldn't grant Wolgast a return match. I never said that I would raise the lightweight limit an ounce. I have done nothing to suggest that I wouldn't defend my title against any and all comers. Why should the knockers start swinging on me before my hands were out of the bandages?"

SYRACUSE TO DROP ELI.

Orange Football Team Will Retain Carlisle on Schedule.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Syracuse will probably not play Yale at football next Fall, although it has been suggested that Carlisle be dropped rather than Yale. This is [illegible] because Carlisle is not generally rated with the Eastern colleges. Two years ago, when Syracuse was the only team to defeat the redskins, their standing in college circles was not raised to any extent.

It is not thought, however, that Warner's men will be cut from the orange schedule, because of the great interest which has always been in evidence when the aborigines come to this city. Because of this it is considered more probable that Yale will be dropped.

Florida Wants the Cubs.

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—Merchants of Lakeland, Fla., have filed a bid asking the Cubs to train in that city next Spring. Lakeland is a bustling place with a population of 8,000 and is 250 feet higher above the sea level than Tampa, one of the prospective camps now being considered. Murphy expects to start for Florida shortly to select the training retreat.

Cuban Marsans Joins Ranks of "Holdouts"

CINCINNATI, Jan. 4.—Joe Tinker has received his first setback as manager of the Cincinnati Reds. Armando Marsans, the fleet Cuban outfielder, upon whom the former star shortstop of the Cub Invincibles is depending for a pennant scrap in 1913, returned to August Herrmann an unsigned contract. Enclosed was a letter in uncertain but none the less plain English that the islander did not rate his professional ability among charitable standards.

In short, Senor Marsans was somewhat peeved at the terms of his contract. He threatens to remain in Cuba. August Herrmann does not experience an enlargement of the 'bills payable' column. The contract forwarded to Marsans embraced a slight raise over the salary drawn down by the Cuban in 1912, but not enough to justify the pride of this athlete, who enjoyed a very favorable season.

Tinker may have his troubles in smoothing out Marsans' objections. The latter, like many of the best Cuban ball players, is in a very good position to stand by his guns. He comes of a wealthy family and plays baseball purely for the love of the sport. Marsans would not quit the major league for whatever little difference in money that may be involved. But he objects to having his services rated lower than what he deems their true value.

OLD NEW HAVEN PARK THING OF THE PAST

FORMER Y. ATHLETIC FIELD

Most Complete Athletic Field in Country and Has Thousands of Visitors' Annually.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Jan. 4.—Sportsmen in every nook and corner of the United States will learn with reminiscent regret of the passing of old Elm City Park, Hamilton Park, as some of them knew it.

The park has gone forever. Its buildings have just been torn down, its famous gateway razed, its racing tracks, baseball field and football gridiron smoothed out into a long lawn, which will be divided into building lots and the baselines chalk marks transformed into streets and sidewalks.

If any other park in America has combined such a variety and quality of sports on its surface in the past sixty years it is not known to followers of athletic events here.

The famous grounds were the home of Yale athletics from their dawn about the time of the Civil War till Yale Field was opened in 1884. Every Yale athletic event was held there which was fought on Yale's home grounds, and all Yale teams practiced there.

All the trotting events that were scheduled for New Haven were held there till the past Fall. Every State fair that came to New Haven took place there. It was the grounds for all the circuses that paid their annual visits to New Haven.

It was the headquarters for all the New Haven horses that were trained annually for the Grand Circuit and for the minor circuits. The New Haven Polo team had its headquarters there and practiced there.

Picnics from all over the State came here for their outings, the thousands of picknickers lounged in the large grove behind the track, the athletes of the party held their running races or their baseball games on the track and the horsemen, or even the track athletes used the half-mile track for their racing programs, and the picnickers who loved dancing thronged the pavilion near the grove.

All the horse shows New Haven ever had were held there. No sport can be mentioned that required a field and track which was not fought out on the park to a broadsword contest between champions of Ireland and England that drew 15,000 people twenty years ago.

No bicyclist of the old high wheel and of the low wheel of today, at least till five years ago, but recalls his heats of exciting races on the park.

Germans Will Use American Methods

NEW YORK, Jan 4.—Athletic circles here learned of plans which have been made for arousing athletic enthusiasm in Germany as a forerunner of the Olympic games which are to be held in Berlin in 1916.

It is planned to bring 30,000 athletes to Berlin from athletic organizations, schools and colleges throughout the empire, to pass in review before the Emperor on June 8 next, the occasion of the dedication of the stadium now being constructed on the Grune Vald race course just outside the German capital.

After this demonstration the athletic leaders propose to put into effect many of the American training methods and with the aid of a general government subsidy they count on making their forces irresistible by the time of the new Olympiad. A great preliminary Olympic meet is already being planned by university athletes for next Summer.

PENN BEATS CARLISLE, 26-12

Indians Excellent Defence Keeps Down Scoring.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 4.—Penn's basketball team tonight, with Carlisle Indians as opponents, was not compelled to exert itself to win out, the final score being 26 to 12. At the start of the game, Penn seemed unable to find its stride and during the early minutes the excellent defense of the redskins prevented Coach Kiefaber's team from scoring often. Then again Reisner was somewhat off in his foul shooting and at the end of the first half the Red and Blue had a lead of but four points on the Indians, the score being 12 to 8.

MANAGER OR NOTHING.

Johnny Kling Will Quit Baseball Unless He Is Leader.

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 4.—Johnny Kling, who managed the Boston Pilgrims last season, will never again play baseball unless he secures a position as manager of either a major league or Class A minor league team. Kling realizes that there is little chance of his securing a job with a big league outfit, but he has received several offers to manage clubs in the American Association.

Kling is well fixed financially, and will never be obliged to play ball in order to gain a livelihood.

OTTAWA BEATS McGILL

Heavy Penalties Breaks Up Losers Defense in Final Period.

NEW YORK, Jan 4.—In a game of real Canadian hockey at St. Nicholas ring tonight, Ottawa College defeated McGill University of Montreal by a score of 4 to 3. The Capital city boys won out in the second half as the result of McGill's rough play. Repeated penalties broke up the fine defence of the Montreal boys.

Ee-yah Jennings Joins American's Sporting Staff

Famous Tiger Leader Now Full Fledged Editor

EE-YAH JENNINGS, THE TIGER LEADER

Diamond Star Will Give Boston Fans Some Inside Baseball Talks.

HUGHEY JENNINGS, manager of the Detroit Tigers, has joined the staff of the Boston AMERICAN as sporting editor. Jennings [illegible] of the sporting pages of the AMERICAN and his first day's work will [illegible] tomorrow.

Tuesday he will try his hand at "making up" and the New England sporting public has a [illegible] as Jennings is no amateur at this end of the [illegible].

Although Jennings' task will be no easy [illegible] time to prepare several articles that will be of interest to the Boston baseball public.

These articles will appear on the sporting pages of the AMERICAN from day to day during Jennings' stay in Boston. Hughey is also somewhat of a humorist and [illegible] of these will be printed on the sport pages each day.

In addition to his editorial work Jennings has a week's engagement at the National Theatre tomorrow. "The Mascot" is the title of the sketch in which the famous Tiger leader will appear. He will be assisted by Ben Smith [illegible] father Charley Smith was the originator of semi-professional baseball in Newark. The act was written by John C. [illegible], who is well known in Boston.

JENNINGS IS SOME ACTOR

Hughey has admitted on several occasions that ball players are poor actors. Still they get their money on their reputation made on the diamond, is the way he puts it.

But those who have seen Jennings on the stage admit that he is no joke as an actor. The hardest part of [illegible] Hughey recently is applying the powder and [illegible] costume. The rest is easy.

Jennings is not coming to Boston just to be an actor or an editor. There's a little [illegible]. He's in search of pitchers. Baseball "fans" will remember that the Detroit pitching staff was woefully lacking [illegible].

The Red Sox have a big staff of young pitchers and Hughey is of the opinion that Jimmy McAleer could spare a few of them. McAleer will also be in town this week and it is probable that a meeting will be arranged between the two to talk over matters concerning a few deals which may be satisfactory to both.

MEETING WITH McALEER.

So baseball "fans" can see by this that the stage is not the only thing that is on Hughey's mind during the Winter [illegible]. He is also looking out for the interests of the Detroit [illegible] and he intends to give the baseball public of that city a winning team.

Jennings is one of the most popular baseball men in Boston. His funny stunts on the diamond and his famous "Ee-yah" has made a big hit with the "fans" every time he came to Boston.

The objections raised by Dean LeBaron R. Briggs of Harvard against his style of coaching has aroused Jennings. He says he cannot see anything wrong with it and is willing to argue out his point with Mr. Briggs any time.

On Monday evening Hughey will be guest of the Elks at the Elks home on Somerset street. On Tuesday evening the Elks will be on hand to give Hughey a hand at the National Theatre. Being a Cornell man, it is thought that Jennings will also be entertained by the local alumni.

The Detroit manager is a strong admirer of Jerry McCarthy, the Red Sox mascot. Having heard that Jerry was some actor himself he has written on to him asking for a few points on acting. It is probable that Jerry will assist the Tiger leader while he is in Boston.

LIKES RED SOX CHANCES.

In a statement, Jennings predicts that the [illegible] the American League next season rests between the Red Sox and Athletics. He believes that the Red Sox have a slight edge on their opponents because of the fact that they won the pennant last year. This will give them confidence and with the same line-up there is no doubt but that the Sox will be in the running.

"Mack's Athletics played in poor form last season," said Jennings. "They didn't realize, until too late, that the pennant was slipping through their fingers. Their big pitchers, Bender and Coombs were in poor form most of the time and Morgan dropped out of the league. I believe that next season Bender and Coombs will be better and with a couple of youngsters in the outfield and that great infield the Mackians will be [illegible] troublesome."

"Clark Griffith is [illegible] a pennant for the Washington [illegible]. Washington is a good team but they [illegible] the Boston and Philadelphia teams. I do not believe that Griffith's boys will do better than to land third place next season."

PICK DETROIT FOR FOURTH PLACE.

"I expect that we will finish fourth, at least. The Tigers are a hard proposition to dope out. The team will be made up mostly of young [illegible] but I do earnestly believe that if we get away with a flying start we will show the other something in the way of playing the old game of baseball. With one or two more pitchers to help out Dubuc and Willet, you can put us in the running."

Jennings does not think that Frank Chance will be able to do much with the Yankees this year, but he expects the New York club to be in the running in 1914.

The Chicago team is erratic and he expects them to do almost anything. Jennings said, with Stovall at the helm the Browns will do considerably better than they did last year. Hughey also says that Cleveland [illegible]. He considers Birmingham a heady manager and expects [illegible] of him.

YALE MEN FAIL TO REACH CONCLUSION

NEW HAVEN, Ct., Jan. 4.—After several sessions Yale's former captains and prominent coaches who met to discuss means for improving the quality of Yale football, separated tonight without reaching any conclusion. Half a dozen different schemes were outlined by the speakers at the informal discussion which followed the banquet held at the Hotel Taft.

Captain Ketcham announced, however, that he should not announce his coaching staff or season's plans till next week. As the Yale football system makes the captain's decision final his word will determine whether the suggestions made tonight can be carried out or not. Several of the speakers favored a resident coach chosen for several years. Others favored giving Walter Camp power as chief coach to direct the entire coaching and selecting such assistants as he decided. Other former head coaches were named as ideal directors of the coaching, including Frank Hinkey, Tom Shevlin and Howard Jones.

All the speakers asserted that Yale has been getting only meagre results under the present system. Arthur Howe, head coach last season was not present and Professor Robert Corwin, the only former football captain on the Yale faculty was also absent.

Nineteen sat at the banquet table including Captain-elect Ketcham and President Davis of the football association for next season.

Joe Keenan May Manage Berlin Club

BERLIN, Ont., Jan. 4.—While hardly seasonable for the sport Berlin got off to a good start when there was organized the Berlin Baseball Club, and the professional baseball franchise, owned by Pop Williams was purchased for $2,000, and professional baseball was assured for 1913.

A joint stock company was organized and fifteen of its stockholders were present at the meeting.

Dr. F. [illegible] Reisch was voted to the chair, and Edward Clement was appointed secretary.

The question of a manager was discussed, and Joe Keenan looked good to them although several others were spoken of.

Games next season will not be played in Roger Williams Park but new athletic grounds will be found satisfactory to all concerned.

OTTAWA, Jan. 4.—Eddie Gerard, one of the most brilliant amateur forwards in the game, may be forced out of hockey altogether on account of injuries received in football.

ARTILLERY GAMES TO OPEN INDOOR SEASON

Harvard and B. A. A. Track Teams Are Working Hard for Initial Meet.

POWERS TO ENTER MILE

Unicorn Club Lacks Material for Field Events; Johnstone Among Entries.

New England athletes will have their first chance to compete indoors on January [illegible] when the Coast Artillery Corps will conduct its annual athletic meet in the Irvington Street Armory.

The Harvard and B. A. A. track teams have been training several weeks for the indoor season at the Irvington Oval. [illegible] several of the men competed in the [illegible] championships held in New York [illegible] the bulk of the track team will [illegible] opportunity to receive active [illegible] until the Artillery meet.

Owing to the Fordham University holding a set of games in New York on the same night it is doubtful if the Unicorn [illegible] will compete against Harvard [illegible] as this is the only available date open to both teams. Harvard will enter its first team in the Artillery games so as to give the coaches an opportunity to size up the material on hand for a winning team.

If the Harvard relay team does not meet the B. A. A. in a mile relay it is possible that they will compete against a team from that organization.

Powers, the star B. A. A. miler will [illegible] half or mile event while Holland will also run one of these events. It is doubtful if these two men will oppose each other at this meet, as such a race would not be productive of the best results so early in the season.

These men are natural rivals over the mile route, but have not yet completed [illegible] Holland returning from [illegible] on his return home from the Olympic games. ## Fear Clash on New Ring Weights

Foreign Club May Fix Schedule

By W. W. NAUGHTON

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 4.—The New York Boxing Commission's revised schedule of weights is causing lots of argument, and that in itself is a hopeful sign. Now, if England or France or Australia will refrain from [illegible]mitting a somewhat different classification the boxing centres of the world may be able to adopt a common schedule, something they have never been able to do up to the present.

NEW YORK SCHEDULE NOT NEW.

The trouble with these things [illegible] the heel of "new lightweights" and there are others no doubt.

It is a notorious fact that [illegible] is no apparent reason why [illegible]

Hard to Discipline.

Well, if a world's champion becomes [illegible] In the direction named, it [illegible] hard to discipline him at least until the new schedule has world wide [illegible] and support. But so far as this country is concerned, there is no way in which the New York Athletic Commission can assert its authority.

Training as the basis of argument that the New York commission is the only committee in this country bearing any resemblance to a parent body, and that there is an inclination in other cities to look up to it as such, why couldn't the commission set aside a certain sum from the State revenue derived from boxing, which is said to be considerable, for the purchase of belts or medals or other insignia indicative of championship excellence.

These trophies need not be expensive, but you can bet your life they would be prized [illegible] the commission let it be known that [illegible] championship would be complete [illegible]

These championship belts or badges or whatever they were would have to be won in contests in which the new weights were abided by and they would, for obvious reasons, be simply emblematic of the boxing championships of the United States. It is not to be supposed that New York would care to furnish regalia for king pin [illegible] among all nations.

It may be that New York would be in a [illegible] position to inaugurate a movement of the kind mentioned if it would amend its boxing law so as to have boxing matches passed upon by a referee. Then the big city itself no doubt would be the scene of the greatest of the championship events.

Flutter Among Lightweights.

What a flutter there will be among the front row men in the lightweight division if it is decided that that high water mark of the class will be 135 pounds instead of 133 in future.

Already Ad Wolgast, who seems to think that he is merely away from his championship stronghold on vacation, has "let out a yell" that might have been heard on the Atlantic seaboard. It can be seen at a glance that if Wolgast is restored to power he will insist on doing business at the old 133-pound standard, New York or no New York.

As for Willie Ritchie, he is such a pleasant [illegible]natured, mild-spoken fellow that there is no telling how the two-pound uplift appeals to him. A little bird whispered, though, that Willie will take very kindly to the extra weight, even though he may make it appear while doing so that he is merely consenting to the extension out of courtesy to the gentlemen of the commission back in Gotham.

Packey McFarland will certainly rejoice in his heart if the new schedule takes [illegible] for a bare two pounds has kept Packey out of the lightweight lists for years. Jack Britton will also come under

SOLD TO

R. H. WHITE CO.

Butler's Apparel Shops Washington and Winter Streets

FOR THE GREATEST BARGAIN SALE BOSTON HAS EVER SEEN

Important Notice

Little stores come and go. Manufacturers go out of business and sacrifice their stocks. Factories close down and big bargains result. That is the course of trade.

BUT THE FAILURE OF A BIG RETAIL STORE, FORTUNATELY, IS ONE OF THE RAREST HAPPENINGS IN BUSINESS.

When circumstances DO bring about such an unusual event, however, the law of compensation distributes its benefits.

The failure of the Butler Store (which opened only last September, chock full of new stocks) and the necessity of settling accounts with the Butler creditors, forced Butler's store to close its doors—induced the Receivers and the U. S. District Court to accept the spot cash offer of R. H. White Co., and now makes possible this sale — which begins Monday, January 6th.

All other sales—wherever or whenever they may be held—are insignificant compared with this GREAT DISPOSAL OF THE FAILED BUTLER CO. STORES AT PRACTICALLY HALF PRICES.

New Rules for This Sale

GOV. FELKER'S ELECTION OPENS NATIONAL FIGHT ON NEW LINES

Political Leaders Declare the Granite State Will Be First Battle Ground of the Progressive and Conservative Parties

Felker First Democratic Governor Since 1874, but Through Coalition a Progressive Was Chosen Speaker of the House

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 4.—According to many of the Wise Men of New Hampshire the first great battle between what they say will be the two great American political parties of the future—the Conservatives and the Progressives—is about to begin on Granite State soil.

This, the Wise Men say, is the real significance of the coalition of a day or two ago, out of which has come a Progressive Speaker of the House of Representatives, a Democratic Council and the Hon. Samuel Demeritt Felker, first Democratic Governor of New Hampshire since 1874.

There has already been some skirmishing. There will be more in the next ten days. And then on Tuesday the fifteenth, when the balloting begins for a United States Senator to succeed Henry E. Burnham of Manchester, the conflict will begin to look like war.

The Conservatives are arming for the fray. The progressives of all parties will [illegible] as it arises. They seem to be more or less in the hands of Fate.

The new Democratic Governor is one of those who has seen a vision of the new alignment.

Governor Felker is fifty-three years old. He is an attorney at law in the little city of Rochester, on the Maine border. He is also a farmer, on the outskirts of town. The Felker farm comprises 400 acres. It includes one farm that has been in the possession of the family for a century. It is a real farm, too, for the Felkers cut 200 tons of hay, keep sixty head of cattle and have six horses.

He said to an AMERICAN correspondent:

There is going to be a progressive party in the politics of the United States, and it is my fervent hope that this progressive party will be the Democratic party.

"No Bed of Roses."

Much depends upon the course of the Democratic leaders in Washington, and particularly upon their handling of the tariff. It seems to me that the only possible chance of the return of the OLD Republican party to power lies in a fluke by our party on the tariff.

We are just beginning a three-month session of the New Hampshire Legislature. I do not expect to find the government a bed of roses.

Thirty Progressives—followers of Theodore Roosevelt, Governor Robert Perkins Bass and Winston Churchill—placed Felker in the Governor's chair.

These thirty Progressives had been elected to the State Legislature on the Republican ticket. Their Progressive connections were well known, but Republican bosses and Republican newspapers had snapped the whip and the young Progressives had been expected to step in line.

The young Progressives refused to obey. They said the election of "Sam" Felker was the will of the people of New Hampshire, and they pointed to the vote in November:

Samuel D. Felker, Democrat....34,203
Franklin Worcester, Republican..32,504
Winston Churchill, Progressive..14,401
William H. Wilkins, Socialist.. 1,674
Alva H. Morrill, Prohibitionist.. 496

In nearly every other State of the Union this vote of the people would have elected Mr. Felker, but the Constitution of the Granite State demands that:

If no person shall have a MAJORITY of votes the Senate and House of Representatives shall, by a joint ballot, elect ONE OF THE TWO persons having the highest number of votes, who shall be declared Governor.

There Was No Deal.

This provision of the Constitution compelled the Legislature to elect. At the same time, you observe, it debarred the Progressives from voting for Churchill.

As it happened, the people had not only voted for State officers, in November, but had adopted a proposed amendment to the Constitution removing the "majority" clause and calling merely for a "plurality."

Republican statesmen, editors and organization leaders—together with the louder and ugly crew of lobbyists for insurance brewery, textile and railroad interests—at once set up the claim that this amendment to the Constitution would not become effective until the election of 1914.

Both sides grabbed for law books and dug for precedents, while the little band of Progressives went into caucus and decided that the people meant what they said, when they gave Felker the top vote in November, and that, if the Progressives could bring it about, the people should have Felker for their Governor.

CARL H. DURCKS, WHO FIGURED IN TRIPLE TRAGEDY

Mrs. Grover Cleveland Back to White House

Late President's Widow to Greet Guests from Rug on Which She Was Married.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—President and Mrs. Taft will give a dinner at the White House on Saturday, January 11, in honor of Mrs. Grover Cleveland, who will come to Washington next Tuesday as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond. This will be the first time Mrs. Cleveland has been in the White House since she left it at the close of her husband's term as President.

With Mrs. Cleveland will be her fiance, Professor J. T. Preston, and her daughter, Miss Esther Cleveland, both of whom will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hammond.

President and Mrs. Taft will greet Mrs. Cleveland and her party in the Blue room, standing on the same famous [illegible] eagle rug on which the beautiful Frances Folsom and Grover Cleveland stood to be married.

When Miss Esther Cleveland was last in the White House she was just beginning to walk and talk.

The entire two weeks which Mrs. Cleveland plans to spend in Washington are to be made weeks of rejoicing at her return to the city in which she once was queen. Her friends are planning many entertainments in her honor. A brilliant luncheon is to be given by Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter, Mrs. Henry F. Dimock will give a large musicale and Mrs. John Hays Hammond will give a reception and musicale.

Miss Frances Brooks, granddaughter of General James Wilson, who was military aide to President Cleveland, will entertain Miss Esther Cleveland.

Middleboro an Hour too Late or an Hour too Early After Night of Big Wind

MIDDLEBORO, Jan. 4.—A good deal of sympathy is manifested in this town tonight for everybody in Newport News, Norfolk, Va., and all other communities which suffered by last night's wind storm.

The gale stopped the clock on the Central Baptist Church, across Temple place from the Town House. As a consequence, so much of Middleboro as wasn't an hour late to work this morning turned up at the shoe shops an hour ahead of time. The clock stopped at 6:45. Those who looked at it, and walked on unquestioning, were at the shop doors before they were opened. Those who waited for the clock to strike kept on waiting.

"Jim" Sheehan had Morse's drug store opened, the windows cleaned and the counters cleared off an hour before there were customers on the street, while Bourne Wood, at the rival pharmacy, came down to find that Chief of Police Swift had been waiting twenty minutes for his 1913 almanac.

The stopping of the old clock was a great blow to town pride. It was the first time the old timepiece had failed in a generation. Janitor "Charley" Goodwin says he is "all broke up" over it.

According to Mr. Goodwin the clock has been sort of shame-faced all day.

Taft and Roosevelt Pass Each Other By

President and His Predecessor Shun Each Other at the Funeral of Ambassador Reid.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Although President Taft and former President Roosevelt were in proximity to each other during funeral services for Ambassador Whitelaw Reid in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine today, neither recognized the other. Each looked straight ahead and there was nothing in the demeanor of either to indicate that they had once been warm friends. This was the first time they had met for about eighteen months.

STRANGE TRAGEDIES BARED BY SUICIDE

Carl Durcks, One of 3 Half-Breed Indian Boys Sent from Pacific by Father; All Dead.

MONEY GONE, SHOT SELF

Youth Was in Love with Pretty Stoneham Girl, and Leaves a Sister in Newton.

Behind the dramatic story of the suicide of Carl H. Durcks, the seventeen-year-old boy who shot himself in a fit of remorse, and who, it is believed, planned to end the life of his sister, Pauline, at their home, No. 11 Marlboro street, Newton, a week ago Friday, is the story of a greater tragedy, that of the [illegible] battle of the half Indian sons of a rich Aleutian Island trader to cope with the young men with whom they came in contact in the States.

Two older brothers of Carl, furnished with a small fortune in cash when they became of age, left their home in the freezing, half-civilized North Pacific, and came to this country for an education.

The oldest of the trio headed for the Eastern States, but never reached his destination. The civilization of the West, or the climate, did not agree with him. He fell ill. His money went in some way that his relatives never learned, and he died.

The second brother, thinking that he would find more congenial companionship at Carlisle Indian School in Pennsylvania, went there for a time, but he had too much money and there were too many ways in which to spend it. Reports came from the university that he gambled, that, reaching a recklessness that blotted out thought of the future, he risked his [illegible] $10,000, on the turn of a card [illegible] lost. What became of him is not known. It was reported that he, too, like the youngest of the three boys, shot himself.

Mother Was an Indian.

Married to an Indian wife, Henry Durcks, of German descent, although he had sold his possessions, still remained in the North. He probably realized the futility of attempting to move [illegible]. But he had ambitions for his two youngest children, Pauline and Carl.

What was the use of a great fortune rolled up in the fur trading business of the ice country, unless it could make something worth while out of his children. Carl and Pauline should have an education—they should come to Boston to obtain it.

And it was following this decision that the two children came a year ago from the bleak, crude North to the quiet, cultured Newton section of Massachusetts in quest of that training that it was impossible to obtain at home.

Carl Durcks had money and that seemed to be about his only friend. There was one charming exception—Geraldine Duplin, a bright, attractive girl of Stoneham, where the brother and sister from the Alaskan country lived for a time. Geraldine is fourteen. She liked the backward, generous-hearted boy who proved such an "easy mark" in many ways for many of his boy companions.

Played the Stock Market.

With an environment so vastly different from that of his island home—slow, backward, ashamed of his ignorance, dubbed "The Eskimo," by boys who showed a lower grade of civilization, Carl fell a ready prey to any one who pretended to be his friend.

Following this sort of advice the inexperienced Indian boy tried to make money in the stock market, listening to like unwise counsel, he purchased an automobile; he spent his money right and left, goaded to it by companions who pretended to be his friends. It is said that the young man had between $3,000 and $5,000 to last him for a year.

The money slipped through his fingers rapidly. One day he took stock of what he had left and found his surplus amounted to just $500. It was then that he was induced to buy a certain aviation stock. It was a last desperate attempt to recoup his diminished fortune, for his father had written him that he would not send him any more money.

The stock proved worthless. Like his two older brothers, Carl found himself at the end of his resources in a strange land, where with few exceptions money had been his only friend. His sister would have helped him out of her allowance which she had not spent, but he could not take her money.

Had Threatened Suicide.

It was in this frantic condition that the young man found himself when he ended his life. A new story is now told as to what preceded the tragedy. In brief it is this:

Carl had an attack of [illegible] and a [illegible] fever [illegible] threatened to take his life. His sister [illegible] did not quiet the [illegible] man took hold of him and [illegible] him on a bed using only as much force as was required.

A [illegible] exposing a revolver. The [illegible] for the weapon. It fell to the floor. The boy grabbed it and shot himself.

His mad act was a great shock to his little friend Geraldine Duplin. She had tried to cheer up the despondent boy, making an extra effort because it was Christmas time. He had promised to take dinner on Christmas day at her home, and she had secured a photograph of herself, which she intended to give him. But he did not keep the dinner engagement.

HUNDREDS OF GIRLS FIGHT NEW HAVEN

STORM THE TICKET OFFICE

Leading Citizens Are with Girls in Their Agitation Against Advance.

TAUNTON, Mass., Jan. 4.—It looks like a suffragette war upon New Haven passenger rates. The several hundred young girls of this city who are employed in the Attleboro jewelry factories have been hard hit by the new commutation rates which went into effect on the N. Y., N. H. & H. Railroad this week.

The Attleboro Board of Trade, Taunton business men, Attleboro Jewelry Manufacturers' Association and hundreds of commuters are protesting against the new rate and plan a lively campaign. Senator William Bellamy of the district, which comprises Taunton and Attleboro, has taken up the matter and has already sent a communication to the chief passenger agent, A. B. Smith. Petitions circulated in Taunton and Attleboro have been signed by thousands.

All commuters are hard hit by the new rate, but the young girls who ride on half tickets have been struck the hardest. They feel they are being made to pay more than others who can afford it better.

Less for Longer Ride.

The monthly rate to Boston was $12.60, and is now $10.95, a decrease of $1.65, which is a big saving for the well-to-do business men, who make up the largest part of the Boston travel. The rate from Taunton to Attleboro which was $4.80, has been raised to $5.85, an increase of $1.05.

But this is not all. The half ticket books have been abolished. The young people less than eighteen years of age, whose tickets cost $2.40 per month, are now called on to pay $5.35.

The protest from Attleboro business men is based on the fact that help from other places cannot afford to come into the [illegible] here is far too small to furnish the desired help. There is very little objection to the change in the general rates for the district, but everybody is up in arms because the girl workers are made to bear the burden.

Surround Ticket Office.

There was a small riot on New Year's eve at the central station, when more than a hundred girls and young men stormed the ticket office and demanded three months' books at the old rate. The excuse was made that the supply was exhausted, but they continued their demonstration until their demands were granted. The police were called before the trouble ended.

Miss Sadie Placeton, who led the assault on the ticket office, said to an AMERICAN reporter: "It is a shame to tax us more than we are paying now. Why, where do they think we are going to get off, paying them all our salary for car fare? We are going to fight until there is some reduction coming.

Miss Maydell Sympson said, "I have been paying $2.40 and have now got to pay $5.85. It is altogether too much. It isn't fair."

The girls have the support of several hundred in their agitation. They plan to await the result of the petition. Asked what they intended to do if concessions were not granted, Miss Placeton said, "We will march several hundred strong to the street railway office and ask that special accomodations be made for early cars to Attleboro. Many of us are willing to pay five or ten cents more than the usual fare if early cars will be run to Attleboro. We will never stand for the present New Haven road rates."

Senator Bellamy, Representatives Ducharme, and Wordell and President Westcoat of the Taunton Business Men's Association, are in full sympathy with the girls' fight and will assist them in every way possible.

Many jewelry workers intended to quit work rather than pay the new rates. But many of the manufacturers purchased tickets and sold them to their help for the old rate, so as to hold them until some result comes from the protest.

NELLA BERGEN AND DE WOLF HOPPER

Actor Who Recites "Casey at the Bat" Does Not Contest Suit Brought in L. I.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Mrs. Ellen Bergen Hopper, known to the stage as Nella Bergen, began an action for absolute divorce against DeWolf Hopper, the comic opera star, today before Supreme Court Justice [illegible] in the Nassau County Court, at Mineola, Long Island.

The bill of particulars was signed by John F. Craven, who made affidavit that Hopper committed indiscretions while in his company last July. No children have resulted from the marriage and Mrs. Hopper asks for no alimony. No defence was interposed by the comedian. Justice [illegible] der reserved decision.

Mrs. Nella Bergen Hopper is the fourth wife of DeWolf Hopper. He married his first wife in Ohio before he entered upon his stage career, but was later divorced and married Ida Mosher, a member of the old McCall Opera Company, of which Hopper was leading man. Another divorce made it possible for Hopper to marry the diminutive Edna Wallace. At this time it was believed he was engaged to wed Della Fox.

Edna Wallace Got Divorce.

Edna Wallace Hopper fled her husband's company while they were playing in "El Capitan" and was granted a divorce. Nella Bergen (her stage name) was named as corespondent. She was the divorced wife of James Bergen, an actor. She and Hopper were married in London on October 2, 1899.

Hopper's matrimonial affairs have always been a standing joke at the Lambs' Club. A number of years ago, after his fourth plunge, it was said there that the club was arranging a football match between the [illegible] ex-wives' husbands. Hopper has also been the butt of much good-natured [illegible] on the matrimonial race between [illegible] Lillian Russell and Nat Goodwin.

A great deal of speculating is on at present as to who will be the fifth wife of the much-married DeWolf Hopper—if Mrs. Bergen Hopper gets her divorce.

Every time Hopper appears the gallery gods insist that he must recite "Casey at the Bat," and he has to.

Wife Born in 1873.

Hopper's first [illegible] was [illegible] in 1878 [illegible] in "Wang," [illegible] "El Capitan" [illegible] "The Pied Piper." [illegible]

Nella Bergen, Hopper's fourth wife, was born in 1873. She made her first [illegible] appearance as a ballad vocalist under the direction of the famous P. S. Gilmore, the bandmaster. She made her bow on the stage in 1895 in "The Fencing Master." With her husband she appeared in "Wang," "Happyland" and others of the shows in which he starred.

WIESBADEN, Jan. 4.—Charles W. Morse, the convicted financier, freed by President Taft, has been taking the strongest cure Wiesbaden has—a daily kochbrunnen bath seven days weekly for two weeks. He received no private visitors, but did receive a visitor from the American Consulate at Frankfort. He mixed to a small extent with the people staying at the hotel, but did no entertaining. He told some persons whom he met in the hotel he was suffering from severe rheumatic gout. He attended the hotel concert on Christmas Day with his wife, who looked after him with meticulous care.

He drank no wine throughout his stay, and used to go out to see his physician, Dr. Gebelnarth Pfeiffer. Toward the end of his stay he did not believe he would last out to the end of the cure. "No one could stand it," he is quoted as saying.

OIL "RIVALS" IN ODD ACCORD AS GASOLINE PRICE GOES UP

Standard Oil Co., Gulf Refining Co. and Independent Texas Petroleum Co. Raise the Rate to Seventeen Cents a Gallon

Inquiring Consumers Ponder the Fact That They Get the Same Excuse at Each Office—"Higher Cost, More Use, Shortage"

Agreement Indignantly Denied by All Concerns, but Garage Owners and Others Who Are Paying Increase Are Skeptical

BOSTON garage owners and other users of gasoline yesterday saw evidence of a combination arbitrarily to fix the price of that commodity, in the advances ordered by the Standard Oil and other companies.

Recent developments tend to strengthen a well grounded suspicion that the Standard Oil Company, the Gulf Refining Company, so-called, and the supposedly independent Texas Petroleum [illegible] practically amount to the same thing.

All three concerns today charge [illegible] a gallon flat at wholesale [illegible] ply gasoline, in any quantity, at a stated contract price [illegible] excuses advanced in [illegible] such a close resemblance [illegible] stereotyped expression [illegible] one central and secret authority.

All Give Same Excuse

Inquiry was made yesterday [illegible] fices of all three companies [illegible] recent jump of gasoline to 17 cents a gallon, wholesale, when previous to January 1 many dealers, by contract, paid only 10 cents.

The increased price of crude petroleum, greater number of gasoline engines in use and danger of a shortage were cited at each office as reasons why the price had been advanced.

The strange fact that three rival businesses [illegible] not only [illegible] of one for gasoline, however, has aroused suspicion, which is almost strong enough to be a certainty.

Some Making Big Profit

The Boston News Bureau says:

The companies formerly composing the "oil trust," it is estimated, now control anywhere from 80 per cent to 90 per cent. of the entire gasoline production of the country. As an independent refiner puts it, the combined gasoline production of all the other companies is hardly a drop in the bucket. The significant fact is that all the companies selling in New England have followed the lead of the Standard Oil Company of New York. The nominal wholesale price is 17 cents, but it is understood [illegible] retailers in some cases are getting preferential treatment, paying around 14 cents a gallon. One of the largest garages in Boston, handling it is [illegible] about 150,000 gallons annually is paying 17 cents for gasoline [illegible] selling at 25 cents a gallon. Denies That Lawrence Serves as Argument for Immigration Restriction.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. Congressman James M. Curley of Massachusetts, who is fighting the literacy test in the proposed immigration restriction bill, said tonight that conditions in Lawrence provide no argument for the literacy test.

The arguments of our opponents said Mr. Curley, "have been to the effect that conditions in Lawrence would be an index to those of this country as a whole. Lawrence is a city of 85,000 people. Its population is largely foreign born. Its mill workers are of a most peaceful character. President Wilson, Mr. Curley declared, has been misled.

MINISTER URGES LEGALIZED BOXING

Rev. F. B. Boyer of New Bedford Says Good, Clean Amateur Bouts Are All Right.

Legalized boxing is urged by the Rev. Francis B. Boyer of New Bedford, who is a cousin of Mrs. "Jack" Gardner, the Boston patron of fine arts.

The Rev. Mr. Boyer is rector of St. Martin's Episcopal Church. He thinks that boxing should be encouraged along legitimate lines. He would put it in charge of athletic clubs like the B. A. A., with a boxing commission to see that "professionals" are barred.

Six-ounce gloves, no tickets sold, and keep the New York and San Francisco boxer out of the State—these are among Pastor Boyer's suggestions.

Saw Nothig Brutal.

"The bouts were staged in a cleanly and well-ventilated place," said Pastor Boyer, "and I saw nothing that I could call debasing or brutal in the exhibition. The crowd did not seem to be thirsting for gore, and as for profane language, I did not hear as much as I have at one of our public playgrounds during one of the ball games at Buttonwood Park last Summer.

"I did not go to the bouts with the idea of spying or acting as a detective. I do not believe this is a clergyman's duty. A number of the members of my parish are in the habit of attending boxing bouts, and I wanted to see for myself just what they witnessed.

I have seen much rougher bouts in gymnasiums. In fact, I have boxed myself with friends when I took and gave harder blows than those exchanged in the Warren Club bouts. In the Intercity Church League in New York, I have seen bouts that were much rougher. I believe thoroughly in the art of boxing and would like to see the sport developed in Massachusetts. I am opposed to the professional boxer, however. Fighting for the sake of the dollars and cents there is in it does not appeal to me and should be stopped.

Would Encourage Sport.

I believe that boxing should be encouraged in every way by legitimate efforts. I would like to see legislation introduced that would leave the control of boxing in the hands of legitimate athletic clubs, such as the B. A. A., and a commission appointed to see that professionals are debarred from participating in so-called exhibitions."

The commission should be empowered to appoint referees and other officials to see that the boxing laws are lived up to. [illegible] should be staged by bona fide athletic clubs and if possible the selling of admission tickets should be prohibited.

I do not approve of less than six-ounce gloves. We use six-ounce gloves in our own parish house. Here the boys pound each other in a vigorous way, but the six-ounce gloves offset any possibility of brutality.

I believe in any sport that tends to develop the physical condition of our young men and I know that boxing promotes the health and welfare of all that participate in the sport. I think it a splendid thing for young men, many of them working in the mills in an abnormal temperature, to devote their spare time in building up their body by boxing, and I believe the sport should be encouraged in every way possible.

"A Splendid Exercise."

"Boxing is a splendid exercise and teaches men the art of self-defence. Like all sports, objectionable features can be found in the manner boxing is conducted in this State, but the bad can be eliminated and the good preserved. I don't believe in dropping a thing because there are a few bad features in it. Let the State take hold of the matter and pass laws ensuring the legitimate promotion of boxing, and it will be a fine thing. Keep the New York and Frisco boxer out of Massachusetts and encourage the youth of our cities to become proficient in the art, and the State will be better off physically and morally."

Amazing New Child Labor Abuses Found in North End Within Last Six Days

Wee Girl of Five by Working Long Hours Daily Makes 60 Cents Weekly

Heartbreaking Conditions, Crying Aloud for Relief, Discovered In Cleveland Place.

By PHILIP J. HALVOSA.

MARY MAINIO, of Cleveland place, five years old, at work on artificial flowers to be sold on the streets when opportunity offered.

ROSINI CASSADINI, aged eight and anaemic, making paper windmills on the same street, to sell to other and more fortunate children.

NINA SASSI, a skilled worker at nine years old, crocheting on underwear from six to twelve hours a day for 53 cents a week.

THIS is a brief outline of child labor abuses discovered in and around Cleveland place, at the North End, by the factory work investigation during the last six days.

While in some respects even more amazing than the evils disclosed by the Sunday AMERICAN since its first exclusive story on child slavery in Greater Boston was published, however, the conditions obtaining among these little toilers only typifies child-life in general at the "foothills of the gastank."

The most densely populated street in Greater Boston, with violent crimes so common that the police have named it "murderers' row," Cleveland place furnishes scores of examples of child labor abuses.

Artificial flowers, paper wind-mills, underwear crocheting, knee-pants, cheap vests and even women's clothing, are turned out in a steady stream by its over-crowded tenement-house workers.

Equally startling child-labor abuses were found scattered throughout the entire district. The only difference in the other instances was that the evil did not seem to be so intensified, because the density of the population was not so overpowering.

Some Specific Instances.

Two little girls, aged seven and nine, whose names could not be secured, were found working late at night stripping tobacco in a basement cigar-factory near the junction of Sheaf and Charter streets.

Less than three blocks away, on Salem street, and accompanied by his two-year-old baby sister, a boy of eleven was discovered at work in a dimly lighted bakeshop owned by his father.

Numerous other little children, who attended school during the day, were found working far into the night, and invariably the money received by the entire family of home-workers averaged less than $4 a week.

Some of the most skilful of the women home-workers, by incessant and long hours of labor, average $3.50 a week; but this is exceptional. The usual wage earned by the adult worker totals only to $2.50 a week, and sixty cents a week is about the limit wage among children.

Little Mary Mainio, the five-year-old artificial flower maker of Cleveland place, lives at the top floor of a four-story tenement house, about midway between Snowhill and Margaret streets. In common with the ordinary tenement house there, there is no number on the door, but the neighborhood children all seem to know this little girl flower maker.

Mary has two elder brothers and a baby sister. With the exception of the baby, the whole family assists in the flower making. The baby is too small to work yet, being only eighteen months old. He sometimes plays at flower making, using the brightly colored pieces of waste paper thrown on the floor by the elder children, but he doesn't do any real work. The father peddles through the streets the flowers made by the mother and her children.

Mary is a bright-eyed child, with intensely black hair and eyes so deep-sunk that they, too, seem black, although they really are a dark brown. She is said to be one of the most artistic of the many child flower makers in the district. The family occupies three rooms.

When found by the factory home-work investigators this little one was at work on artificial snow-drops. The call for paper flowers, she said, had fallen off since the Christmas holidays. The scarcity of green leaves, which are attached to some of the flowers made, also was asserted to have its effect on the market. This combination of circumstances made trade dull for the father and Mary's work easier.

Has Earned 60 Cents a Week.

The baby-girl artificial flower-maker of Cleveland place has been known to earn as high as 60 cents a week for her parents. She does not do as well at present, owing to the dull season. She is looking forward to the time she will be old enough to attend day-school. Every moment of her time, outside of a few play periods, is taken up now with flower making.

Rosini Cassadini, aged eight and living in a basement tenement almost opposite the street from the Mainio child, makes paper wind-mills for her father to sell to other children, the more fortunate children, who don't have to do home-work for a living.

The family is made up of the father and mother and five other children, all older than Rosini. The older children scarcely ever help to make the paper wind mills now, this being left to Rosini and her mother, for they all do outside work that pays them better wages. This little one appears to be suffering from anaemia. The family eats, works and sleeps in three basement rooms.

Nina Sassi, the nine-year-old crocheter of underwear, was found in a rear tenement on the second floor of a Cleveland place house near the Snowhill street entrance to this narrow thoroughfare. For crocheting a rough lace edging around the neck and sleeves of women's union suits, taken from the factory in her mother's name, she gets fifty-three cents a dozen garments.

Unusually skilful and as untiring workers [illegible] garments a week.

During the vacation [illegible] ed in [illegible] her [illegible] ted, $1.12. But her [illegible]

Grazia Scurtino, aged eight and the eld[est] [illegible] three children, was [illegible] another Cleveland place sweatshop, a few houses distant. With several other dresses the garment had been turned over to Mrs. [illegible] to finish, by an uptown dressmaker [illegible]

Rich Satin in Hovel.

The creamy gloss of the rich white satin wedding gown upon which she was employed, stitching the hem, was a vivid contrast to the sickly pallor of the child's cheeks and the squalid poverty of the two room attic tenement in which the family lived.

That the beautiful wedding gown being finished under such unwholesome surroundings came from the establishment of some aristocratic dressmaker could not be questioned.

Equally undeniable was the self-evident fact that this garment was destined to be worn by some favorite of fortune, some blushing bride from the Back Bay, perhaps [illegible] ing among the workers who made her wedding gown.

Up and down the densely populated street, in almost every one of the crowded tenement houses visited, similar conditions of child labor obtained. The minor details differed only in the nature of the kind of home factory work taken by each individual family.

No Law to Hamper.

There is no law upon the statute books of the State to prevent this practice. Neither the Board of Health nor the police can interfere. The school authorities are absolutely powerless in the matter if the individual child-toiler is under seven or over fourteen. And even when the children are of school age they can be worked incessantly before and after the school periods each day.

At top, some of the little victims who, in the time that they should have for play periods, have to crochet to earn a few cents daily. At left, boy taking home from factory work that his little brothers and sisters will have to work on far into the night. At bottom, more child mothers sewing for a pittance that seldom or never exceeds sixty cents a week.

TOBACCO KILLS CHOLERA.

Scientist Declares It Proved a Preventive in Hamburg.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—The scientist, M. Wenck, has drawn up a report which shows that tobacco is the most effective preventive against cholera.

EXTRA! MURDER DONE TO THE OPERA ITSELF

[illegible] "Louise" Paris Scene Ruthlessly Scuffed Out by Conductor.

By FREDERICK JOHNS

[illegible] Murder is always [illegible] of the opera [illegible] drama itself, and not one of the characters, that was slaught[ered].

A large [illegible] chunk of the famous [street] scene in Charpentier's "Louise" had been amputated by Mr. Cap[lain] [illegible] to shorten the opera. As [the street] scene is principally responsible [for the] [illegible] of "Louise" rather than the conventional love story, the cut had an appalling effect upon the performance.

Louise's conduct is excused by Charpentier because of the effect of life in Paris, and the author shows the spirit of that mad city by a picture of the night [illegible] is the picture, and the street [illegible] begins when Julian and his [illegible]

Like Golden Stairs, May Return.

[illegible] tells me, however, that it will come back, just as the golden stairs that Mr. Urban ejected from "Hansel and Gretel" are coming back as fast as the stage carpenter can reconstruct them.

The truth is that it is almost impossible to cut "Louise," and the elimination of the street scene, which is not absolutely essential to the plot, is a mistake because it is vital to the atmosphere.

Giovanni Zenatello appeared for the [illegible] as Julian and sang with the mannerisms of a true French tenor. Nobody would dream he was the roaring Italian tenor of "Aida" to hear his thin and beautiful lyric voice in "Louise." Zenatello is becoming a very great artist.

The appearance of Bernice Fisher as Camille was a pleasant feature. In other respects the cast was unchanged.

Double Bill Pleases Public.

At the popular performance last evening a big audience heard "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I Pagliacci," the famous double bill, which was put on for the first time this season.

Miss Edith Barnes, a Boston girl and Conservatory graduate, who has been [illegible]

Miss Elizabeth Amsden, who has been prevented by illness from singing important roles on subscription nights, sang Santuzza with fine tone and furious passion. [illegible]

GREATEST PROBLEM IN BOSTON: CAN SELF-RESPECTING WORKING WOMAN LIVE ON LESS THAN $8?

THE Sunday AMERICAN ... of Philadelphia ... self-respecting girl ... for less than $8 a week.

This annual event was sent broadcast over the country as a warning to women and girls who contemplate settling in that city and to prove to them that they must have at least $8 a week for their very necessary expenses, or have financial aid from their families.

This is the division made by the Philadelphia organization on the $8 a week basis:

|---|---|
| Room and two meals a day | $5.00 |
| Luncheons | 1.20 |
| Clothing and incidentals | 1.80 |
| Total per week | $8.00 |

The AMERICAN ... letters that would illuminate the situation ... young girl of New England who seeks work in Boston, where there are ... dangers that beset self-supporting girls who secure work at an inadequate wage.

To stimulate interest in the discussion, the AMERICAN offers to pay $10 each for the five letters that are adjudged to be the best and most helpful. And for the ten letters adjudged to be the next best, the AMERICAN will pay the writer $5 each.

This newspaper hopes that women and girls who have had experience in shops, stores, factories, in fact in any avenue of employment whatsoever, and who have had experience in boarding houses, rooming houses or small flats, either alone or with associates, will write at once, giving all information at their disposal. These letters will be published from time to time in the AMERICAN. Address The AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass.

The AMERICAN has the names and addresses of the writers of the letters that follow. The letters are worth reading and studying in full. And it will be apparent to even the most casual reader that the young woman who is paid only $8 a week is not far from the borderland of starvation. It is not hard to read a pitiful story between the lines of most of the letters.

No Carfare to Pay.

Editor AMERICAN:

For two years I ... in an office in Malden ... the boss handing me $8 every Saturday evening ... a great favor.

For $1.50 per week I ... room ... respectable neighborhood ... with a private family. The room was on the third floor back, and in Winter was very comfortable with gas stove heat when needed, but in Summer the room was symbolic of that place that is not situated in the higher region.

I ... into a boarding house frequented mostly by ... and ... business college students. The breakfast served was ... to a small ... and ... for lunch we usually had a very good soup, one other course, with two vegetables for 20 cents, and dinner was served at 6 p. m. at 25 cents, making 60 cents per day, or for seven days board, $4.20, and for board and room, $5.70 per week, leaving me $2.30.

I had no car fare to pay, but I must dress neatly and be clean at the office ... laundry ... eating my luxuries away.

By wearing a dark blue ... waist alternately with light tailored waists, I reduced the laundry a little. I tried to do a bit of laundry in the set tubs in the kitchen, but found there was always some sort of ... or everyone was waiting for the tubs, so I did not intrude oftener than was unavoidable.

I could not find a satisfactory wash woman. For a time I got some ... work done for 50 cents per week, but there were collars and ... which best I could do, brought ... bill to 69 cents, leaving only $1.61 for necessary clothing.

Now, out of $1.61 per week a woman in an office must look neat and trim, she must have at all seasons a tailored suit, a stylish but plain hat, smart collars and ties, jabot always clean, and a happy disposition and smile.

I am a plain little woman, and had no gentleman friend, so I couldn't do all that; over a year ago I resigned my job, took a position in an institution out of Massachusetts as a maid, have since put money in the bank, am out of debt, well dressed and clean.

AUSTIN FARM MODEL FOR CARE OF INSANE

Daily Occupation and Outdoor Exercise Are Bringing Excellent Results.

By C. O'CONNELL GALVIN.

Boston's yearly share of this bill is $400,000 in round numbers, not including appropriations for buildings.

Within a very few years, my those who have studied the problem for years, Massachusetts will be footing a bill of $4,500,000 per year for the care of her men and women who are mentally deranged and helpless.

The people who pay this colossal sum have a right to ask where their money goes, what is done with it, is every dollar properly and carefully expended? Are the victims of mental disease in whom interest this great expenditure is made being honestly and humanely cared for? Are the taxpayers getting full value for their money?

A tour of the great asylum at Austin Farm, which I made this week, enables me to report with emphasis that, at least, so far as this institution for the insane is concerned, the people are getting full value for their money and the inmates are taken care of with humanity and good sense, while the system of medical supervision keeps in harmony with the latest scientific research.

Humane Methods Prevail.

Austin Farm asylum is large enough to be a town. Its buildings being in detached groups are reckoned by the score. A burn, a catastrophe by fire, while a fine system of drainage, well lighted sewers protect it possible, in stormy weather to move from one building to another in comfort.

After spending an entire afternoon in going through this immense hospital, for such it is, rather than an asylum or place of mere detention—it is gratifying to write that the most humane atmosphere fills the institution and it is reflected in the kind and considerate bearing of all who are officially connected with it.

My visit, and the observation which it afforded, was valuable because it was wholly unexpected.

Visits to public institutions of this kind usually find everybody in official control on dress parade. It is the popular impression that the coming of the Governor and his committee of the Legislature or the advent of the State Board of Trustees is "looked ahead" to and quite picturesque changes. When the callers arrive they are taken carefully in charge and the tour of the institution finds every pin in place, every cup and saucer bright and shining, every table cloth and bed white as snow, and every patient pleased and contented and on the road to recovery.

Five minutes before I entered the office at the Austin Farm Asylum I was unknown to those in charge, and certainly the fact of my coming was equally unknown.

From the beginning I was treated with the utmost courtesy by the assistant superintendent, Dr. Samuel K. Cvitkendon, who was my guide through the institution.

Buildings Well Arranged.

From the administration building through wards and dining rooms, dormitories, bath rooms, kitchens, recreation rooms, sun parlors and work rooms—these last to my mind the most important of all—down into the bakery, the dynamo and the boiler houses finally, into the big laundry where fully 80 per cent of the workers were patients, all of them all busy and mercifully engaged in some useful work suited to their mental condition, doing and arranging to give the institutions washing of the care I inspire, all this I saw was necessary to the last degree. But everything good in its way does not always please the eye and comfort, and it is all attained in many of the finest of the institutions of the kind. Not so here. Austin Farm is treatment.

No corner of academic gild have its site. Its dining hall, its bath rooms are in terms of rest and recreation its fine order. Everywhere was everywhere. The fresh air and ample light which are experienced on every floor showed that neglect was in undisturbed possession of this place.

These patients who are mild and tract e and capable of certain degree of self control, are kept carefully apart from the restless and the violent. A classification which aids vastly towards improvement and ultimate recovery when such may be hoped for.

Patients screen, to be sure, abounded. These are to be expected, naturally, in such a place. Infinitesimal of the most extraordinary natures are herded on every side with affecting earnestness. But nowhere was there to be seen a struggle over of neglect or of ill treatment.

On the contrary those who have relatives and friends within these walls may find complete consolation in the thought that their afflicted dear ones are in a comfortable home, surrounded by every healthful influence that science and a generous community can provide and in charge of officials who, from the medical superintendent, Dr. Henry E. Hurst, and his chief assistant, Dr. Cvitkendon, down to the most junior on the staff, are animated by a spirit of kindness and sympathy toward those committed to their charge.

PASTOR JOHNSON IN FAVOR OF SUNDAY LICENSE PLAN: HITS "SHAMEFUL CONDITIONS"

[illegible]ing his hearty support to the proposal of the Board of License Commissioners that a limited number of licenses be granted for the sale of light wines and beers in cafes on Sundays the Rev. Herbert S. Johnson pastor of Warren Avenue Church, administers a stinging rebuke to those who are opposing the commissioners' suggestion.

The plan the board proposes, he says, is in the direction of moral reform, while opposing it is nothing short of pure hypocrisy.

From his long experience as a clergyman in the South End, the Rev. Dr. Johnson says the so-called second class hotel is as immoral an institution as anything of the kind can be. He cites instances of young girls frequenting those places and being supplied with liquor to their physical and moral ruin.

Wants No Hypocrisy.

Selling liquor in those places to the accompaniment of a leather sandwich is far worse, the clergyman declares, than licensing a well regulated saloon to sell beer and light wines in a legal manner.

Dr. Johnson says he "cares not a snap of his finger for the hypocritical appearance of goodness shown so much in this city. He calls upon the clergy to endorse the action of the License Commission.

The moral condition of this city on Sundays would be materially advanced by this action, according to him.

He makes an atonement for many things that he has said against the commission in the past, and applauds their efforts for the last six months to bring about real reforms in this city.

Here is his statement in full.

It is a combination of the saloon and the brothel. For thirteen years I have been familiar with this type of a hotel. I have also been familiar with conditions in the West [illegible] for twenty years. I [illegible] conditions in San Francisco, Denver and other places, and in all my travels I have seen nothing more openly shameful than what I have witnessed in these second class hotels in Boston.

When temperance people of this city, for the sake of appearance, say they are willing to make a fight against the Excise Commissioners, I would like to ask whether they are simply fighting for the shadow when they have already lost the substance.

I personally believe that we should wait before we attack the excise commissioners until we see whether their plan will put out of existence the abuses of the second-class hotels.

Would Improve Conditions.

I would rather see Massachusetts license certain saloons to sell beer and light wines than to see conditions that have prevailed and are prevailing in these hotels. To some, it may appear an anomaly for a clergyman to suggest issuing licenses to sell on the Sabbath day. However, if the excise commissioners do this, they are preparing to close barrooms of the second class hotels on the Sabbath and to substitute for these a limited number of saloons with open bars during certain hours of the Sabbath, selling beer and light wines to men only.

I am certain that the moral condition of the Sabbath would be substantially improved [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] my finger for the [illegible] appearance of goodness. I [illegible] for the closing up of combination saloons and brothels run wide open on a holy day.

During my experience in the South End I have personally seen the [illegible] of [illegible] second class hotels [illegible] have seen [illegible] middle life taking young women into them. These places, reeking with tobacco smoke and fumes of liquor, often re-echo to the loud laughter of drinking men and lewd women.

Since I have been in Boston I have come in contact with girls, victims of these second class hotels, coming to Warren Avenue Baptist Church [illegible] down in health and [illegible]

One of these women was plied with liquor in one of these so-called hotels until she died.

In another instance a girl was plied with liquor until she became intoxicated and fell out of a window into the alley below.

Such tragedies are bound to take place in such places.

I have frequently attacked the excise commissioners in the past. Latterly, I have come to the conviction that I have not been quite just in my attacks. They have worked for real reform in Boston during the past six months.

I wish to notice especially that they have compelled these hotels to exclude women from the privileges of the bar. Failing to do this they have lost their licenses.

If the excise commissioners were in league with the saloon, as many of the clergy suppose, why did they curtail certain privileges from these second-class hotels?

Since they have brought about some reforms in this matter, I have nothing else to do but become fair in my estimation of the purpose of the commissioners.

I am now ready to say, that I will not again attack the commissioners until I have appeared before them or have given them an opportunity to explain their position.

I ask all the clergy and temperance workers to show fair play to the commissioners, because they propose to substitute places selling light wines and beer for the second-class hotels, and this appeals to my best judgment.

Are the Attacks on New England's Railroad System Inspired or Directed from New York?

(Boston Correspondence in New York Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin, Jan. 2, 1913.)

The position which the friends of the New Haven take is that the critics of the road are doing as much to injure the material well being of Boston and New England as if they were the avowed enemies of this section of the country. A prominent Boston banker who returned a few days ago from a trip to the Pacific coast is quoted as saying that he was absolutely appalled to discover the extent to which the New England railroad situation engrossed the attention of Western shippers. The impression which prevails out there, he said, is that if all is true that is said by the yellow press regarding conditions here, New England is a good place to shun, so far as business is concerned.

ATTACK ON NEW HAVEN INSPIRED BY NEW YORK

Some of the friends of the New Haven go so far as to say that the attacks being made upon the company from all sides have been inspired by the railroad and financial interests of New York, who have no desire to see Boston in a position to compete for a larger share of the country's foreign and coastwise trade. What originally aroused their apprehension, it is declared, was the powers conferred upon the directors of the port of Boston to spend millions of dollars for the development of the waterfront, and the aggressive and thorough-doing fashion in which the port directors proceeded to carry out their duties. Realizing the possibility of the construction in Boston of docks and piers designed to accommodate the largest steamships afloat, or likely to be laid down for years to come, these New York railroad and financial interests are accused of having engaged in a campaign whose object was to belittle the importance of the work to be undertaken by the port directors, and to cripple the ability of the New England railroads to take advantage of the harbor and dock improvements when they had been completed. In support of this accusation it is pointed out that Boston has gained absolutely nothing during all the years the Boston & Albany road has been in the control of the New York Central interests.

KNOCKING NEW ENGLAND

(From the Melrose Evening News, Dec. 23.)

We are inclined to think that knocking the New Haven road is being overdone. When we knock the New Haven too hard we knock New England and we knock ourselves. The New Haven had a monopoly of the railroad lines in southern New England and the Boston & Maine a monopoly of the roads in the northern part. There is no one who will dispute the benefit of those monopolies over the score or more of half-starved, ill run lines that we had to contend with before the consolidations. They could not support themselves and they had to come under one strong hand. The next logical step was for the Boston & Maine and New Haven to act together. Both systems are in strong hands now and can get all the capital they need. But can they continue to get it if every public speaker, every man running for office comes out with a hammer against these systems, the success of which means so much to New England?

WHO IS TRYING TO DO MORE?

What part of this country needs ambition more than New England! What an object lesson of the dangers of ambition among honorable gentlemen President Mellen offers to the youth of the community!

Who has looked into his magnificent scheme of expansion in the interests of New England, showing the needs of a modern railroad, asking the authorities for permission to construct tunnels and terminals and to arrange his road to meet traffic conditions, and having this denied him because of the cry of "Monopoly" without wondering why this is so. His views appear sound enough to attract support from the biggest financial interests and why the Governors and the legislators do not extend to him the same conditions which irresponsible parties received under the guise of Grand Trunk affiliations is beyond comprehension.

Look at the health zone of Maine and New Hampshire! Where in the world is there a better one, and where is there a greater opportunity for attracting families of wealth? Suppose that Maine and New Hampshire had more Poland Springs, more Mt. Kineos and more Mt. Washingtons! Our people would be better accommodated, and transportation facilities improved. Who can do more or is trying to do more for the development of New England interests than President Mellen?

THE NEW YORK VIEW

The Agitation Against New England

(From the Boston News Bureau, Jan. 3.)

A member of Congress from New York city said this week to a representative of the Boston News Bureau: "What a fine thing for New York are these indictments against New England and her railroads. Of course, we don't object to it. You don't see any of our papers saying anything to the New York grand juries but 'sic 'em,' and you don't hear any of us complaining about Washington's action against New England.

"Do you suppose we in New York have no patriotism toward the port of New York? Do you think you are going to get business over in Boston unless you get it somehow away from New York, and do you think you are going to get it without a struggle?"

A corporation lawyer says: "Do you notice how the papers in New York are instructing the grand juries and urging more indictments against New England? I hear that some of your people up in Boston have been warned from the Department of Justice not to discuss the action of grand juries concerning your New England railroad or your New England industries against which indictments are pending, but I haven't heard of any New York paper being called upon to cease urging grand juries to indict New England and the New England railroad system."

A leading railroad official says: "It was reported to me that one of the railroads of this country has been spending money in New England to promote the agitation against the New Haven. I did not believe this possible, and I inquired what object any railroad line in New York or elsewhere could have in promoting agitation against the New Haven road, and the answer to me was: 'This railroad is not getting the business it thinks it is entitled to out of New England, as the traffic of New England is now concentrated and handled without regard to some interests outside of New England.' If the New England railroad system can be broken up into smaller units some railroads outside might get more."

PREPOSTEROUS

(From Editorial in Boston Post, Jan. 3.)

The greater part of the Governor's address is devoted to a consideration of the problem of the regulation of railroad transportation. The federal control of all railroads through acquisition of their properties is a question too broad for local determination. The point with which we have to deal here in Massachusetts is the regulation of such as come within our jurisdiction. We have had experience in the past of State ownership, and we have been thankful when the State was able to get rid of the burden and the accumulating loss. No proposition to acquire other roads by exercise of any option vesting in the State should be entertained. The purchase of the Boston & Maine in its entirety would be preposterous.

FOSTERING HOSTILITY

(From Boston Evening Record, Jan. 2.)

The Governor should have added that this hostility has been encouraged and fostered and in some instances created by interests holding practical hostility to New England interests, that public emotions have been played upon, not to correct failure of service or mistakes of the corporate attitude but to discredit a legitimate and sound public business enterprise, in order that outside, non-New England interests may reap the profit.

ATTACKS ON SAVINGS

(Editorial in Boston Daily Advertiser, Jan. 4.)

Governor Foss took his turn yesterday, in attacking the railroads. There are various other attacks contemplated, in the form of petitions before the Legislature. It is also hinted that various other "investigations," "probes," and "reforms" directed against some of the leading Massachusetts industries, whose securities form an important part of the assets of Massachusetts saving banks, are being planned by those statesmen on Beacon hill whose chief idea in politics consists of "hitting the corporations," under the impression that any attack on a big corporation however baseless and unfair the attack may be, is certain to prove immensely popular and to figure as a political asset against the future.

There are, at present, under the supervision of the Massachusetts bank commissioner, about 200 savings banks, more than 160 co-operative banks, and nearly 70 trust companies. These and a few other institutions under his supervision have a total of assets which exceeds a round billion—probably today nearly $1,400,000,000. In the savings banks alone, there are over 2,000,000 accounts, mostly those of wage-earners, who are saving up for a rainy day or against the prospect of old age. The savings banks have always been large holders of railroad securities. As a rule, in this State they hold upward of $150,000,000 of such securities, bonds or notes, not to mention the $40,000,000 or more in street railways, terminal bonds, etc.

Among the local railroad securities, thus held, according to the last published figures, may be mentioned something like $15,000,000 Boston & Maine bonds, $23,000,000 New Haven, $8,000,000 Old Colony, $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 Boston & Lowell, $8,000,000 Boston & Albany. Railroad notes are discounted, from time to time. While mill stocks are not directly held by the banks, it is beyond question that whatever may affect the business conditions in the textile industries, for example, affects very seriously the value of loans on real estate in manufacturing centres, such as almost all large Massachusetts cities are; and the loans on real estate alone, on the part of Massachusetts savings banks, always average far above $100,000,000. The loans of the co-operative banks, also, are chiefly on real estate.

These figures have real life and substance, when one considers the idea of so many cheap politicians that it is a safe and popular thing to harass the railroads and mills, the other big corporations of any State. The politicians do not understand, perhaps even the people do not always realize, how seriously these attacks, if unfair and unfounded, may hurt the very savings institutions which guard the people's money.

The railroads and the other large industries of Massachusetts, whose securities are now available for holdings of Massachusetts savings banks, employ many thousands of men. These employees get good wages as a rule, and they spend their money in Massachusetts. If these legislative attacks upon Massachusetts corporations continue long enough, and unfairly enough, they can probably do more or less damage to the corporations and the industries involved. Indeed, in some cases it appears that they have already done some damage, enough to make it a serious problem whether wages must not be reduced, in certain industries, to meet the new situation. If these attacks are successful, at all events, they will hurt the thousand of men and women who are now employed in these industries. How is that going to help the general public in [illegible]

But the situation is really graver and more critical than that. As we have said, the savings of some hundreds of thousands of depositors are concerned. Those savings are invested in Massachusetts securities, very largely, as has been shown. What is going to happen to those savings, in the event that the securities themselves continue to depreciate in value and in earning power? To be sure, the securities represent real value. They would never be allowed to be savings banks investments otherwise. But their earning power can be diminished and diminished, by these [illegible] attacks upon Massachusetts [illegible] until the rate of interest which the banks can safely pay may be reduced in consequence.

These attacks, then, in the Massachusetts Legislature, and in print, and at Washington, against the foremost industries of Massachusetts, are really attacks upon the wage-earners, and especially upon those thrifty and self-respecting [illegible] depositors in the savings institutions of Massachusetts. It is just as well to emphasize that point, at the very beginning of the legislative session, so that every depositor in a Massachusetts savings bank can recognize who are his worst enemies on Beacon Hill. The demagogues in the Legislature are doing their best to throw Massachusetts wage-earners out of employment, and to scale down the wage rate, and the dividends of the savings banks, as well. There is no patriotism nor sound public policy in such cheap politics. These attacks are ostensibly aimed at big corporations, but really they are going to hit hardest the thrifty and industrious wage-earners within Massachusetts.

MODERN CURE MIGHT HAVE SAVED POMEROY

Wonderful Success in Such Cases Being Achieved in Psychopathic Hospital.

Boston physicians are expecting much of the Psychopathic Hospital. It has already proven its value in many hundreds of cases. People are going there of their accord and being treated. Dr. Herman Adler, the first assistant at the hospital, says it is such cases as Jesse Pomeroy's that will be helped and directed aright under the new treatment.

Dr. E. H. Bradford, dean of the Harvard Medical School, says that the treatment of Jesse Pomeroy has been more or less irrational. Such cases would now be sent to this hospital and placed under careful observation. The doctor says that had Pomeroy's case been [illegible] modern ideas are today to bring about the work of prevention the State would [illegible] have [illegible] its hands.

The Jesse Pomeroy case should have been taken in early life. Many such cases are being treated at the Psychopathic Hospital with gratifying results.

Boston physicians are in doubt whether any surgical operation would be of any material benefit to Pomeroy. Such operations have been performed in a few cases upon criminals with good results. But in the case of Pomeroy there is doubt about its doing any good at this time of life.

Treatment Irrational.

Dr. E. H. Bradford, dean of the Harvard Medical School, said:

No one can definitely say what would have taken place in the case of Jesse Pomeroy had we possessed some of the modern advantages to study this particular type. When he committed his atrocities there was nothing existing except the insane hospitals, prison and hanging for such cases.

In all probability such a case as his would have been sent to the Psychopathic Hospital for observation, had it occurred today.

At the time his deeds were committed mothers were clamoring for his death. Others suggested the insane hospital, and a few thought of hanging. The State did not know exactly what to do. Dr. Charles Folsom, now dead, was consulted at the time and took a prominent part in the study of the details of the case.

It is not unfair to say today after what we know that the treatment of Jesse Pomeroy has been irrational.

Had it been taken in its incipiency and observed at such a hospital as the psychopathic hospital, we might have different results to point to. His confinement in prison, which now has extended over many years, has certainly not been corrective, though it may be penal.

I am not prepared to say anything about an operation upon him, as has been done in some cases, and I think, with some success. This matter belongs to those who have given careful attention to this aspect of the question. There are on record some cases where operations apparently produced beneficial results but this is a matter out of my line upon which I do not feel justified in giving any opinion.

Observation Necessary.

Dr. Herman Adler, first assistant of the Psychopathic Hospital, No. 74 Fenwood road, replied in answer to a question whether Jesse Pomeroy's case would have been treated differently today:

No one can speculate about this matter and tell what might have happened. Such cases as Jesse Pomeroy's could be observed carefully in such a hospital as this. This is what we are doing.

They are not fit subjects for the so-called insane hospital. They should not be called insane. They have done queer things at home. But we must not rush at conclusions and say they are insane. They must be watched. Finally observation may or may not [illegible] things.

In taking the case of Jesse Pomeroy at the beginning certain features would have been carefully watched and studied and a remedy for them applied. This might have revealed something and helped to correct much that never could have been done in prison walls. Of course I am now referring to the case at the beginning and not to its advanced stage.

Study of Personality.

This shows why such a hospital as this is needed. There are types of cases which formerly were carried to the insane hospital and upon removal [illegible] the same hospital with [illegible] they once were [illegible].

Here is a boy who comes in here with [illegible] perception. There is something that must be corrected or adjusted in his makeup. Years ago he would have been consigned to the insane hospital, a Jesse Pomeroy.

But under training this boy is [illegible]. Constant observation has [illegible] that he responds to other methods not emphasized in the ordinary insane hospital.

People come into this hospital of their own free will and accord. We have heart-to-heart talks with them. There is the study of their personality. Some little thing may be out of gear. If Jesse Pomeroy's case had been taken in hand with our present methods, probably some of the irregularities in this case might have been remedied. Anyway we are making advances in such types. No one wants to be dogmatic in anything like this, but there are certain methods being tried today that have not fully revealed their power.

Peculiar cases yield to treatment that we did not think of years ago. In all probability the case of Jesse Pomeroy might have been treated differently. We must get the best out of every one that is afflicted as he is. That's what we are striving after.

All are not insane that are pronounced insane. They need the special observation of such a hospital as this, which fills a long-needed gap and will throw light on this whole subject.

WHAT DOCTORS SAY OF POSSIBLE CURE OF JESSE POMEROY

It is not unfair to say today, after what we know, that the treatment of Jesse Pomeroy has been irrational. Had his case been taken in its incipiency and observed at the psychopathic hospital we might point to different results—Dr. Bradford, dean of Harvard Medical School.

Such cases as Jesse Pomeroy's could be observed carefully in the psychopathic hospital. In taking his case at the beginning, certain features would have been studied. This might have helped to correct much that never could have been done behind prison walls—Dr. Adler, first assistant at Psychopathic Hospital.

New Rule Is Established by Brockton Board

BROCKTON, Jan. 4.—Collective gifts by pupils to teachers in the Brockton schools are prohibited. This is the edict that has gone forth from the members of the school committee, and in the future little Johnnie acting in behalf of his classmates, will not have the pleasure of presenting "dear teacher" with "a slight token of esteem."

The committee has discovered that the present giving doesn't help school life any, and the practice that has been prevalent for many years will be done away with entirely.

Two Planters Butchered by Natives in New Guinea.

SYDNEY, Australia, Jan. 4.—Butchered by natives in New Guinea was the fate of two planters named James and Herman Weber, brothers. They were set upon by cannibals, who came from the unexplored regions. No trace of their bodies had been found, and it is believed that they were devoured. The news was brought here today by friendly natives, who stated that the same tribe has been carrying on a campaign of butchery throughout the district. A punitive expedition has been planned by the government.

CITY HALL BALDHEADS STAND PAT

COLLEGE PROFESSOR'S "CURE" SPURNED RIGHT AND LEFT

Boston's hairless army refuses to become excited over the fact that Professor Frederick Migge of Stanford University has just discovered a K. O. punch for the fifty-seven varieties of germs responsible for baldness.

As John F. Dever, clerk of committees at City Hall, puts it: "Professor Migge would be better engaged in finding a new 'white hope' or another Tris Speaker for the Red Sox, rather than a remedy for naked pates."

When He Thinks of It.

EX-REPRESENTATIVE BERNARD F. HANRAHAN of East Boston, the youngest bald head in the State:

When I think of the money that I save annually by not being obliged to have my hair cut I am compensated for the inconvenience of having my head used as a roller skating rink by flies in the middle of summer. If sticking well, but a few drops of Migge's cure may give them some inspiration and encouragement. I am strong for Professor Migge's cure, because I never want to take the place of Charlie Bigelow.

It's a good discovery, but alas, too late for me. It would that I were young again and had the benefit of these modern inventions.

Here are just a few comments from Boston's bald headed and near bald headed army which indicate that the discovery has not caused even a flutter.

For my part if there was a new soap invented tomorrow that would guarantee to grow furs on the top of my cranium, I would not use it because I am satisfied to treat the few sprigs I have left with a towel rather than a comb.

This invention had come five years ago I might have used it, but now I have learned how to part my hair with a tooth brush so that I have no use for the new discovery.

JAMES P. LANDERS, president of the Meeting House Hill Improvement Association and soon destined to join the baldhead army:

This is a wonderful discovery. The parting does not give me pain at present, but it may, unless I give the few faithful friends at the back of my head some encouragement. They are

To please my wife I shall try it. One by one the little threads at the rear are deserting and I should hate to become as naked on top as my friend John F. Dever. I have not yet joined the hairless squad and I am strong for anything that will keep me from being drafted.

A. G. WOOD, WOBURN, IS KILLED BY TRAIN

Arthur G. Wood, baggagemaster at the Woburn station of the Boston & Maine railroad, was killed by a Boston-bound train near the station yesterday. He had been to the postoffice for the mail and was returning.

Near the crossing tender's shanty at the Adams street crossing he stepped back from the track with his wheelbarrow to allow the train to pass. The space was narrow. The wheelbarrow was struck by the baggage car and Wood thrown beneath the wheels.

Wood was taken to the Choate Memorial Hospital, Woburn, but died as the ambulance reached the hospital. He was about fifty, and had been baggagemaster many years. For years he was recorder of Mishawan Lodge, A. O. U. W.

GARMENT WORKERS STORM A FACTORY

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The worst riot since the present clothing makers' strike began, broke out this afternoon when 2,500 strikers stormed the clothing factory of Alfred Benjamin & Co., in Lafayette street, near Astor Place. The mob bore down on the building from every direction and swept aside thirty policemen in plain clothes who were on guard.

The reserves were called out and after a hard battle in which clubs were used and bricks were thrown, the mob was driven back.

Captain Scoval of the Mercer street police station was hit on the head with a brick and suffered a scalp wound. Policeman Ranges was knocked unconscious. One arrest was made.

Nearly 20,000 striking garment workers attended a mass meeting this afternoon in Rutgers square when speeches of defiance to the employers were made. Rose Pastor Stokes, wife of the millionaire Socialist, was a speaker.

Another mass meeting was held in Cooper Union tonight under direction of John A. Dyche, international secretary of the Women Garment Workers, for the purpose of taking steps to call out the 50,000 white goods workers in this city.

Ten thousand women are expected to take part in a parade to be given by the strikers next week. It is expected that 125,000 workers will be on strike next week.

BUILD UP NEW ENGLAND

The Industrial Bureau of the New England Railroad Lines invites the co-operation of merchants, manufacturers and business men for the upbuilding of New England.

In 18 Months to November last, 68 manufacturing firms, representing an investment of $2,600,000, have been established in New England as the direct result of the work of the New England Lines "Industrial Bureau" in co-operation with chambers of commerce, boards of trade and business associations in New England.

These newly established industries are now employing more than 3600 people, which according to social science statistics must represent a populaiton of 12,000.

Nearly half these industries were established in six months preceding Nov. 1st.

The New England Railroad Lines represent more than $700,000,000 invested in New England transportation. These lines can be prosperous only as New England is prosperous.

The capital invested in mercantile and manufacturing lines in New England has and ought to have a larger return than capital invested in transportation.

Therefore, whenever you hear of any one seeking location for an industry, don't hesitate to promptly notify the Industrial Bureau, South Station, Boston, that we may co-operate to bring the business into New England.

SPECULATION SLOW AT TURN OF THE YEAR, BUT PRICES WORKED HIGHER

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, Jan. 4.—There was little of moment in stock markets today. Most Boston stocks in which there was activity ended the week higher, and in New York Reading, Union Pacific, Steel and Amalgamated finished with gains. The most notable advance was by St. Paul and the list was firm on the whole. Trading, however, was not active.

W. H. ROSS

It has been a dull week for speculation and in that respect fulfilled expectations. Aside from being broken by a universally observed holiday, there was uncertainty as to what would be the trend of money rates, and that restricted commitments.

SUPPLY OF STOCKS WAS SMALL.

After Christmas the market showed considerable strength, although trading was very limited in volume. The supply of stocks was small. Many traders took the professional view that strength was due more to retirement of short contracts than to anything else, and this element, bearish to the core, claims the upward movement left the market technically weaker.

The week brought about a decided improvement in the situation in the Balkans. News from reliable sources in Europe indicate that the strain is about over and that peace is assured. That should mean that Europeans will resume buying American stocks. In fact, the demand abroad for them has already increased. It was the real basis, probably, for the buoyancy of American markets immediately after Christmas. As to the domestic demand for securities, it may be said that prices have recently touched such a low ... there have been ... judicious purchasing.

PUJO NOW AFTER STOCK EXCHANGE

Claims It Can Be Prosecuted as Monopoly Under Sherman Act.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—According to persons close to the Pujo probers of the "Money Trust," that committee has a plan to curb the New York Stock Exchange as a monopoly which can be reached under the Sherman law. Its business is held to represent interstate commerce.

It is recalled that Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the Pujo committee, ... to ask one Consolidated Stock Exchange representatives who complained of the larger institution's boycott, whether the securities that were discriminated against were those of companies doing in[terstate business].

... that the New York Stock Exchange, by forbidding all its members to deal with certain solvent, responsible persons, entered into a conspiracy to restrain trade ... American Tobacco Company and the Standard Oil Company were proved to have acted towards certain hostile interests.

"There is room for us all in Canada, and it is certainly better from the general standpoint that the trade should be in the hands of strong people. The Dominion Steel Corporation is not afraid of competition from United States Steel or anybody else."

PLAN FIRMER GRIP ON PUBLIC SERVICE

Special Commission Urges Five New Bills for Holding Companies.

BASED ON TREFOY PLAN

No Business Corporation to Control More Than 10 Per Cent. Hereafter.

A report of the special commission to investigate voluntary associations, just filed with the clerk of the House, states that inasmuch as the Boston Holding Company was created by the Legislature to meet a specific situation, the commission assumes that the Legislature did not intend that the investigators should suggest any general legislation affecting that corporation.

As to permitting business corporations to hold the stock of public service companies, the report says:

Even if there should be any reason, which is not apparent, for a different policy of restricting the rights of public service corporations to hold the stock of other corporations, this should be authorized only under proper safeguards by special act, as the general business corporation law makes no adequate provision for such purpose.

Five Bills Are Recommended.

The Commission recommends the passage of five bills for the further regulation of holding companies. The first is a redraft of the bill suggested by the Commissioner Trefry. It provides that no business corporation shall hereafter purchase or hold more than ten per cent. of a Massachusetts public service corporation.

The second bill recommended gives the Railroad Commission and the Gas and Electric Light Commission authority to investigate all books, accounts and contracts of the trustees of any voluntary association who own or hold the capital stock of any Massachusetts public service corporation. A $5,000 fine is provided. A third bill provides that no person or association owning shares of any public service corporation shall use any name or title that might lead the public to believe that such owners were such a corporation. A $100 fine is proposed.

Another measure recommended provides a fine of $500 or three months' imprisonment for any trustee of a voluntary association who fails to file a copy of the trust agreement with the commissioner of corporations.

The last bill calls for the annual publication of all declarations of trust.

Purpose a Dividend Method.

The report points out that holding companies may acquire the securities of two or more public service corporations and use the income derived to pay dividends. As such associations are under no restriction, the report states, they may create as many shares to represent the beneficial interest as they see fit. The commission found that there were seventeen associations and two corporations organized to hold the securities of public service corporations. Eight concern railroads or street railways, and eleven gas and electric companies.

No satisfactory means by which the liquidation of holding companies can be lawfully accomplished is suggested. It is stated, however, that the further activities of holding companies in the public service field should be restricted, and that existing holding concerns be given a definite period in which to divest themselves of their public service holdings.

Oldest Organ a Wonder

POTTSTOWN, Pa., Jan. 4.—Having been used for 102 years, the old organ in Zion's Lutheran Church, near Spring City, was set aside when a new one was dedicated with impressive services. The old instrument, however, will continue to occupy a prominent place in the church and will be used once each year at a special service.

"Little Wireless Phones"
For the ears that will cause you to HEAR

What eye glasses are to failing sight, our "Little Wireless Phones" are to lost or failing hearing. Just as simple as to adjust glasses and on the same principle, for they magnify sound as glasses magnify sight. They are really tiny telephones of soft, sensitized material, safe and comfortable which fit into the orifice of the ears and are invisible. They can be removed or inserted in a moment, and will last for weeks at a time, for they are entirely unbreakable. Their construction and soft friction fit make self-adjusting. We have never known of one of these instruments to fail to bear every sound distinctly just as correct eye glasses make it easy to read fine print. Among the nearly 400 000 people whom they have enabled to hear perfectly there has been every good case of deafness or defective hearing. No matter what the cause or how long standing the case the testimonials seem to show marvelous results.

Common-Sense Ear Drums

Have restored to me my ears to hearing—that's how I happened to discover the secret of their success in my own deafness. I guarantee to be relieved of my deafness, after physicians had pronounced my case incurable.

It is certainly worth your while to investigate this. Before you send any money just drop me a line. I want to send you free of charge my book on deafness and plenty of evidence to prove to you that I am entirely worthy of your confidence. Why not write me today?

Rheumatism

A Home Cure Given by One Who Had It

In the spring of 1903 I was attacked by Muscular and Inflammatory Rheumatism. I suffered as only those who have had a touch of rheumatism can for three years. I tried remedy after remedy, one doctor after another, but such relief as I received was only temporary. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely, and it has never returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted and even bedridden with rheumatism, and in all cases it acted in a cure in every case.

I want every sufferer from any form of rheumatic trouble to try this marvelous healing power. Don't send a cent; simply mail your name and address and I will send it free to try. If, after you have used it and it has proven itself to be that long looked for means of curing your Rheumatism, you may send the price of it, one dollar, but understand I do not want your money unless you wish to do so, as I am perfectly willing to send it entirely at my own risk. Let those who profess to cure you and have failed, those who are using liniments and electric belts, those who are doctoring for stomach trouble, those who are using patent medicines, those who are trying to physic away your rheumatism, let them all alone and write me today. Don't delay. Write today.

Rev. Dr. Hyde Calls Us "Worrying Nation"

"Cause of Nine-Tenths of Our Troubles," Says Brockton Pastor.

BROCKTON, Jan. 6.—Rev. Dr. Albert Marian Hyde, pastor of the Porter Congregational Church, who attracted attention a year ago by his new decalogue, says worry is worse than the white plague.

"Not one man in five in America dies a natural death; they are killed by worry," says the reverend gentleman. "Where tuberculosis takes its single victim, worry takes its score. Worry is doing more than any other enemy of the human race to wreck and ruin our lives. Take worry away and we would have a paradise here, and the millennium would come at once.

"And yet, nine-tenths of our troubles are the troubles that never come. We are going out to meet our troubles before they get to us. And half-met troubles always appear monstrous. Anticipation makes trifles appear gigantic."

INAUGURAL COMMITTEE.

Crane of Massachusetts to Aid at Wilson's Induction.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4. Senator Gallinger today appointed Senators Bacon of Georgia and Overman of North Carolina, Democrats, and Crane of Massachusetts, Republican, to be the joint committee authorized to arrange for the inauguration of President Wilson. The House members appointed some time ago are: Rucker of Missouri and Garret of Tennessee, Democrats, and McKinley of Illinois, Republican.

$1 FOR L. C. COUCH IN MOTHER'S WILL

Well-Known Taunton Man Cut Off by Her for "Reasons Known to Myself."

TAUNTON, Jan. 4.—Society in this city was surprised today when it became known that Mrs Mary Couch, widow of General Darius Couch, had given her son, Leonard C. Couch, but $1 in her will, which was offered for probate today. Her fortune of more than $40,000 is bequeathed to her grandchildren and other relatives.

That Mrs. Couch took this action more than ten years ago was also made known. Two wills were found, One, dated May 12, 1900, appointed Leonard C. Couch administrator and gave him the whole estate, with the exception of a small bequest made to one of the grandchildren. The second, drawn January 28, 1911, gave the estate to the grandchildren and contained this clause:

"I have purposely and after full consideration decided to give my said son no sum other than that mentioned above for the reason that he has abused me, and for certain other reasons known to myself."

Leonard C. Couch knew nothing about the existence of this will until today. He is prominent in business and society and has served on the Board of Aldermen and in other offices.

He declined to comment on the will.

CHIEF JUSTICE KNAPP ARCHBALD WITNESS

Head of Commerce Court Testifies for Defence in Impeachment Proceedings.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—That the Erie Railroad had no advance information on the pending investigation of the conduct of Judge Robert W. Archbald of the Commerce Court was the testimony of George F. Brown, general counsel for the company, who was called by the defence in the impeachment proceedings against that jurist today. The defence sought to establish the fact that the Katydid culm dump deal would not be halted through fear of publicity.

The second witness for the defence was Chief Justice Martin E. Knapp of the Commerce Court, by whom it was sought to prove that the opinion in the case in the Lackawaxie & Nashville Railroad against the Interstate Commerce was not written by Judge Archbald. The House managers claimed that their claim in this case was that Archbald had made inquiries of the railroad's lawyer in an improper manner. Their objections to Judge Knapp's testimony was sustained.

In reply to a question by Senator Hitchcock, Judge Knapp said that he had never heard from Judge Archbald that Archbald had communicated with the railroad's lawyer before giving the decision in his favor. Frank A. Hill, a coal operator, was then called to name the value of the coal properties in which Judge Archbald was interested.

BAIL OFFERS POUR IN FOR DYNAMITERS

Almost Million Ready in Chicago Alone to Free Imprisoned Labor Men.

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—Offers of bail for the men convicted in Indianapolis of a dynamite conspiracy have been pouring into the offices of their Chicago attorneys today, according to a statement by Attorney E. M. Zoline, who prosecuted the motion for a writ of supersedeas before the United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday. Zoline conferred with Attorney Patrick H. O'Donnell today. It was said the offers already made would total almost a million dollars and that others were expected. The offers received are all from Chicago people. "It is not likely that we in Chicago are going to get bail for all the men," said O'Donnell. According to the ruling of Judge Baker, property in various cities can be scheduled and we deem advisable that each city attend to it own men."

Boston Schoolboys to See South America

Five Students and Possibly More Will Accompany Chamber of Commerce Party.

Five Boston High School boys—and perhaps one or two more—will go with the Boston Chamber of Commerce party on the "friendship tour" of South America in the Spring, if Mayor Fitzgerald's plan meets with the favor of the chamber officials. Tomorrow morning the Mayor will talk the matter over with Secretary James A. McGilvery of the chamber, and will outline his plans to have at least five of the big New England trades raise money enough to defray all the expenses of the trip for five boys.

A Boston newspaper publisher has offered to contribute $1,000 for the purpose. One idea advanced was to have the expenses paid by popular subscription. Mayor Fitzgerald thinks it would be better to have each boy making the trip bear a particular relationship to some trade he will be picked to represent. The Mayor also thinks the Boston newspapers might pay the expenses of a sixth boy, while the city might send a seventh high school student.

Another plan is to have the high school boys generally take competitive tests on South American business possibilities and the relations that might exist between those countries and the United States. The tests would be open to boys in all the high schools of the city. The Mayor believes that the educational campaign begun by the Chamber of Commerce will result in a larger number of tourists on the South American party than that which toured Europe.

STREET RAILWAYS MAY BE SOLD OUT

Two street railway companies in Massachusetts, the Dedham & Franklin and the Medfield & Medway, may be sold for unpaid interest on their bonds, if the Supreme Court so decides on January 20, when a hearing is to be given.

Forrest H. Mather, who has been receiver for the roads for a year, filed a petition with the court yesterday, stating that the expenses were greater than the earnings, despite every possible economy.

Bonds to the value of $100,000 for each of the roads are held by first companies and the interest payments are in arrears.

Judge Morton of the Supreme Court ruled that the selectmen in the various towns traversed shall be given a chance to appear and enter objection to the sale.

WIDER CAMPAIGN INQUIRY.

Senator Clapp Presents Resolution to Extend Investigation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—Senator Clapp, chairman of the special committee appointed to investigate campaign funds, today presented a resolution asking for authority to extend the work of that committee to the funds used in the general campaign which ended with the election of November 7, 1912.

CHARACTER—In Men and In Monkeys

Get Away From Monkey Character and Build Real Character—That Is Man's Problem

He Breaks a Branch, Then Another, Sticks at Nothing. Don't Be Like Him.

Character CAN Be Built. It Is a Slow Building Like That of a Great Sea Wall and a Difficult Building. BUT IT CAN BE DONE

Three things a man must do to write in a fashion worth while.

He must make the reader LOOK at what he writes.

He must make the reader UNDERSTAND what he writes.

He must make the reader BELIEVE what he writes

The pictures on this page will certainly make you LOOK.

The most important question to every human being on this planet is:

CAN CHARACTER BE CHANGED? CAN IT BE BUILT? CAN IT BE REPAIRED AND MAINTAINED?

Again we quote and warn you NOT to trust in Napoleon's famous saying: "No man ever changed his character or his temperament."

If that were so, this would be a world of fatalism, and despair.

Each of us sees his imperfections, his weaknesses, his follies. Each regrets SOFT SPOTS in his own character. Life would be sad and disappointing if we could not believe in the possibility of building character, and making it better.

Our character, a pure Greek word, comes to us unchanged from the Greek thinkers and writers of more than 2,000 years ago. It is made of the Greek verb "charasso," meaning "engraved."

Character is that which your life, your thought, your habits, ENGRAVE upon YOU AND YOUR MIND.

And the result of character is that impression which you, in you. life, ENGRAVE upon this world and the men and women in it.

We speak of the character in a man. And we speak of the characters in a book, the characters which the printers set in line to express thought.

As the printed or engraved characters stand upon the white page, expressing thought and character, so the man, an engraved image, a living thought, stamps upon his day and his environments the character that is his.

* * *

For your children, for boys and girls in their teens, there is a lesson in the two pictures on this page. And you may read it to them in this way, or a better way.

Keep away from the character of the monkey, and get for yourself solid power of resistance, illustrated in the stone wall on this page—the wall that stands firm while the sea beats against it.

If you watch a monkey in the forest, as Kipling tells you, you see him seize a small branch solemnly and look at it carefully.

If you did not know monkeys, you would say to yourself, "He will keep that piece of wood and make something very useful out of it."

The monkey holds the branch a moment, then breaks it in two, just as thoughtfully and solemnly as he previously studied it, drops the two pieces to the ground, moves a little further along and does something else without meaning.

They jump to the side of the cage, shake the wire violently, then suddenly subside and are quiet

They start a thousand things in the course of a day, finish nothing. And when they go to sleep with their arms folded over their heads, they are the characterless monkeys that they were the day they were born.

Many human beings go through life like a higher type of monkey, beginning a thousand things, ending nothing

Too many of us reach old age without ever accomplishing any ONE thing. That means lack of character

* * *

What is character?

To say "I will do a thing," and then do it—THAT IS CHARACTER.

To undertake an accomplishment and then follow it day after day, early and late to the bitter end and to success—THAT IS CHARACTER.

To listen carefully to others, weighing opinions, accepting new truths, listening to advice, and then deciding for yourself—THAT IS CHARACTER.

To map out your own line and follow it, and yet be ever ready to profit by the experience of those that have gone the path before you—THAT IS CHARACTER.

Energy, persistency, honesty, moral courage, consistency, and above all JUSTICE—those are stones in the wall of character.

* * *

Character is that which we engrave upon ourselves and that life engraves upon us. The SOFTER we are, the more easy it is to engrave us with all kinds of impressions.

And the SOFTER we are, the less valuable we are when it comes to stamping upon the world the particular character that we possess.

It is hard to engrave a piece of steel. But when you have once engraved it you can print from it indefinitely

It is easy to engrave what you choose upon a piece of butter. But you can't print very well with butter.

We must not only get for ourselves the right kind of engraving, but we must build up within ourselves the right sort of material for the engraving process.

That is hard, slow, painful, and discouraging work BUT IT CAN BE DONE.

* * *

It means that talent is built up amid quietness and peace, and CHARACTER built up in the "Stream of the world" or world struggle.

"The stream of the world" in which men meet and knock against each other, in which temptation wears away character, the struggle for success and achievement is the school with which character is built.

No man can blame another, or condemn another, unless he has gone through all of that other's experiences and done better.

The public school of the United States is the great blessing of all centuries, because it gives to the boys and girls that opportunity to build up character "in the stream of the world."

In our great public schools the boys are not set apart, petted, kept in a class by themselves, or a class of their own. They meet all kinds, all beliefs, all sorts, all intelligence. And CHARACTER is formed

Pity the boy and girl to whom the public school life is unknown. Such a child starts with a handicap that must be overcome, if it can, by hard experience later.

* * *

By struggling constantly, every day, by trying over and over again, no matter how frequent the failures

"Ja diesem Sinne bin ich ganz ergeben.
Das ist der Weisheit letzter Schluss:
Nur der verdient sich Freiheit wie das Leben,
Der täglich sie erobern muss."

Very badly translated into rhyme this means:

"To this thought I cling, with virtue rife,
Wisdom's last fruit profoundly true
Freedom alone he earns as well as life
Who day by day must conquer them anew."

Goethe's thought which should comfort every struggling human being is that he alone earns and deserves freedom and life who is compelled every day to win anew life's battle.

* * *

To make your character better—WORK HARDER

Don't let the weak, soft spots discourage you. Harden them, by fighting to conquer weakness.

When you read Gibbon's great History of Rome, you read, perhaps, the greatest historical work of modern times. And you read the work of a man who conquered himself, lifted himself, and with steady character and steady hand finished his task—when those that knew him best would have said that he was on the road to drunkenness, debauchery, self-indulgence and worthlessness.

And what is said of him can be said of many, who have changed from soft, mushy, worthless character to the hard, reliable, firm material, that works, controls itself, and controls others.

The difference in men is as great as the difference between the Rock of Gibraltar and a dish of melting butter. It is as great as the difference between the monkey on this page, snapping a branch and hopping along to find another branch, and the scientist who, with his telescope, patiently explores the heavens, night after night, and year after year, adding to the knowledge of men

You CAN BUILD UP YOUR CHARACTER. You CAN get rid of the monkey character, and get part at least of the firm resistance of the stone wall. You may do it as a boy. You may do it as a young man. You may not do it until old age tells you that you must do it now or never.

You can do it if you will

If you fail, put no blame on others. Butter is soft because it is BUTTER, not because the cruel knife cuts the butter. And we human beings are soft, BECAUSE WE ARE SOFT. Not because somebody else has done something to us.

To start on the right way with this New Year in the direction of character building, print in your mind another very good German line which means "Man is never betrayed. Man betrays himself"—

MAN'S CHARACTER Is the Stone Wall Built to Stand and Stop the Waves

JOSEPH W. BAILEY, STANDARD OIL SENATOR, ATTEMPTS TO EVADE HIS PROVEN GUILT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—On the eve of his retirement from the Senate, Joseph Weldon Bailey, of Standard Oil notoriety, delivered a valedictory tirade to that dignified body. Like Senator Lorimer, when the latter was expelled from the Senate last Summer, Senator Bailey bitterly attacked Mr. William Randolph Hearst as the cause of his political downfall.

And when Henry F. Ashurst, the Progressive Democratic Senator from Arizona, unable to restrain himself, interrupted to protest, the Senator from Texas offered to take him outside and fight.

Assails Initiative and Referendum.

Mr. Bailey's speech was a general attack on the initiative and referendum, an exploitation of his ideas of real Democracy and his maintenance that a direct form of government would send the Republic to the bow-wows.

The chief point of the attack, however, was against the initiative and referendum. Again and again he thundered against this reform plan of governmental procedure, charging it was intended to overthrow the present representative system of government.

He attempted to ridicule the origin of the movement and said it went back to the time when railroads and county seats were determined by popular vote to the fights over the liquor question when Representatives were afraid to settle those problems themselves.

"This demand for the initiative and referendum," shouted the Senator, "first came about through a desire to make the politicians decide what they were afraid to decide, and now we are to have it to dispose of all great questions; to give the rash youth casting his first vote as much influence in government as the most experienced Senator or Representative who has made a study of the whole question of government."

Bailey produced a book of 208 pages, which he said represented thirty-two questions submitted to the direct vote of the people of Oregon. He denied that it was possible for the people to study them—and at some length quoted statistics to show, from his viewpoint, that only a small per cent. of the voters in States where the initiative and referendum prevails voted on proposed constitutional amendments. This argument was punctured later on by Mr. Ashurst.

Argued Against Direct Democracy.

Assuming his pose of upholding "the fathers who framed the Constitution," Bailey insisted that these men refused to adopt a direct democracy in which the people would rule without the intervention of representatives and adopted a representative democracy. He quoted from historians and statesmen to support him, observing, however, that he did not quote from lawyers as they seemed just now not to be in favor. Then he declared dramatically:

"I never had a client who was my master in any manner."

The real criticism that ought to be made of public men today, Bailey declared, was that the people's representatives are too quick to respond to the views of the people, "hastily and ill-considerately formed."

By way of leading up to his attack on Mr. Hearst, Bailey said he was convinced the present popular unrest was due to the attitude of the newspapers of the country. He referred sarcastically to lists of "millionaire Senators" that had been published, and added: "If any one wanted to organize a syndicate to buy me out, I shall be very glad to have them offer less than half a million."

Holds Hearst's Magazine Aloft.

After the papers had grown used to calling the Senate a "millionaires' club," Bailey said, they began attacking individual Senators, demanding to know where they got the millions they did not have. It was at this point in his farewell to public life that Bailey hastily picked up from his desk a copy of Hearst's Magazine and, holding it aloft, where all could see, he shouted:

"I have here a magazine owned by one William R. Hearst, a moral pervert, a political degenerate and a physical coward."

Mr. Ashurst—Mr. President.

The President Pro Tem.—Does the Senator from Texas yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. Bailey—I do.

Mr. Ashurst—I would be glad to be friendly.

Mr. Bailey—If you want to reply to him you reply outside. You no see afterward me for that.

Mr. Ashurst—I will, when you get through Mr.

Mistaken About Dates.

Mr. Bailey—Somebody who has assailed me for years and expects to escape my denunciation is mistaken. He has in this magazine an attack on me in which he says that "Senator B. is so and so in the Senate. This letter is dated on the 26th of February in 1900, and I did not become a Senator until the 4th of March, 1901.

The letter referred to by Mr. Bailey bore the date of February 26, 1905, and not 1900. See fac-simile printed on another page.

"That is the kind of attacks that are made on the public men. There is nothing in this letter to which I object. I say to you know, Mr. President, if they will present that they did not receive it like they did this, when I studied law they taught me that to receive stolen property, knowing it was stolen, made a man as guilty as the thief who stole it.

"I believe that is as true in morals as it is true in law. If they will say they stole a letter or paid one thief to steal it and they can find no name mentioned in it, it does not make any difference how honorable it may be mentioned, they can use it as a base from which to attack you.

"The only opinion attributed to me in this letter is that I would be opposed to any law that would authorize any officer to come into my business place and demand to see my books in order to see what grounds I was making. I did not say anybody else be opposed to that? Yet that is the only opinion attributed to me I do not know whether I ever said that or not. I suppose I have said it, because I know I would say it, for it expresses distinctly my opinion.

"Mr. President, I believe I will go a little further in this matter, although I only intended to allude to it so far as it pertained to me. The whole attack upon the Senate of the United States perhaps characterizes as well as anything else could the character of the whole crusade.

"For years this creature, whose name the magazine bears, has been assailing the American public with statement after statement that the whole United States Senate was practically in the employment of the Standard Oil Company. Yet when they find people who are base enough to sell these lies of the Standard Oil Company they and that three or four Senators with whom there was any correspondence and with some of them not any correspondence, were guilty of corruption.

Refers to Archbold Letter.

"Why Mr. President, this man in one of his speeches, in 1906, read a letter which Mr. John D. Archbold had written to a Senator here, enclosing a certificate of deposit for $50,000. That Senator replied that that certificate of deposit related to a transaction wholly apart from any official duty or any official question.

"Hearst replied by publishing another letter, in which Mr. Archbold had called to the attention of the Senator a certain bill known as the Jones bill, and thought to create in the public mind a belief that the $50,000 certificate had some relation to the Jones bill, and yet Hearst had in his possession that minute a letter of the Senator returning the certificate of $50,000, dated ten days before the letter concerning the Jones bill was ever written.

"Senators, whose character is safe if men may be assailed in this way?"

Senator Ashurst's Reply.

Mr. Ashburst made the following reply:

"During his address, the Senator from Texas adverted to William Randolph Hearst, and, if I understood the Senator's words aright, he intended to impute some questionable motives to Mr. Hearst.

"I would be false to the conduct I have marked out for myself, and false to a gallant friend, if I did not in this place say that, while I know nothing of the differences which exist between Mr. Hearst and the Senator from Texas (Mr. Bailey), I am able to say that I know Mr. Hearst to be a loving father, a faithful husband, a loyal friend and a man whose name is honorably associated with the auspicious commencement and successful conclusion of hundreds of movements that make for the strength of the State, the happiness, the [illegible] the glory and the greatness of our nation.

"In this subject, more than this need not be said, and less than this, by me could not be said."

Defends the Initiative.

"The advocates of direct legislation do not intend to overthrow a representative form of government. The initiative and referendum would strengthen representative government in that such a system would supply the failures and delinquencies of the law-making power. It is because the law-making power has occasionally refused to enact wholesome laws that has brought the demand for the initiative and referendum.

"The initiative simply is people to propose legislation, and the referendum allows the people to defeat vicious or unwholesome legislation. The Supreme Court of the United States has held in numerous cases that it has not the power or jurisdiction to determine whether or not the initiative and referendum is in opposition to a republican form of government, and only recently that great court held the question to be a political one, and that Congress was the only authority under our Constitution which had jurisdiction to determine the question.

"The Congress of the United States has always decided that the initiative and referendum is a republican form of government, for when the Senate and House of Representatives admits members of Congress from a State having the system of direct legislation it thereby admits that a republican form of government exists in such States to which such representatives are accredited.

Senators Fail to Vote.

"The antagonists of direct legislation frequently assail the initiative and referendum upon the ground that under such system only fifty or sixty per cent. of the voters go to the polls. But a perusal of the Congressional Record will show that during the Sixty-second Congress frequently there was no quorum present in the Senate, and that upon a great number of occasions, bills was passed or defeated in the Senate with 30 or 35 per cent. of the membership of the Senate determining the question; and that it is very unusual in the Senate for a higher percentage than 70 per cent. of the Senators to vote upon any bill or measure. Indeed, the percentage of Senators not voting is as great as the per cent. of the people who do not vote under the initiative and referendum and it must be remembered that Senators are paid salaries to remain in the Senate and vote.

"The objection is frequently made to direct legislation that the people at large make mistakes, but I say in reply if mistakes are to be made it is far better that the people should make them than that the people's representatives should make them. In other words, no one should be authorized to make mistakes for the people."

The Recall of Judges.

Sustaining the recall of judges, Senator Ashurst said:

"Judges are very like the rest of human beings; they are as easily swayed by passion as are other men; some of them are as vain, as ambitious, and as subject to flattery as any other class of men. Their learning, virtue, integrity, and morality are no higher than that of the profession from which they are exclusively chosen—the legal profession.

"The recall would in no matter lessen the independence of a judge, and the intemperate criticism or abuse of a judge by litigants, suitors and attorneys temporarily disappointed over the loss of a case pending before the court would evoke no sympathy or encouragement from the voters, while unfounded, unfair, unjust or untrue charges or criticism would strengthen the judge.

"None of the Federal judges is elected by the people; none is removable by the people. Hence those judges who are incompetent or unworthy have yielded to temptation; the weak and needy have fallen for the more fact that a man who has been appointed as a Federal Judge seldom transforms his nature. The Federal judiciary in America has grown to be the most powerful institution in our government. More than any other agency it is in a position to promote or retard the advancement and true progress of the people.

"There exists today a widespread belief that some of our Superior Federal Courts are havens of refuge for law-breaking corporations and favor-seeking interests.

Independence in Politics.

"Independent voting is now a protest against the machine politician in public affairs, and the great power of the people has written itself in much advanced legislation in the past few years, for we have restricted illegal combinations of capital, and we are now engaged in the struggle to conserve the natural rights of men and women.

"There is a growing sentiment against private ownership of public utilities, and the people demand the right to elect United States Senators by popular vote. Markets and the mere piling up of yellow metal are beginning to be a secondary consideration. There is something more in the world than food and raiment. Man cannot live by bread alone.

"Hence, natural justice demands that the labor men and women shall be rewarded not only with sufficient food, clothing and shelter, but also with independence, books, paintings, music and flowers; with leisure time to spend with the family; with leisure time within which to cultivate the ideals—aesthetic and spiritual side of life, for, as R. D. Owen once well said, there is a corner even in our workday souls where the ideal lurks."

Sorry for the Reactionary.

In paying his respects to the reactionaries, Senator Ashurst said:

"In criticising or discussing a 'reactionary,' a 'stationary' or a 'standpatter,' it is unjust and unfair to apply opprobrious epithets to him. He is simply unfortunate, for he has either misread or failed to read the history of the world. Almost everything that has ever been proposed for the benefit of the people or for their increased liberty has been stubbornly opposed by reactionaries. Every world-important invention, whether it be a ponderous engine or an ingenious electrical contrivance, was ridiculed and opposed. Every discovery in science has been ridiculed by the reactionary.

His Brilliant Peroration.

"The struggle for social justice for the people who perform physical labor has been stubbornly resisted.

"When Elihu Root, the first member of a labor union to be elected to the Congress of the United States, was about to take his seat in the Twenty-fourth Congress there was a movement set on foot to try to prevent his being seated. Contumely, scorn and derision were heaped upon him by the reactionaries of that day, who believed the liberties of the Republic were in danger because a member of the labor union had been elected to Congress.

"But the stubborn courage of Elihu Root, his superlative eloquence, biting sarcasm and wonderfully piercing analysis convinced the nation that no mistake had been made in sending a member of a labor union to Congress, and so strikingly did this journeyman printer, this organizer of labor unions, this so-called 'agitator' and 'demagogue' distinguished himself for patriotism, learning and ability, that he became a confidential adviser of the administration of President James S. [illegible].

"I mention these circumstances so that those who are supporting this contest in behalf of a larger human liberty will become encouraged, but will become encouraged when they reflect how much more intensely heated was the opposition to these reforms in the days gone by.

"He is wasting his time who believes he can stay or stop these forward movements in their progress. The movement, especially in behalf of those who perform physical labor, for a greater share of freedom, for the right to enjoy a part of the creation of their hands and of their own toil, will inevitably win, for it is as broad-based as the world itself and deep as humanity.

"The great lesson yet to be learned by nations is the lesson of distribution. The earth can produce a hundred thousand times as much as is required for the comfort, convenience and luxury of those who live upon it, and it might be well understood here and now as elsewhere that the question of distribution of commodities must be settled, and it is not to be settled by a little timely patting on the back.

"The heaping of all the wealth in the hands of a few, the unlawful speculations and gambling in food prices have the effect of increasing the cost of living to a shocking degree. The heaping of all wealth in the hands of a few has the effect of reducing the multitude to poverty. With all our great wealth the figure of wage stubs among us, and thousands on thousands are destroyed by the Moloch of poverty.

"So, Mr. President, when we contemplate the infinite affluence and opulence of our nation and then remember that the eyes of millions of our countrymen are red with wakefulness and tears, because of the pressions and hidden injustices caused by an improper and an unequal distribution of this wealth; when we see giant trust grasping combinations, and conditioned or popoly madly and wildly struggling for more millions we must admit that the noble service in which the public man may engage, the most courageous service the patriot may perform, and the most needful work which the humanitarian may do is to try to apply a remedy.

"This reform is a part, and a part only of the great work yet to be done to insure comfort and luxury to all persons. That evil will be abolished in the fullness of time let no one doubt, for liberty has made her difficult but glorious way over thrones of tyrants, over injustice, over monarchies and monopolies. She has been crucified at times, but has flown an eagle's flight with an eye that never winks and a will that never tires.'

RETIRING

Fac-simile of the Sibley letters to Archbold which dated Feb. 16, 1900, before the Senate Thursday election to the Senate. The date, as will be seen, Feb. 26, 1905.

JOSEPH C. SIBLEY, CHAIRMAN.

Committee on Manufactures
House of Representatives U. S.
Washington, February 26th 1900.

My Dear Sir,

Yesterday I had a long talk with a friend in the Senate whom you know & can always regard as one of the strongest men in that body (Mr. B. a Democrat). He is wholly and unalterably opposed with Bryan in his foolish policy & cowardliness. I think he influenced & made a proof fight against the vicious principle that the Govt can open my books, that the Govt can spend my private secrets because or need my books when engaged in some one thinks I am engaged in making too much money.

It shows the courage and the ability to make a legal argument on the floor of the Senate actual for one of that body.

Rockefeller complete not to have a consultation with him some day?

One great virtue of the proper time would be a lawyer of strength and ability.

He comes recommended today by being the leader of his party.

Then any one man in it.

If you want to see him think I would arrange for him to call when in N.Y.

Very truly yours
Joseph C. Sibley

Plain Record of Bailey, Who Was Democratic Leader in U. S. Senate

HEARST SHOWED SENATOR TOOK MONEY FROM STANDARD OIL

Received Fees from the Trust, Also Borrowed Funds from the Company.

FREQUENTED ITS OFFICES

"Put Fore Feet in Trough and Has Kept Them There," Says H. C. Pierce.

SENATOR JOSEPH W. BAILEY, of Texas, one of the Democratic leaders in the U. S. Senate, and Senator J. B. Foraker, of Ohio, one of the leaders of the Republican party, were both exposed by Mr. Hearst during the campaign.

Bailey, Foraker and Senator Burton were about to retire. He had been twice Senator of the most corrupt of the richest laws and practices.

In the light of the Standard Oil letters his reputation shrivelled like a bit of soiled paper cast into the flames he retired from political life.

And Now Bailey Retires.

Senator Bailey began his career in Washington by expressing unwillingness to work even the conventional "dress suit." He ended by wearing tamely and humbly the scarlet livery of the corporations. But while Bailey is willing to wear the Trust livery and answer the Rockefeller bell as readily as Aldrich or any other Standard oil lackey, he does not like to have attention called to his badge of servitude and at present he is doing his best to hide it and shield himself behind the grave of the dead Senator Gorman.

The whole matter has no interest for me, excepting as it illustrates that growing evil in American public life—the control of the people's representatives by the corporations.

Exposed by Mr. Hearst.

In his exposure of Senator Bailey Mr. Hearst said in a speech at El Paso, Tex., and the Senator's own State—in September, 1906:

I am now told I will give one final resume of Mr. Bailey's spectacular career and I am requested to ask the basis of his contentions to be peculiarly reposed in the valiant Democratic champion of the Standard Oil—I refer to the Hon. Joseph Weldon Bailey, of Gainesville, Texas.

I shall read documents and records also without comment, lest I be accused of prejudice.

I shall lay the evidence before you just as it has been laid before me and leave you to be the judges.

I shall try to be free from bias, and I assure you on my word that I have no feeling one way or the other for or against Mr. Bailey personally.

I am not speaking to arouse the class prejudice of the poor against the representatives of the people who betray the people and deny the decisions of their courts, but those who surround their wealth under the liberal institutions of this country and who use that wealth to subvert and corrupt the government of the country.

It may sound queer to the average conservative citizen of this nation that, in closed mute devouring the crime and infamy of treason, [illegible] as connected with the Foraker case and the Bacon case are peculiarly similar to many recent ones.

Mr. Foraker, while a Republican Senator of the United States, received fees from the Standard Oil.

Mr. Bailey, while a Democratic Senator of the United States, received fees from the Standard Oil.

Mr. Foraker was an agent of the Standard Oil, and a representative of the corporation, took advantage of the peculiarity of his relation to borrow money from the Standard Oil.

Mr. Bailey, while attorney for the Standard Oil and a representative of the people, took advantage of that delicate situation to borrow money from the Standard Oil.

Mr. Foraker being a Republican, advised the Standard Oil lawyers and officials to [illegible] Mr. Bailey, being a Democrat, advised the Standard Oil Association, and [illegible]

Then there are, however, some essential differences between the two cases. Mr. Foraker being a Republican advised the Standard Oil lawyers and officials to [illegible] Mr. Bailey, being a Democrat, advised the Standard Oil Association, and [illegible]

There is [illegible] Foraker has [illegible] Standard Oil [illegible] may be [illegible]

Greatly appreciating your services, I am, sincerely yours,

Q—When a certain [illegible] Oil Company at No. 26 Broadway [illegible]

A—It was along in 1899, late in the year, as I recollect, that Mr. Pierce told me of taking Senator Bailey over to No. 26 Broadway (standard Oil Headquarters in New York) and introducing him to the man of authority in the Standard Oil Company.

Q—Then, you say, this introduction of Senator Bailey at No. 26 Broadway took place the latter part of 1899 and it was in 1900, was it not, that the Texas situation became acute?

A—To the very best of my recollection, the suit against the Waters-Pierce Oil Company in Texas was decided against them in the early part of 1900, and they were to be evicted from the State. The Standard Oil Company in Texas became very active when this decision was reached, and devised means to guarantee themselves in the same position they had always been—that is, in absolute control.

Failed to Hide Payments.

In a [illegible] address to the Texas Legislature in 1906 Senator Bailey denied that he had ever been employed by the Standard Oil Company, and declared that he would resign from any branch of the government [illegible] if the statement was [illegible] untrue.

The fact appears to be that Mr. Pierce in the payments of money to Bailey always sent his personal checks or certificates of deposit.

Senator Bailey did not know that in order to reimburse himself, Pierce turned all the papers over to the Waters-Pierce Oil Company to be attached to vouchers, and thus they became a part of the records of this branch of the Standard Oil Trust and passed into the hands of John D. Archbold, its secretary.

[illegible] of Mr. Bailey's intimacy with [illegible] and Mr. Pierce [illegible] Waters-Pierce Oil Company, the president, Henry Clay Pierce, resigned in September, 1900, [illegible] money transactions with Mr. Bailey.

[illegible] was a witness in the State of Missouri [illegible] Waters-Pierce Oil Company, the president, Henry Clay Pierce, resigned in September, 1900, [illegible] money transactions with Mr. Bailey.

He says that loans which he had personally made to Senator Bailey were afterward charged to the oil company as legal expenses.

Bailey's Defence.

All the books of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company show that the company has paid any money to me directly or indirectly, every entry is utterly and wholly false, and my opinion is that if such false entries appear in these books the man who made them or who had them made simply robbed the Waters-Pierce Oil Company. Such a proceeding would have been an easy one.

"Americans Have in Divorce Too Convenient an Emergency Exit"

We Are Victims of the "Spontaneity" of Our Affections, but the Marriage of Love Is an Honor to Us, Says the Chevalier de Fouquieres, the "Beau Brummell" of Paris, in the First of a Series of Articles Upon the Manners and Morals of America.

THE Chevalier Andre de Fouquieres is one who, for want of a better description, must be called the Beau Brummell of Paris. In the exquisiteness of his costume he resembles that celebrity, but in his writings he has condemned the truly British manners of Brummell.

M. de Fouquieres is the guiding spirit of the most fashionable entertainments of Paris. He comes to New York to lecture on subjects which appeal to the cultivated element of fashionable society. One subject, for instance, will be "Dandyism and Don Juanism."

At the same time, M. de Fouquieres will write for this newspaper a series of articles, the first of which, dealing with the American woman, appears to-day. He will also write about our clothes, our manners, our cooking, and other topics, with which he is speciall qualified to deal

By The Chevalier Andre de Fouqui eres.

THERE is no subject which could delight me more than that on which I have the mission of speaking to [illegible] to-day, for woman is the necessary [illegible] of our existence. It is she [illegible] our lives from our earliest [illegible] children, most of us already [illegible] love affairs and [illegible] men feel ourselves [illegible] toward the sex which every nation [illegible] the beautiful sex [illegible] the full liberty of heart and conscience, we choose her who alone, by her presence, can charm our leisure, and [illegible] labors

I well remember that, when I was [illegible] years old I was smitten with affection [illegible] a young New York lady whose skin [illegible] as a peach and whose [illegible] more blond than the ripe wheat [illegible] sparkling blue eyes had conque[red]

[illegible] made each other's acquaintance [illegible] de Boulogne, the most beautiful [illegible] And far from indiscreet [illegible] told each other little stories [illegible] from the watchfulness of our [illegible]

[illegible] my little lady's governess [s]ought us in vain. It was only after four hours of pursuit that she discovered [illegible] in a flowery thicket in company with [a] good hunting dog who regarded our youthful passion with sympathy.

That was the beginning of the Franc[o-Americ]an relations in my life. That [illegible] is already far in the past, but it [is a] very dear past to me, filled with the pure and careless joys of adolescence

Later my life in society permitted me to meet in Paris many American young girls. I learned then by experience that the American woman is a being at once [st]range and charming

It seems to me now that they talk of her throughout the whole universe. She has conquered the foremost place, thanks to her qualities, and thanks, perhaps, also to her little faults. But we rejoice that she is not perfect; if she were she would run the risk of becoming tiresome—I mean "ennuyeuse"—and ennui is the worst of [illegible]

For several years I have gone every Summer to Dinard, one of the most famous seaside places of Brittany. Dinard is during the Summer season a great meeting place of Americans, who meet one another there every year upon our "cote d'Emeraude"—our "Emerald Coast." In the streets and in the stores you hear French and English spoken—above the roofs of the hotels the American flag floats in all its pride Circumstances have therefore favored me and permitted me to know from my childhood the American young girl, whose [spirit] of independence is her distinctive [trait]. That is why I feel qualified to say [some]thing, even after a very short stay in New York

[Y]es, indeed, she is the most independent [illegible] that exists, like one of those [illegible] graceful deer that scamper [illegible] the forest, guided only by the [illegible] of living, breathing the perfume of the wild flowers along their path, and [quench]ing their thirst at the brooklets [illegible]

The American young girl, at home [or a]broad, leads society, chooses her own [fri]ends, walks runs, flies, moves about according to her own fancy. Her parents would not think of opposing her instincts of liberty

Has not the American young girl a conscience which forbids her to make a bad use of this liberty? That is, indeed, a [illegible] disturbs our French mothers of [illegible] I mean those who [illegible]

Ah [illegible] cry, "the American [illegible] will ruin our daughters"

In our [illegible] nations, would [illegible] on either side of their daughters [illegible] and perhaps even add a [illegible]

These maternal fears appear to me [illegible] ensate, for I believe sincerely in [the] noble instincts of young girls. "Exceptions prove the rule," says the proverb.

I remember that in certain French provincial towns [illegible] gatherings mothers would never take their eyes off their daughters for fear that they might [illegible] their reputation. Such extreme constraint has sometimes disastrous consequences. "If one pulls on the cord [too] much it will break."

In France, as long as a girl is not married, she remains under maternal guardianship. Until she is married we call her a young girl. I know a "young girl" of forty-five years who would expect to lose the respect of her neighbors [if] she did not always go out day or night accompanied by her maid

These cases are becoming more rare in France, it is true. The influence of Americanism has modified many things. Decidedly, the New World has its good qualities

I prefer [illegible] independence, of American young girls to our old-fashioned French ways, on condition [illegible] that they have been brought up in an atmosphere of morality.

In France a woman begins to live only after she is married. Marriage is, therefore, [illegible] an indispensable social [illegible] henceforth her place [illegible] enjoys her liberty [illegible]

Marriage [illegible] other hand, does not [illegible] life for the American woman. She continues to run about the world with or without her husband—more often without him—just as she used to do before. The husband works while she studies the art of spending easily the money gained with hard labor

At home or abroad American women possess indisputably the art of dressing. By adornment they make the most of the many gifts that a generous nature has bestowed upon them

They seek refinement in elegance. Paris attracts them. They spend all the money that is needed to gratify their taste. Thanks to them, every article of luxury has risen considerably in price in Paris. Our Parisiennes weep over [it]

The American woman consecrates [her] dearest moments—and a remarkable number of them—to those thousand little details of the toilette which make her more attractive and more desirable. It seems to me that the New York woman attaches a special importance to beauty and its care

The American type of beauty is characterized by much distinction, a little coldness, and great purity of line. The American woman is made of snow, of a moonbeam, and a little sunlight

Latin beauty is marked by more warmth romance and feeling. It is own cousin to the sun.

American beauty [is] the result of a mix[ture] [illegible] mixture is favorable to a splendid expansion. It is like a torrent which comes down from the mountains fed by springs and rivulets.

Latin beauty is the peculiar quality of an admirable race which is beginning to be exhausted by centuries of ardent life. Its blood is seldom reinforced, and lacks strength. It is a stream which is [no]t fed by foreign sources.

Have you not in the United States [bo]oks which are consecrated to "professional beauties" in which your most beautiful compatriots receive a homage which could not conveniently be paid to them anywhere else?

We in France admire beauty very much, [bu]t we do not give it this official and [pu]blic baptism.

As I was going on Monday last to the superb representation of "Madame Butterfly" at the Metropolitan Opera House, I realized that nowhere in the world but here could I see so many truly beautiful

Love, indeed, is a question which must occupy the American girl very much, but I do not think that it dominates her. At least she handles her heart with remarkable sang froid in her love affairs. The French woman is more passionate. Her heart is the sovereign master of her actions. She knows indeed that love is the source of her power with him she loves. Madame de Maintenon, the celebrated mistress of King Louis XIV, kept her influence to the day of her death at the court of France, because she truly loved the King. It was the same with our King Louis XV., who was long ruled by the equally celebrated Marquise de Pompadour.

It seems a curious contradiction that French women love more, but American women marry more often for love. I must tell you that the marriage of love is as frequent in the United States as it is rare in our country. Yes, indeed, America is the kingdom of the marriage of love, the marriage based upon sentiment and not upon interest. It is enough that your hearts have spoken. It is enough that you have felt yourselves drawn toward one another by a magnetic fluid; it is enough that a moonbeam has put a happy inspiration into your heads to make you swear an eternal love upon the altar.

But that oath of eternal love was, alas, too sincere to last very long. An incident happens, another being whom you did not know yesterday passes, and you forget the love eternal. Then you break the marriage with as much facility as you had contracted it. You are victims of the spontaneity of your sentiments. And why do you enjoy such facility in breaking the chain? Because you know that divorce will enable you to begin your life and love again

Americans have in divorce an emergency exit so convenient that they use it very often, and also abuse it. The number of divorces in the United States is continually increasing. Your example will probably prove contagious, for Europeans, in spite of the traditions that bind them to the past, hasten to accept all the new conveniences of existence and the delights of a free and joyous life.

Is it not better to marry in full knowledge of the responsibilities and to resort to divorce only in special cases? I approve entirely that a woman who is unjustly deceived and shamefully beaten should ask for a divorce. It becomes then a legitimate deliverance. But the deception must be serious

I know a woman who permitted herself to be locked up to the day of her death by the will of a jealous husband, rather than ask for a divorce

She was a martyr, but I think that such sacrifice was useless.

Divorce may not have evil consequences when there are no children. It becomes most deplorable when children become separated from one or the other of their parents through various marriages.

Very often you see these children in America losing all the joys and consolations of family life. That is what that adorable thing, the marriage of love, too often ends in

This institution remains none the less beautiful in its origin and worthy of the admiration of every one who has any sentiment in his heart.

The marriage of love, in spite of its sometimes unhappy consequences, remains an honor to America. I recall the pretty history of two of my cousins of Virginia, who waited seventeen years before they married. As a matter of fact she waited, while he was far away toiling to make a fortune with all his might. For those seventeen years they never saw one another; they only wrote. Fidelity, love, patience, were victorious.

At last they came together again, they married, had many children and lived happily ever afterward. That was a marriage that was followed by a honeymoon that has never ended.

In Europe divorce is more rare. Women continue to live with their husbands officially and seek coyly to find a consoler who will soften the chains of marriage. The household remains united, the future of the children is not compromised, and society is satisfied. To some divorce may appear more loyal and more moral than this.

I have been speaking to you of exceptional and sensational cases. We must not forget that virtuous people have no history. The newspapers speak to you of those who trample upon principles and morality. They do not speak to you of those—their name is legion—who live quietly in the peacefulness of their own firesides.

Last Sunday evening I was strolling through the suburbs of New York and observed the homes of workers who enjoyed life tranquilly. Many of them had that kindly air which denotes a good conscience. I became interested especially in one young couple; their dress was modest but their appearance denoted self respect. A little child followed them, playing with a cat which he held in his arms. Suddenly an automobile passed with a terrible noise. The child was in danger of being run over, but happily escaped. But alas! he dropped the poor cat, which was run over and killed instantly

The child wept bitterly, and the two young people tried to console him. They had all three lost a companion. Those people do not ask much of life; they are pleased with a little sunshine; they love one another simply without knowing the causes of life and without seeking to analyze their sentiments to excess, as some of us do.

A cloud had darkened their life, but my young couple have doubtless resumed today their life of labor and peaceful happiness.

Those who struggle to live learn the virtue of resignation. They do not seek to pull everything to pieces in the name of psychology. Among simple and good people who make mutual concessions to one another, divorce, the outcome of excessive civilization, is rare.

WOMEN WILL COMPEL UNIVERSAL PEACE---By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

E[illegible] women [illegible]

AN APPEAL TO THE WOMEN OF THE UNITED STATES.

What [illegible] do, what we, the women of this country, must do, is to crystalize the deep and strong peace sentiment so universal in our land into a positive, active, enthusiastic force that will make it triumphant and forever put an end to militarism and war.

How can this be done? We have the ex[ample] [illegible] by arbitration. Led by their [illegible] women, they erected the Statue of Christ, moulded from their cannon, on their Andean boundary. Thus their swords were literally beaten into the plough shares

THE LEADER

WHAT shall the leader be in that great day
When we who sleep and dream that we are slaves
Shall wake and know that Liberty is ours?
Mark well that word—not yours, not mine, but ours.
For through the mingling of the separate streams
Of individual protest and desire,
In one united sea of purpose, lies
The course to Freedom.

When Progression takes
Her undisputed right of way, and sinks
The old traditions and conventions where
They may not rise, what shall the leader be?

No mighty warrior skilled in crafts of war,
Sowing earth's fertile furrows with dead men
And staining crimson God's cerulean sea
Nor yet a monarch with a silly crown
Perched on an empty head—an inbred heir
To senseless titles and anemic blood.

No ruler, purchased by the perjured votes
Of striving demagogues whose god is gold,
Not one of these shall lead to Liberty.
Its suffering cries for kindness.

He who leads
Must then be strong and hopeful as the dawn
That rises unafraid and full of joy
He must be kind to every living thing;
Kind as the Krishna, Buddha and the Christ,
And full of love for all created life.
Oh, not in war shall his great prowess lie,
Nor shall he find his pleasure in the chase.
Too great for slaughter, friend of man and beast,
Touching the borders of the Unseen Realms
And bringing down to earth their mystic fires
To light our troubled pathways, wise and kind
And human to the core, so shall he be,
The coming leader of the coming time.

[of p]eace. The hatred and animosity which [exis]ted so long between these two [illegible] have entirely disappeared, and in their place the most friendly relations exist.

Let us, the women of this country, join hands to secure a colossal statue of peace at the entrance of the Panama Canal. Forts at the entrance of this canal would place our country in the rear of our twentieth century civilization, a humiliating denial of our Christian profession, as followers of the Prince of Peace, and a disgraceful contrast to our "Liberty Enlightening the World," which greets all who reach our Eastern shore. Such a statue would be a fitting memorial of the world-wide treaty inaugurated by the United States, which we are assured will soon be ratified by England, Japan and the Continental European Powers.

Dear sisters, rise bravely as one to the height of your superb opportunities and duty and justify our incomparable faith that all things are possible to organized womanhood united in aim and purpose.

* * * *

It is less than a hundred years ago that women took pride in thinking their sons were born to be warriors.

When Mme. de Stael asked Napoleon who was the greatest woman living according to his idea, he replied:

"The woman who is the mother of the greatest number of soldiers."

His reply was much applauded by many women, who thought Mme. de Stael was "masculine" because she used her brains, while they only used their bodies in providing sons to be killed for the glory of a man who wanted to be an emperor.

All that is changed now, and women know that war is unnecessary, and that men who meet and kill one another to settle disputes are crude and undeveloped types, and that men of real power, men who are keeping in step with the march of progress, will make arbitration, not murder, the solution of national misunderstandings and disputes

Women are THINKING PEACE, where of old they thought only of war. This thought of a great peace statue at the entrance of the Panama Canal is beautiful, and should be materialized into a fact. It should be, it can be, and it WILL BE, if women are determined to carry the vision into realization.

Nothing can stand before the united resolve of all the good, peace-loving women of the world, or of America alone, if they will work in harmony.

[illegible]

[illegible] the physical condition of the mad King is perfect [illegible] and better than that of many men of his age whose minds are unaffected.

Since June 13, 1886, the day of the death of his brother, Ludwig II. [illegible] Otto has been [illegible] King of Bavaria [illegible]

But [illegible] passed stripping poor, mad Otto of his royal rights before they could be invested in Ludwig, for there could not be two legitimate Kings in Bavaria.

It is almost certain that the next King of Bavaria is shown in this remarkable picture. That King may be Prince Rupert or, less probably, his only son, the young Prince Leopold, but if sudden death snatches away the mad King Otto, nearly sixty-five years old and in feeble health, or if Bavaria should decide to strip Otto of his royal rights the next King will be Prince Regent Ludwig, now sixty-seven. This picture is remarkable, too, because personages representing four genrations of the royal house of Bavaria appear. The Prince Regent, who was ninety-one, died December 12 last. He had ruled Bavaria since 1886, when it became necessary to confine King Otto. When Leopold died, his eldest son, Prince Ludwig, succeeded him as Regent. When Ludwig dies, he will be succedded by Prince Rupert, his eldest son, now forty-four. However long the span of Otto's life, it is extremely doubtful that he will outlive Rupert. And if Rupert is Regent when Otto dies he becomes King. Last of all, it is improbable in the last degree that Otto will live longer than Prince Rupert's oldest son, Leopold, who was born in May, 1901.

Wedding Will Be Conspicuous Among the Festivities of the Eastertide.

THE announcement of the approaching wedding of Miss Frances Sullivan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Sullivan of Washington boulevard, Chicago, to Dr Leo Cummings, also of Chicago, is received with widespread interest by the many Boston friends of the bride-elect. The wedding will be one of the early Eastertide social events and will be attended by a large party of prominent Bostonians. Miss Sullivan will be attended at the altar by Miss Mary O'Connell, niece of Cardinal O'Connell, Miss Bertha O'Conor and Miss Mary McGaffey, three of her most intimate friends.

It will be the third wedding in the family during the year, Mrs. William P. McAvoy, (Miss Helen Sullivan), having recently spent her honeymoon in Boston.

During Miss Sullivan's stay in Boston, while a student at the New England Conservatory of Music, she endeared herself to a large circle of friends by her natural charm of manner and genial disposition. She was a member of the party of Bostonians who accompanied Cardinal O'Connell to Rome to attend the Consistory of 1912.

Miss Sullivan, who is the daughter of a millionaire, will be the guest of Miss O'Connell during the present month, when she will renew her Boston friendships and incidentally attend the second assembly of the Abbottsford Club. Several social gatherings have been planned in her honor.

Recent events in the East, where the Turk is being practically driven out of Europe, are read with particular interest by the members of The Order of the Alhambra, whose plan and ritual is based upon the conquest of Granda, with its famous palace of The Alhambra, by King Ferdinand. Another Ferdinand is now dealing the Turk fatal blows. The special committee of Boston caravan of The Alhambra meets this afternoon to perfect arrangements for the coming degree of the order in this city, when about 100 candidates will be taught lessons derived from the struggles and victories of the Christians over the Musselman in Spain. Various sub-committee will make final reports at this afternoon's meeting. Dr. Henry F. MacLeod is chairman of the whole committee.

OUR REVIEW OF 1912—By Lewis Allen

IT is fitting that on the passing of the year 1912 and the birth of the glad new year with the unlucky tail-end, 1913, we should solemnly review the happenings of the past year. Great strides have been made by scientists, Democrats, grafters and suffragists in civilization, into office, to the tall timbers and to Albany. Several things have happened during 1912, a few of which it may not be seemly to mention here, but those things of great moment to the nation and the world at large, it is well to honor and perpetuate on these pages.

MUSIC—The old masters have not been extremely busy, but from the homes for the incurably insane and a few other places our store of popular songs has been increased nearly ten-fold, including such plaintive songs as "He Chucked a Chicken Salad in Mabel's Marble Mug," "I'll Love You 'Till the Rent Comes Due," "I Wonder Who's Suing Her Now?" "Pitter-ty-Splush!" "Where the Hens are Gaily Crowing Rocky Dear," and that delectable ballad, "I Wonder Will She Wallop Me To-night?"

AVIATION—Interest in aviation seems to have fallen off considerably, along with the usual number of aviators. Aviation may pick up, but the aviator will have to be scraped up. The way some suffragettes have got up in the air has discouraged most aviators.

MATRIMONY—Lillian Russell has married again this year—as usual.

FICTION—Another unpublished story by O. Henry was printed. Probably the strongest fiction of the year was Mayor Gaynor's report that there is no graft in the Police Department.

RAILROADS—Aside from the sound of explosions and trains colliding and rolling down embankments on the New Haven road, all has been quiet in railroad circles. The Erie bought another engine—almost as good as new.

CHINA—The Chinese exonerated themselves from a flowery kingdom into a rather odorous republic.

ART—Madame Cutis Kyll invented a new waterproof rouge. Mr. J. P. Morgan, who is sometimes seen on Wall street, but more frequently felt there, purchased seven or eight million dollars worth of artistic gets, not to show us how much he cares for art, but how little he cares for seven or eight million dolls.

POLES—The north pole discovered. What will the south pole be discovered by Peary and Cook and the South Pole by—a long three in all out of a possible three average.

WORMS—Harvard scientists declared that worms can think. Inasmuch as worms at times stroll across our sidewalks and frequently turn when the ladies walk along, we would really like to know what they think.

SCIENCE—Scientists discovered that were it not for the whiskers on a cigar at night Broadway would be as dark as Mammoth Cave. Our Government scientists also discovered holes in Swiss cheese.

WAITERS—The waiters went on a strike because the taxi drivers and coatroom boys got away with everything before the guests could get to the tables.

FAKE—We put this under the division of "fake" for obvious reasons. It was claimed a woman got a seat in the subway this past year.

CANAL—England becomes peeved because we didn't make her a Christmas present of the Panama Canal. A number of Un-Americans think we should have done this.

HOTELS—Many wealthy travellers here and abroad have been writing to Mayor Gaynor for terms at that well known and sumptuous hostelry, "The Tombs."

MURDER—New York had one of the classiest little murders last Summer ever heard of, a few feet from Crime Square. The victim was one Rosenthal, a gambler who once, at least, dined with Lieutenant Becker, of the Police Department. Mayor Gaynor showed considerable emotion. He said Becker should not have dined with Rosenthal. Becker, now awaiting the electric chair, is saying nothing, but poor Rosenthal's friends say it was rather tough to kill him just because he dined with Becker.

STOMACHS—Owing to the high cost of living, many stomachs have not been as active as usual during the year, but Diamond Jim Brady has the laugh on the rest of us. Not being satisfied with his stomach, or vice versa, he went to Johns Hopkins Institute and bought a brand new stomach. It cost him half a million, but Jim preferred dyspepsia in his bank roll than in his commissary department.

TERPSICHORE—There were no new "Dances" designed this year, but half a score of wriggles, contortions, humps, loops and such things were invented. These include "The Kangaroo Fit," the "Camel Cramp," the "Plumaine Poison Polka" and the "Sloppy Schottische."

PUGILISM—No white hope put on the gloves with Jack Johnson, but a white hopeless met him at the altar and it ended in a tie. Johnson seems about due to take the count from Uncle Sam, however.

IMPROVEMENTS—Few improvements were made during 1912, but one deserves mention, and that was brought about by the Interborough, which added 12,000 straps to its cars.

POLITICS—A gentleman born at StaunTON, worked at PrinceTON, is Governor at TrenTON, will soon go to WashingTON to take a little job as President. His name is Wilson, and he gives promise of making a Bon-TON President. According to the election returns, with a few women still scrapping in California, it is safe to assume that the country went Democratic.

PARCELS POST—In past years the express companies have solemnly assured the public that they could not make their service one cent cheaper and gain a living profit. During 1913, they have announced, their express rates will be 50 per cent or so less. It is barely possible they have heard a rumor that our parcels post is to be established.

WAR—War has cast its grim shadow over London and its grim shadow over European Turkey. The Balkan States have apparently whipped Turkey to a whisper, killing hundreds of thousands of the Turks. I should worry.

SCHOOL OF JOURNALISM—Story by—no, not that again, however, the building is going up rapidly. Already it is nearly a column in length. The prevalence of Italian workmen there indicates that there will be a great deal of Bold-Face Roman about it, a lot of Long Primer, with perhaps now and then a Pica.

LETTERS—Mayor Gaynor completed his 283765,435367483726th letter during the year.

SUFFRAGE—There were more suffering suffragettes among the few who walked to Albany at the close of the year than were ever gathered anywhere except outside of a milliner's window without the price.

THEATRICAL—George M. Cohan demonstrated that he could get one over without the aid of the stars and stripes, clog steps and ragtime solos. Lew Fields jabbed his fingers in Joe Weber's face and said, "Migke, I luff you," for the 3,964th time, and Marcus Loew opened another theatre.

MONOTONY—Roosevelt called another man a——Oh, what's the use, you've already guessed it.

CHICAGO—Report had it that there was a hold-up in that city during the year.

FATALITY—A taxi driver died in convulsions when he learned he had undercharged a passenger.

BULLMOOSE—A brand-new political animal that bellows loudly, makes financial friends, and breaks up happy political homes, but gets nowhere, was discovered during the year by the champion African wart hog slayer.

Something New! Indestructible, Unbreakable Resolutions

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

WHY put up with the customary New Year's resolutions when you and everybody else is fully aware that they are the most fragile things in the world?

Can you name a brand of such resolutions that have not been broken within from twenty-four hours to twenty-four days? You cannot. Then secure your New Year's resolutions of Professor Solidome, of Marblehead, guaranteed not to ravel, splinter, crack or break.

They are yours for two quarts of diamonds each, or the entire lot for a scuttle of coal. Here they are:

RESOLVED—Not to make more than three entries in my 1913 diary.

RESOLVED—Not to smoke more than one pipe, one cigarette or one cigar at a time.

RESOLVED—Not to say "Fudge" when a stronger and more sulphuric word will serve twice as well.

RESOLVED—Not to turn around and look at the women on a windy street corner unless I have my eyesight.

RESOLVED—Not to take more than one drink from the same glass at the same time.

RESOLVED—Not to pay any bills before they are due.

RESOLVED—Not to tell my wife (or husband) all I know.

RESOLVED—Not to laugh at anything I may see at a musical comedy.

RESOLVED—Not to wear a straw hat in January or February.

RESOLVED—Not to take a seat in the subway.

RESOLVED—Not to earn more than a million dollars this year.

RESOLVED—Not to keep the same cook more than six months.

RESOLVED—Not to let my neighbor wear better clothes than I do so long as my husband wears pockets.

RESOLVED—Not to pay less for food and everything else this year than I did last year.

RESOLVED—Not to date a letter "1913" for three weeks.

Man's Smartest Friend — Amateur Animal Trainer Exhibiting Pet Dog to Evening Party

By Horatio Winslow.

SCENE—The Parlor.

TRAINER (quietly—in sweet, low voice)—Now, Napoleon, I want you to shake hands. That's right. Other paw. Good dog. Goo-o-o-od dog! Now, Napoleon, stand on your hind legs. (Still very quietly.) No, I didn't say, "Roll over," I said, "Stand on your hind legs." Ye-e-e-s, good Napoleon, good doggie! (Petting ad lib.) Now, Napoleon, it may rain so I want that umbrella from the hall.

(Exit Napoleon, sadly.) He understands every word I say. Sometimes I think he must be almost a mind-reader. I just sit here and want something and he gets up and brings it to me. (Napoleon peers in at the door, wagging his tail.) Go and get the umbrella, Napoleon: yes, the UMBRELLA. (Exit Napoleon without the air of one carrying a message to Garcia. Clattering outside.) You see he always does what I say, no matter how long it takes him. Bring it in, Napoleon.

(Faithful animal appears with somewhat ghosted rubber belonging to nervous gentleman with spectacles.) No, I didn't say "Rubber," I said "Umbrella!" Take the rubber back. (Nervous gentleman, fearing for well-being of his rubber, says): "Oh, that's all right; I'll take it back myself." (Sad to relate, the trainer misses altogether the significance of this remark.) No, Napoleon has taken the rubber out and he must carry it back again.

(Slightly irritated.) Take the rubber back, Napoleon, and bring the umbrella. (Napoleon dropping the rubber, stands looking very sheepish.) Take it back, I say! Napoleon fetching the rubber to the trainer rests a confiding muzzle on the latter's knee. Young lady at window suppresses a snicker. Barometer is falling with signs of approaching storm. Trainer speaks with that suppressed articulation used by the wounded golf player when responding to the Bishop's courteous "I trust it did not pain you." Napoleon pretends that the rubber is a large vicious burglar and attacks it ferociously. The trainer has lost his temper, but thinks no one has noticed it. Napoleon and the rubber frisk merrily about the room as trainer begins to froth slightly at the mouth. Napoleon, it is clear, thinks that this is a new and delightful game.

(Trainer jumps for Napoleon, who eludes him with a gay bound toward the young lady at window. Nervous gentleman, seeing his chance, grabs the rubber, Napoleon resisting joyously. Alarms and excursions. By this time trainer has upset large and fragile vase on his way to the scene of battle. Nervous gentleman has given up fight. Young lady is screaming from chair. Trainer belabors Napoleon with both fists and vocabulary, though out of deference for the company he is plainly suppressing his choicest thoughts. Rubber is wrenched from Napoleon, and there is surreptitiously thrust between his jaws an umbrella also belonging to the unfortunate gentleman with nerves. Thus assisted, Napoleon turns the trick.

Trainer (breathing heavily.) There you are! Look at that! He understands every word I say to him. (Trainer really believes this.)

Sardonic Humorist (who some night will be hit over the head ...e he passes a dark alley.) Say, old man, that's great stuff! Try something else with him.

The Wonders of the New Surgery

MONDAY.

THE brain of the well-known publicist, the Hon. A. X. Allaround, died last night at 7:30. Wherever Learning and Virtue abound the loss will be felt.

The following prominent citizens will bear Mr. Allaround's brain to its final resting place: Messrs. F. Knifem, the well-known surgeon who had been in charge of the case; J. Jones, Editor of The Petrified Review; O. Smith, President Myriastude University; Rev. Z. Johnson, Pastor Macrospire Church; Senator T. Stubbs, the Statesman, and the renowned jurist, Judge Woolsack.

TWO WEEKS LATER.

After hopeful bulletins all-day Surgeon F. Knifem, with tears in his eyes, announced the death of the stomach of the late well-known publicist, the Hon A. X. Allaround.

Its last meal taken at noon, of diluted sherry and egg, seemed at first to agree with it. But at three o'clock came a rapid change for the worse, and it passed away in the gloaming just before the bell rang for dinner.

The remains will be carried to the crematory by the following intimate friends of the deceased: Tilda, who for the past twenty years prepared its meals; John, the waiter at the De Luxe, where Mr. Allaround lunched; Francois, the chef at the De Luxe; Henry Soak, the wine agent; Emil Trinkmahr, the brewer, and George, the free lunch man at Sausenberg's.

THREE WEEKS LATER.

"The end has come." With these sad words Surgeon F. Knifem announced the cessation of the beating of the heart of the late Hon. A. X. Allaround. After a valiant struggle for life the circulatory apparatus succumbed at an early hour this morning.

The heart will be carried to the place of interment by those who knew it best in life: Bottle Devere, of the Midnight Merrymakers' Company; a milliner, a manicure, two blondes, and Mrs. Allaround.

MONTGOMERY—I'm glad I met your wife, George. She seemed to take quite a fancy to me.
GEORGE—It wasn't my luck to have had her meet you sooner.
MONTGOMERY—What do you say to your wife when you come home late?
GEORGE—Whatever gave you the impression that I ever got a chance to talk?
MONTGOMERY—You're a well-informed man, aren't you?
GEORGE—Yes, my wife tells me EVERYTHING.
MONTGOMERY—Your wife is a charming woman. She has a lovely disposition, has she not?
GEORGE—Yes, she has—NOT!
MONTGOMERY—George, you seem to be up on geography. Tell me, right off the reel, what is the great American desert?
GEORGE—PRUNES!
MONTGOMERY—Tell me, George, why do you often gaze so fondly at that picture of your wife in your watch fob?
GEORGE—Monty, that's the only place in which she looks pleasant. Say, old pal, what's the difference between a lamp and a woman?
MONTGOMERY—I don't know.
GEORGE—If you trim a woman up she goes out, but if you trim a lamp up, it doesn't.
MONTGOMERY—I hear that your brother got married the other day and that he and his bride set out in their new automobile. Where did they spend their honeymoon?
GEORGE—In the hospital.
MONTGOMERY—I went fishing the other day and caught two shad. Then I started to row home.
GEORGE—Foolish fisherman! Why didn't you let the shad roe?
MONTGOMERY—My wife got the best of me when we had our daily argument this morning.
GEORGE—My wife got the best of me on only ONE occasion.
MONTGOMERY—When was that?
GEORGE—When she got me to marry her. How's that new house that you're building coming on?
MONTGOMERY—Grand! We've just reached the second mortgage
GEORGE—I wish I was about three or four feet taller.
MONTGOMERY—Why that wish?
GEORGE—Because my doctor told me that whiskey was killing me by inches
MONTGOMERY—Did you ever gamble?
GEORGE—Past master of it! I've been married three times.
MONTGOMERY—I saw your sister dancing the two-step at the cotillion the other night. She does it beautifully.
GEORGE—Why not? She learned it from her two step-sisters
MONTGOMERY—I hunted all over town for you last night. Where were you, George?
GEORGE—Oh, I went to Minnie Smith's wedding.
MONTGOMERY—Did the wedding come off without a hitch?
GEORGE—That's just what it did. The fellow that she was going to marry didn't show up. Say, that's some dog you have there.
MONTGOMERY—Yes; he's worth fifteen thousand dollars.
GEORGE—Glory! I never knew a dog could save that much!

A Fool and His Hair

A Humorous Poem Written for Richard Carle by Leo Carillo

Copyright, 1912, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

A FOOL there was and he lost his hair,
(Even as you and I).
Some called him the man who did not care,
We called him the boob with the dome so bare,
(For now, like heaven, there's no parting there),
Even as you and I.

Oh, the years he'd waste and the tears he'd waste
And the work of his head and hand,
And why his hair would die he didn't know why
(And now we know he never knew why)
And never could understand.

Oh, the time he spent and the coin he spent,
And to rescue his locks was his sole intent;
But the tonics he used weren't worth a cent,
So his hair just went and went and went,
(For a hair must follow its natural bent)
Even as you and I.

So he bought a toupee to cover his pride,
And to save his hair he tried and tried,
But TWO of them lived and THREE of them died,
Even as you and I.

BAGS at the sides will be popular. Bags at the knees, masculinely speaking, will be unpopular.
All black is received with much favor in furs, millinery and costumes. It is unfavorable in Chicago.
The new muffs are creating quite a fur-ore.
Those who have to take care of the furnace should wear shirts made of shaker flannel.
Artists should wear blouses with drawing strings.
Dressmakers when making out their bills should remember that there is only one letter difference between robe and rob.
White coats of chinchilla are being ordered. Extremely stout people should order double-chin chins.
Roman stripes will be all the go. A jail breaker is also a case of roamin' stripes that is all the go.
New hats will be trimmed with skunk fur. That's scents-ible.
Red will be the fashionable color this year. Topers with radish hued prosoci please note.
Among infants strong "yeller" will be all the go.
At the opera this Winter a skin will be worn very close to the body.
After shoveling snow from paths, tramps' stomachs will be lined with stale pie and anthracite sandwiches.

What Are You Good For?

No. 3—By Prof. C. B. Quincy.

Copyright 1912 by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

WHAT are you fitted for?

Are you fitted for anything—except your shoes?

If you are like the majority of unscientific young men you have not the slightest idea of what vocation you should follow. You just go to work, that's all.

A sad state of affairs, when psychological science makes it so easy for any man to know exactly in what line he could achieve success.

If you have been unfortunate enough to miss our preceding chapters on this important topic, know now that an exhaustive system of self-analysis is the first step to success. By asking yourself a number of questions and noting the replies you can easily fill up a table which will show your capabilities at a glance.

Of course, there are certain obvious conditions which bar a man from certain vocations.

Anyone can see at a glance that it would be folly for a cross-eyed youth to waste time in trying to become a mascot.

A deaf man would eventually fail as a telephone operator, whereas he would probably make a reputation as a teacher of music in a girls' boarding school.

It would obviously be foolish for a man with a pronounced (or unpronounced) lisp to go on the stage solely to sing "She Sells Sea Shells by the Seashore."

But, of course, these are just crude physical problems. It is different when a young man of ordinary appearance, and, apparently, of ordinary mental qualities, wishes to select the proper vocation.

Without scientific guidance, the young man may become a burglar when he should have become a stockbroker.

He may become an embezzler when he should have been a librarian.

However, let us take a specific case: A. D., a young man who lives in Bay Ridge, read one of our earlier articles, and promptly analyzed himself as follows:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Appearance (facial) | .95 (1) | Industry | 1 |
| Memory | 1 | Energy | 1 |
| Appearance (general) | .99 (2) | Humor | 0 |

A. D. adds the following notes:

(1) I deduct 5 per cent in consequence of having burned one side of my moustache while lighting a cigar. When this grows again, as it will soon, I shall score myself 100 per cent in facial appearance.

(2) I deduct 1 per cent from general appearance for the reason given above. Soon I shall score myself 100 per cent in both these.

While it is possible that A. D. has been a little generous in scoring himself on appearance—due, no doubt, to having compared himself solely with Bay Ridge young men—we may take his card as fairly indicative of his qualities.

At first sight the reader, judging from Humor, 0, Energy, Industry and Memory, 1 per cent. each, will doubtless conclude that A. D. is obviously best fitted to be private secretary to a Republican politician.

Close scientific study of the card, however, shows us that the small score in the qualities mentioned above would not injure A. D.'s prospects as a floorwalker in the ribbon department, while his appearance score indicates that so soon as his singed mustache has rebudded—he is especially designed for that position.

With this example before them, we will let our readers decide what vocation should be followed by J. R. T., who sends us his score card from Buffalo:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Music | 31 | Golf | 25 |
| Cigarettes | 97 | Breakfast | 3 |
| Opera | 0 | Domesticity | 2 |
| Waterfields | 98 | Industry in some directions | 88 |

At 6 o'clock no hubby had appeared, and the little wife began to get nervous. When the hour of midnight arrived she could bear the suspense no longer, so she aroused her father and sent him off to the telegraph office with six telegrams to as many brother Elks living in town, asking each if her husband was stopping with him overnight.

Morning came, and the frantic wife had received no intelligence of the missing man. As dawn appeared, a farm wagon containing a farmer and the derelict husband drove up to the house, while behind the wagon trailed the broken-down auto. Almost simultaneously came a messenger boy with an answer to one of the telegrams, followed at intervals by five others. All of them read:

"Yes; John is spending the night with me."

A French Protest.

AN American tells of an amusing incident he witnessed in a London hotel. A Frenchman, a guest of the hostelry, had just been presented with his bill. Though he paid it without formal protest, he was most indignant at its amount.

"I wish to see ze proprietaire!" he exclaimed, with a flourish, to the clerk.

In a month the proprietor entered. The Frenchman was all smiles. "Ah!" he exclaimed, "I must embrace you!"

"But why should you wish to embrace me, sir?" asked the astonished hotel keeper. "I do not understand."

"Look at zees bill!"

"Yes; your receipted bill. What of it?"

"What of it? Simply zees, saire: it means zat I shall nevaire, no nevaire, see you again!"

He was Immune.

THE Honorable "Tim" Sullivan, of Tammany fame, tells of a young philosopher he encountered not long ago on the street.

This lad was of diminutive size, and carried under his arm such a load of newspapers that the Honorable Tim was moved to pity.

"Son," asked the Tammanyite, "don't all those papers make you tired?"

"Nope," cheerfully replied the [illegible] of humanity, "I can't read."

THE train robber suddenly appeared as many of the passengers were preparing to retire for the night.

"Come, shell out!" he demanded, as he stood towering above an Eastern clergyman, who had just finished a devout prayer.

The minister looked at him sadly for a moment, then said:

"If I had such energetic fellows as you to pass the plate now and then, I might have something to give you."

A YOUNG Buffalo bookkeeper, on a recent visit to New York, thought to [illegible] his New York friends by putting up at a fashionable hotel. Of course he couldn't afford it, and he had to economize in various ways to make both ends meet.

He happened on one occasion to be taking his evening meal on a bench in the park, when a young man and his sister, friends of the bookkeeper, passed in an automobile.

"Hello, George! Dining out again, you gay dog, eh?"

"HARRY, love," exclaimed Mrs. Knowall to her husband, on his return one evening from the office, "I have b-been d-dreadfully insulted!"

"Insulted," exclaimed "Harry Love," "by whom?"

"B-by your mother," answered the young wife, bursting into tears.

"My mother, Flora? Nonsense! She's miles away on a visit to poor Tom."

Flora dried her tears.

"I'll tell you all about it, Harry, love," she said. "A letter came to you this morning addressed in your mother's handwriting, so, of course, I-I opened it."

"Of course," repeated Harry, dryly.

"It—it was written to you all the way through. Do you understand?"

"I understand. But where does the insult come in?"

"It—it came in the p-p-postscript," cried the wife, bursting into fresh floods of briny. "It said: P-P-P. S.—D-dear Flora, d-don't fail to give this l-letter to Harry. I w-want him to h-have it."

"Pelleas et Melisande" an Unfinished Work of Art; Lacking In Melody—Mr. Urban's Portal Cuts Off View of Audience

MUSIC OF THE WEEK.

This afternoon at 3:15, Symphony Hall, Clara Butt, contralto; Kennerly Rumford, baritone.

This afternoon at 3:15, Opera, Clement and Brill in concert of French music.

Monday night, Opera, Tetrazzini in "La Traviata."

Wednesday night, Opera, "Pelleas et Melisande," with Edvina and Kennerlie.

Saturday afternoon, Opera, "La Boheme," with Bori and Amato.

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Debussy's "Pelleas et Melisande" will be given for the first time this season during the coming week at Louise Edvina will sing Melisande; Riddez Pelleas; Marcoux; Goland; and Lankow, Fisher and Gay will also be heard in the parts they filled last season.

Edvina will make the third Melisande that Boston has seen. New York and Chicago know only Mary Garden; we have had Maeterlinck and we shall have had Edvina.

At a performance of this music drama I am like a scoffer at a spiritualistic seance. Those around me are talking about controls and mystic influences, and the unseen soul, and that sort of thing, and I am wearily wishing they would turn up the lights.

"Beautiful Nonsense."

I have read the libretto of "Pelleas et Melisande" and found it to be beautiful nonsense. I have heard the score numerous times and have assisted at the blending of scores and libretto in the drama, often enough to say that I am familiar with the music.

I am a man who loves Tristan and Isolde" who finds good in "Samson," who admires "Queen of Aida," is charmed by "Carmen" and does not dislike "Louise." I have been listening to good music for a long time.

Debussy, I have met and talked with and found him a delightful fellow. Certain of his songs seem to me to be splendid, and in "Saint Sebastian," his latest dramatic season, I can see much that is good.

Why don't I like "Pelleas et Melisande?" Because it doesn't seem to me to be a finished work of art. It is like an uncompleted or an unfurnished statue.

Strange Orchestration.

The orchestra is always on the verge of some marvelous inspiration and then the inspiration fails. After three hours of this kind of music I become irritable.

Debussy's originality of orchestration, his strange modulations, his veiled and impressible harmonies are interesting but to me they do not compensate for the utter lack of positive melody.

I know people who adore this music and there are not a few, either. There are also admirable musicians who find it intolerable.

The tune which strikes the ear and which is remembered and whistled after one or two hearings is usually something very cheap, a conventional melody slipping through the fingers.

"Tristan und Isolde" is utterly lacking in this sort of melody, yet it is full of the most rare and lovely melodies. "Pelleas" has no tune even the elusive tunes of "Tristan."

And what a waste of good voices in this music drama where the actors moan instead of singing

Of course the argument is that the music of "Pelleas" fits the characters and the scenes, fits them like the paper on the wall, but that does not seem to me to be so important as whether it pleases the auditor for whom both the orchestra and the singers are paid to entertain.

Last week I ventured a few remarks about Mr. Urban's portals at the opera. I received two letters from as many different persons, both of this city, telling me that I was a fool, which he does not wish it published.

He raises a point that is very important and which, I fear, corroborate by my own experiences. The architects of the Boston Opera did a remarkable feat in making every seat in the house a good seat.

Mr. Urban, by screening the stage with his frames, whether of diffgery or of Hindu, has made bad seats out of those at the side of the orchestra and the first balcony. From my seats, for example, at the first performance of "Hansel and Gretel," I could not see the great arch which formed the central figure of the tableau of the sleeping children.

Here is the letter:

Editor, Boston AMERICAN:

What in the name of stage art is the meaning and use of the new gray framework which boxes in the scenes on the Boston Opera House stage, this season? I have inquired, but no one seems able to tell me. The most information I have received is that it is "new art" This may be, but why is it for, and what is the good of it? If it is a frame for the picture, then why was the poorer in the first act of "Louise" fastened to it, and why did Louise lean up against it? And if it is not a frame, then what has it to do with outdoor scenes?

The only use I have been able to discover for it is that it shuts off the view of anyone sitting at the side of the auditorium or in the balcony, and thus cheats that unfortunate of a good part of the stage picture. This may be new for the picture, but it is a bit hard on the man who has paid cash for his ticket and wished to see the whole show.

No, please don't think you are gnawering, you will tell me also, why the great big steps that always has been a pleasure, should now be fenced down to a little narrow path? Is this a "new art" too?

CROWD LIKES TO SEE.

IN THE GREEN ROOM.

There was a time when Lewis Gray, who plays the part of the Russian Princess in "The Red Widow" was an artists model in New York. Her pictures were in demand for the studios of Mucha, who was responsible for the poster work for Sarah Bernhardt; Richard Hall the New York magazine artist; Howard Chandler Christy and Henry Hunter Best, the famous water color artist. Modesta She was Teresa and not for bids- mula "Stop-over Girl" is now playing at Hyde and Behman's Theatre, Brooklyn.

Modesta is a native of Italy and one day her mother told her she was going to take her to the studio for a theatrical career. However, before taking on the art of posing Miss Gray had learned and polished her art in the art of music and had carried off first honors at the Spring exercises at the New York Metropolitan College of Music.

The old-fashioned ballad concert in Tremont Temple on Thursday evening, January 16, will introduce to Boston audiences Miss Bernice Fisher, the Dresden (China prima donna of the Boston Opera.

Miss Fisher, in addition to an operatic aria, will sing three groups of the old songs, selected from the répertoire made famous by the favorite prima donnas of Augiere and the folk songs of England and the popular songs of a generation ago in old country.

Michael J. Dwyer, whose success as a singer of ballads was phenomenal at the Irish concert in December in Tremont Temple, has been especially engaged for that concert, and will sing "Mona," "Dear Slave's Dream" and "Silver Threads Among the Gold," among other famous songs.

Miss Ethel Cecilia Smith, the young English violinist, will make her Boston début at this concert. Miss Smith has played at Windsor Castle, Queen's Hall, London, and with famous musical organizations in New York. She is the daughter of C. A. Wesbam Smith, the famous English conductor, composer and musician, now a resident in New York.

She will play among her more popular numbers the meditation from "Thais" and Händel's Largo with organ accompaniment. Carl Lamson will be organist.

CHORUS SEEKS RECRUITS.

South End Music School Welcomes Candidates.

The women's chorus of the South End Music School, organized in the Fall of 1912, offers an opportunity for any girls interested in singing to join its ranks.

The leader of the chorus is M. Clement Lenom, instructor in collegiate and singing in the New England Conservatory of Music, and a composer of note. He is a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The chorus has already given one concert in connection with the orchestra at the South End House, and will appear every Wednesday evening between 7:30 and 8. The fee is required.

MAKES DEBUT IN NAPLES.

Miss Mary Biffin of Boston Scores Success in Italy.

Musical [illegible] country will make it desirable that a young singer should make a considerable success in Europe before she essays grand opera in America. Miss Mary Biffin of this city has just made her debut at the Mercadante Opera House in Naples, and press dispatches say she has received her friends.

Miss Biffin has been in Italy about two years and for over a year has been a pupil of the famous [illegible] Sebastini of Naples. Her début at Mercadante House was made in Faust and upon that occasion she was repeatedly called for the [illegible] part of her rôle, her artistic work [illegible] and [illegible] Previous to her study abroad Miss Biffin was a pupil of Mrs. Henrietta Hascal, well known Boston singing teacher.

Miss Biffin has been heard as Violetta in [illegible] performance. Miss [illegible] Italian critics predict for her a great future.

MUSIC NOTES

La Perra's "Habanera," which is known to American opera goers through performances in the Boston Opera House, has been given in Le Scala, and, strange as it may seem, it achieved a very respectable success despite the fact that it lacks all the essentials of a musical work that were hitherto considered as indispensable if one would win the Italian public.

* * *

Max Fiedler, lately conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, made his Munich debut at the premiere of "Jewels of the Madonna." Opinions vary, but it is generally admitted that he is a serious musician and that he is likely to become a permanent feature of Munich's musical life.

* * *

Mme. Georgette Leblanc-Maeterlinck, after a practical retirement of nearly two years, is to essay the principal rôle in her husband a drama, "Mary Magdalen," which is to be given for the first time in France at the Casino Municipal of Nice. Mme. Leblanc-Maeterlinck spent a great deal of her time since her return from America last year in searching for historic documents that would be of assistance in the production of the play.

* * *

The second concert of the Longy Club will be given on Thursday evening, January 23, in Jordan Hall.

* * *

Elena Gerhardt, the distinguished German singer who has just been soloist at the Symphony concerts, will give a concert in Symphony Hall on Sunday afternoon, January 19. Full details regarding the program and the like will be announced later.

* * *

The concert in Symphony Hall this afternoon will be given by Madame Clara Butt, the great English contralto, and Kennerley Rumford, the English baritone. This will be Mr. Rumford's first appearances in America and Madame Butt's first appearance in a dozen years. Each will sing two groups of songs and they will end the concert with a duet, Goring Thomas' "Night Hymn at Sea".

* * *

The only recital which Eugene Ysaye, the eminent violinist, is to give in Boston this season, will take place in Symphony Hall next Sunday afternoon, January 12, at 3 o'clock. Mr. Ysaye's admirers have it that this greatest of violinists has not been playing more beautifully than during his present visit in America. No less person than Felix Kreisler has been so in this country a few weeks ago said that Ysaye is "the greatest of us all." The first part of the program will be devoted to the older masters of violin music while the last group will be modern—two of the offerings being his own composition. He will be assisted by Camille Decreus, accompanist, and John P. Marshall, organist.

* * *

There will be no Symphony concerts on Friday and Saturday as the orchestra is away on its third Southern trip. Emil Gerhardt will be the soloist in Washington, Baltimore, Brooklyn; Madame Matzenauer in Philadelphia and at the Thursday evening concert in New York of this week Saturday afternoon in New York Geraldine Farrar will be the soloist. Dr. Muck has placed Reger's "Concerto in Ancient Style" on five of the six programs. The symphonies will be Beethoven's "Eroica" Schubert's "Unfinished" and Brahms' in D-major.

* * *

The third concert of the Kneisel Quartet will be given in Steinert Hall on Tuesday evening, January 7. The program will comprise a quartet by Brahms, a quintet by Loeffler and a quintet by Schumann. The quartet will have the assistance of Miss Frieda Siemans, pianist, and Mr. Samuel Gardiner, violinist.

* * *

Miss Germaine Schnitzer, the brilliant and accomplished Belgian pianist, will give a recital in Jordan Hall on Saturday afternoon, January 11, at 3 o'clock. Those who have heard her recently say that she has grown marvelously in her art since she was last heard in this city.

* * *

Miss Kitty Cheatham, who has been called "the voice of the heart of childhood," will give one of her unique and interesting recitals in Jordan Hall on Saturday afternoon, January 18. While Miss Cheatham has a range of children's songs and a teller of children's stories, her art covers more than this. She is the only entertainer of authorities upon the literature of the song and story of childhood, but she is a recognized [illegible] ing person today [illegible] is properly equipped to preserve the negro folk-lore of America.

Holmes' Lectures.

Burton Holmes will begin his annual series of Travelogues with "The West Indies" as his subject at Tremont Temple this week. Mr. Holmes has a new series with a "cruise"—an excellent method of getting his patrons into the travel-habit, even though it be a "first-hand journey," made by proxy. On this proposed cruise to and through "Our Own Mediterranean" an interesting itinerary is followed. After a delightful voyage from New York, a landing is made at Havana, [illegible] is seen at her best.

Mr. Holmes was aboard the Maine only seven days before she was towed to her last resting place, and he will present a series of motion pictures of the principal events connected with this imposing ceremony. Mr. Holmes will give this "Cruise to the West Indies" at Tremont Temple next Friday evening and Saturday afternoon.

PLAYS ON BILLS AT BOSTON'S THEATRES

Shubert Theatre.

Brim full of musical joy and bubbling over with scintillating wit and subtle humor, "The Merry Counties" comes to the Shubert tomorrow evening. Without doubt, "The Merry Counties" is the most pronounced success of any of the Shubert's long list of successes this season. Great praise was given to the charming operetta by Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt when they transported the entire Lenox Counties company to Newport for the purpose of presenting the operetta in an especially constructed theatre there for the edification of many society at their fancy dress ball and banquet.

The text of the operetta has to do with the adventures of a beautiful Hungarian Countess, who, disguises herself and attends a fancy dress ball, given exclusively for ballet girls by a certain great prince.

Colonial Theatre.

"Ziegfeld Follies." Series of 1912, will begin a four weeks' engagement at the Colonial Theatre tomorrow evening. The book and lyrics of the newest "Follies" have been supplied by Harry B. Smith, while the music is from the pen of Raymond Hubbell. The work, which is in two acts and thirteen scenes, has been staged by Julian Mitchell. As is usual in Ziegfeld entertainment, the 1912 edition of the "Follies" is replete with features, the most striking of which is said to be the "Palace of Beauty," in which all of the notable beauties of the world are impersonated. The big company is made up of such favorites as Harry Watson, Jr., Bert Williams, Leon Errol, Elizabeth Brice and Bernard Granville.

* * *

Hollis Street Theatre.

John Drew will come to the Hollis Street Theatre tomorrow evening in his new comedy, "The Perplexed Husband." This is the newest play by the author of "The Wake of Jerichu," a quickly moving comedy, packed full of humorous characters, funny scenes and even funnier lines. In a word, "The Perplexed Husband" tells how the idea of votes for women can be laughed out of the best of families.

Mr. Drew has never had a part that suited him better than Thomas Pelling, the tea merchant, who after a brief absence from home returns to find his wife and about votes for women and his home overrun by suffragists. The play and the performance were unanimously declared in New York "John Drew's best in years."

Majestic Theatre.

"Hanky Panky" returns to this city tomorrow at the Majestic Theatre. "Hanky Panky" means nothing—Lew Fields has merely once again reached down in Uncle Sam's bag of slang and drawn one. There is no heavy story, no problem plot, no short, all that passes in the succession of incidents has the effect of the coherence of a happy dream, it is like watching the humorous characters from screenland.

The same cast that will be remembered from last season, including Miss Rogers, Bobby Nord, Harry Cooper, Hugh Cameron, Cay Smith, Christine Nielsen, Myrtle Rose, Ida May, Virginia Fox, Dana Williams, Montgomery and Florence Moore, not forgetting that same lovable woman and sweet singer, Angelus Pasquali, "Dixie Love," "On the Mississippi" and "Million Dollar Ball" will be interpreted the piece.

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

The event of the week in Boston vaudeville will be the appearance of Ethel Barrymore at B. F. Keith's Theatre this week, in many respects the most notable vaudeville engagement ever made for vaudeville, but her vaudeville tour Miss Barrymore is presented by the Messrs. Shubert in "The Little Minister" and "Peter Pan." Miss Barrymore's engagement will be positively limited to one week only. She will be surrounded by one of the strongest and best vaudeville bills ever put together, including Ed. F. Reynard, the ventriloquist, with a production entitled "Dolphin's Troupe of European wire walkers, Armstrong and Ford, the Englishman and the cop, and Conroy and Grady, two newcomers from the West.

Park Theatre.

The telephone girl has at last received the square deal. She has deserved it for years, but has had to bear the brunt of the jokes of the comic papers. One of the principal units of modern business and social life, but it has remained for the theatre to do her justice. In "The Girl at the Telephone" Bessie Clayton, the dainty dancing star, is presenting at the Park Theatre, a delightful specialty, and it is around her and her loyalty and her stout-hearted fight against a powerful band of politicians, that the play is written.

Gaiety Theatre.

Replete with new features, Cliff Gordon and Bobby North's new show, "The Girls of the Gay White Way," will appear at the Gaiety Theatre this week. Everything new is promised by the management, which has a strong hold both with the public and invariably given more than promised. The piece is said to be clever in construction and to contain several musical numbers introduced during its action. The personnel of the company is big. In the cast are Bob Rowland, Sam Hearn, Harry Le Ward, Ed Jerome, Helen N. Ely, Estelle Sandy, Tom Healy, F. Winfield and Hattie Raymond.

Castle Square Theatre.

"The Gingerbread Man" will start on its third and last week at the Castle Square Theatre tomorrow evening. It will undoubtedly be given its farewell performances before a series of crowded houses. From beginning to end this whole production is made up of spectacular variety, and it pleases by reason of its great diversity. Virginia Tanner has made a distinctive success with the Castle Square audiences, and she and Jack Conway are proving startling in their novelty and originality.

St. James Theatre.

The third week of "The Isle of Spice" opens tomorrow at the St. James Theatre, where the gay musical show is drawing big audiences every evening. The company would have had no better vehicle with which to work, for the charming entertainment is filled with clever lines, laughing situations and tunes that set the feet tingling.

Bowdoin Square Theatre.

Josephine Sabel and her Pickaninnies and Clarence Stanley, the boy who broke the walking record from Boston to Frisco, will be among the features at the Bowdoin this week.

Ethel Barrymore Here in Vaudeville

Noted Actress Coming to Boston This Week to Appear in Barrie's "The Ten-Pound Look."

The acquisition of Ethel Barrymore by vaudeville is a distinct triumph for this form of entertainment. Miss Barrymore, who comes to B. F. Keith's Theatre this week for an engagement of one week only, vies with Mande Adams as the foremost American actress. By special arrangement with Charles Frohman, Mr. Keith has arranged to present Miss Barrymore for a limited engagement of twelve weeks on the K. & E. circuit.

Miss Barrymore has elected to appear in J. M. Barrie's one-act playlet, "The Ten Pound Look." This brings to the vaudeville field the work of one of the most important authors in the world.

Plays of the Week

Tremont Theatre.

Raymond Hitchcock, who is appearing in "The Red Widow" at the Tremont, continues to please a large audience nightly. Famous as a laugh creator he has never been provided with a play that offers so many opportunities for his particular brand of humor. The play will only remain for one more week.

Plymouth Theatre.

The engagement of Georges Arliss in "Disraeli" at the Plymouth Theatre has been extended two weeks and possibly three, so that instead of closing the Boston run on January 25, as announced, this attraction will continue at the Plymouth until January 25. Many weeks ago "Disraeli" was booked to open in Brooklyn, N. Y., January 13, and though the Liebler company made every effort to cancel the engagement there they were unable to do so until last week.

Boston Theatre.

The long-heralded approach to Boston of the dramatic spectacle, "The Garden of Allah," is at last an accomplished fact. On Monday night, January 13, for a limited engagement, this play, with its interesting people, will hold forth at the Boston Theatre. The company and its effects, including the Arabian contingent, and the animals, comprising camels, goats, horses, white doves, etc., will leave Philadelphia on Sunday morning, January 12, by special train, consuming seven large baggage cars, two Pullmans and two coaches. Prior to the arrival of the company a number of stage mechanics of the Liebler forces will be in the city and will accomplish wonders in preparing the Boston Theatre for this spectacle.

Globe Theatre.

The Globe program of the week beginning tomorrow morning will have several novelties. The Bostonnly Troupe of acrobats, Adalins Lowe and company, a special [illegible] in one [illegible], Zeno and Zeno, Molly Wood, the Trampoline, Venetia Clark Trio and Kalgma, one of the most baffling mysteries in vaudeville, are on the list. Amateurs will be added to the program on Tuesday night.

National Theatre.

There have been many baseball players and team managers who have gone into vaudeville for the winter season to pick up a little loose change for pin money, but Charlie Jennings, the picturesque manager of the Detroit American, has taken to the stage like a duck takes to water. He displayed shrewdness by getting one of the best comedy acts on the stage, Jack Smith, to share the honors of the bill. The offering is entitled "Baseball Revels" and is a rare Boston newspaper men. It is entitled "The New Mascot" and deals with the efforts of the baseball writers to boss a mascot for the team for next year's spring training trip. Jack Smith and Wynn Jenkins has played he has been a tremendous hit. Special nights have been arranged. Monday night the scientific men, Tuesday, Friday and Cambridge night, Wednesday, Knights of Columbus; Thursday, Red Sox night.

New Palace Theatre.

The feature picture at the New Palace Theatre this week will be Homer's "Odyssey," one of the most remarkable as well as spectacular films ever manufactured. It was only a short time ago that this picture was being exhibited in Boston at 10 cents which was at that time as $1. In securing its release for the New Palace Theatre the management has brought something of more than general interest to that house. The cost of making the picture is said to have exceeded $200,000, and it has been hailed as one of the real wonders of motion photography.

Loew's South End.

For the first three days of this week there will be an unusually lively motion picture feature at Loew's South End Theatre. It will be "The Great Ocean Disaster, or the Fire at Sea." No motion picture of recent production has shown more gruesome thrills than those supplied in the scene showing the marine conflagration, with the consequent panic and the plunging of the passengers into the sea. The picture should prove a big hit. Under new arrangements the performances at the South End now run from 2 p. m. to 11 p. m. with two concerts Sunday evening. Tuesday evening will continue as "Surprise Night."

Scenic Temple.

There will be no change of policy at the Scenic Temple. The attractions for the coming week will include several high class vaudeville numbers and absolutely new motion pictures.

Hub Theatre.

Peter McNally has been engaged as leading attraction, for an exclusive program of pictures at the Hub Theatre. The usual number of vaudeville acts and short features.

Howard Athenaeum.

Gertrude Hayes, the sprightly comedienne, and "The Follies of to Day" burlesquers will be featured at the Howard for the coming week, with Ben Jonson's burlesque is "The Big Election."

Waldron's Casino.

"Charlie" Waldron offers as the attraction this week at the Casino "The Merry Rounders." The company numbers over fifty people, and this includes a big chorus of handsome girls.

Orpheum Theatre.

The new program at the Orpheum Theatre this week will include many vaudeville novelties that are new in Boston, as well as a long list of exclusive motion pictures.

Grand Opera House.

Sam Rice and his "Daffydil Girls" will delight the patrons of the Grand Opera House this week. There will be a wrestling match Thursday.

'GARDEN OF ALLAH' A COSTLY PRODUCTION

Scenic Marvel Must Play to at Least $20,000 Weekly to Show Profit.

When confronted with a spectacle of the proportions of "The Garden of Allah," the average theatregoer finds his curiosity piqued on two points—how are the various illusions and effects attained, and how much does it all cost.

An analysis of the mechanism of the succession of effects that make "The Garden of Allah" the scenic marvel that it is, could hardly be presented within reasonable limits of time and space in a manner clear to one unversed in mechanics. Money, however, talks to the most uninformed on technical matters.

The cost of maintaining a production of the size of "The Garden of Allah" is so staggering as to seem incredible until its contributory items are considered. In order to break even with current expenses, "The Garden of Allah" must play to as much money every two performances as would support an ordinary attraction, without loss, for a week.

It requires the full amount of the almost unprecedented receipts of twenty thousand dollars weekly before it can show a profit

Ordinarily a big city attraction shares the gross receipts on nearly an even basis with the theatre at which it is presented, and if a show receipts more than $12,000 a week, or six thousand dollars, the manager finds that, after paying salaries, royalties, advertising, printing and billing expenses, and all the little odds and ends for which his carpenter, electrician, stage manager and business manager presents vouchers, there is still something left for his private pocket. The sad part of it all is that more attractions fail below the five or six thousand dollar mark than exceed it.

Musical Affairs Cost More.

When the attraction happens to be a musical affair, with a large chorus, and intricate light effects, it becomes necessary to add a thousand dollars or so to the figure at which the offering proves profitable to its sponsors. But no matter what the attraction, it must be taken as a matter of fact that any theatrical enterprise that is attracting an average of over a thousand dollars into the box office at the time the curtain goes up on its first act is making money.

But it is a different matter with "The Garden of Allah."

Court Kills "Enoch Arden."

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 4.—Two men, husbands of the same wife, met in court today. They heard the Judge dismiss a charge of bigamy against the wife. Frederick Johnson Edgar Parlett to get a divorce from Parlett and then become a real Mrs. Johnson. Parlett heard Johnson, formed from a life as a cowboy, told that he was "dead-to-rights dead. "The right guy at it," he replied Mr. and Mrs. Parlett were married in 1900 and lived together three years.

DOROTHY DONNELLY AND LAWSON BUTT IN "THE GARDEN OF ALLAH" AT THE BOSTON HUB

Plays That Make an Appeal to Children Always Sure of Heavy Patronage in Boston, as Is Shown by Record of "The Gingerbread Man." How Novelty in Drama Is Being Turned to Account in This City

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

THE establishment of a children's theatre in New York would indicate that, although it is a partially endowed institution, the managers are beginning to take note of the influence of children upon the theatre and its wares

It is not in any sense a coincidence that plays like "Peter Pan," "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and "The Blue Bird" were tremendous successes It was more a direct result of their strong appeal to the children. No decent appeal to the children by the stage has ever failed The spectacular "Little Nemo" of a few years ago could not have prospered without its child audiences, and the less brilliant, but equally popular, "Mutt and Jeff" has been compelled to play special matinees for children in every city where it has appeared

John Craig has safely drawn upon children for many weeks of capacity business, and is at this time enjoying the biggest business in the history of the Castle Square Theatre with "The Gingerbread Man," the matinees of which are crowded with little folk

Mr. Craig once told me that there was nothing in his work that he enjoyed more than playing to audiences made up largely of children. "They are easy audiences," he said, "for they take you at your face value and apparently appreciate everything you do for their entertainment

"Nothing surprised me more last season than the way 'Little Lord Fauntleroy' jumped into popularity. Here was a play so old that we thought it might do an average business for one week. Instead of that we were forced to extend the engagement, and only because the children could not be accommodated in a single week

"Let me produce a play like 'The Gingerbread Man,' for example, and instantly our matinees will be crowded with children—and nice children, too You should see our automobile patronage at these times." I had noticed it and wondered

* * * * * *

WHEN Mr. Craig gets through with "The Gingerbread Man" he will return to his grown-up followers and give them something that will be new to Boston. He has a habit of doing that, for "The Gingerbread Man," while several seasons along in age, had never been played here until Mr. Craig undertook its production. His next new play will be "The New Sin," which has recently been the subject of theatrical discussion in New York and London. "The New Sin" is called a novelty, and as none but men will appear in the cast the reference doubtless has some basis of truth

* * * * * *

GENUINE novelty in the drama is one of its greatest and safest assets Many so-called novelties have, upon close inspection, proved to be merely excuses for advertising. In "The Woman," William C. de Mille has turned the novelty of a practical switchboard to good account and has given playgoers something to talk about.

With every new Belasco production we are reminded that, after all, none of our modern producers can quite approach this genius of stagecraft when he settles down to serious work

Doubtless Mr. Belasco has discovered that faulty construction may be easily masked by extraordinary stage details and a proper amount of carefully worked-out atmosphere. At any rate, you are always prepared for unusual things in stage manners and equipment in Belasco plays, and you use your eyes as much on his mechanical details as you do upon the story he offers. There is nothing conventional about "The Woman" except its happy ending. The play should remain at the Park for many weeks

* * * * * *

ITS producers have been advertising "The Merry Countess" as the operetta that Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt paid $100 a minute to see. On that basis the coming engagement of the piece at the Shubert should prove highly interesting to its owners, as its price to consumers here will be at the regular house scale and almost anybody would pay $3 to see such a remarkable performance

The "Merry Countess" received its high valuation from the fact that Mr. Vanderbilt engaged the company and transported it to Newport for the entertainment of his guests last Spring

As far back as February 17, 1905, "The Merry Countess" was produced at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York under the title of "Die Fledermaus," and its cast then included Caruso, Sembrich, Alten, Walker, Dippel, Reiss and Goritz

There were still earlier productions of the piece in this country, however. Marie Geistinger, a German prima donna of note, was the first to sing the role of Rosalinda in this country. That was in 1884, in the old Thalia Theatre in New York. The following year, on March 16, 1885, the piece was revived by Colonel John McCaull at the Casino Theatre, with Mathilde Cottrelly, Rosalba Beecher, Mark Smith, Jefferson de Angelis and DeWolf Hopper in the cast. The greatest charm of "The Merry Countess" is, of course, its delightful music by Johann Strauss

* * * * * *

AMONG the new offerings of the week will be the Ziegfeld "Follies," a style of entertainment that is sufficiently close to the ground to meet every requirement of a popular taste. You would hardly call any Ziegfeld show uplifting, but the absence of that quality has never impaired its box office receipts.

Mr. Ziegfeld entered upon the business of building these loose-jointed musical plays under the title of "Follies" in 1907 and the success was instantaneous. Since then he has produced them in annual form

Although many imitations of the "Follies" have been attempted by other producers, Mr. Ziegfeld has always been able to keep the pace so fast that his public has never deserted him.

* * * * * *

THAT a dramatic stock company may play with musical comedy has been so amply demonstrated that the first venture of Mr. Gulesian's St. James players was accepted from the start as [illegible] attention.

"The Isle of Spice" begins its second week tomorrow and if signs fail it will repeat its happy experiences of the first week. Just why the patrons of a stock company enjoy their favorite players in roles that are unsuited to them is hard to explain, for it must be conceded that musical shows and the straight drama do not encourage the same kind of efforts. The endeavors of Mr. Gulesian's players, however, have been sufficiently satisfactory to force an extension of time for "The Isle of Spice."

* * *

While the Boston Theatre is dark again—the second time this season the interval between plays will be very brief The next attraction will be the most pretentious of any of the offerings at the local theatres this season, "The Garden of Allah." Plans are being laid for a long engagement of that play, which enjoyed a spectacular run at the Century Theatre in New York last season, and which will move upon Boston from its engagement in Philadelphia.

No play in recent years has been produced with such lavish scenic effects as this dramatization of Robert Hichens' novel, and its appeal extends to all classes of theatregoers

Premier Theatre.

A spirited detective story is announced as the feature picture for the first three days of the week at the Premier Theatre. It is called "The Dead Man's Child," and is one of those mysterious pieces of fiction that keeps the audience on its toes every minute. It is announced that the pictures shown at the Premier are not seen in any other down-town theatre and that in many cases they are shown in no other house in the city.

COMING EVENTS

Mrs. Fiske will be the next attraction at the Hollis Street Theatre, and after this fortnight's engagement of John Drew she will be seen in "The High Road," which has proved most successful for a long engagement in New York this past Fall

* * *

The attraction at the Tremont Theatre Monday, January 13, will be the Eng[illegible] by Arnold Bennett and Edward Knoblauch, now running in London and New York

* * *

"Bunty Pulls the Strings" comes to the Majestic Theatre soon. In the story of the level-headed Scotch girl, Graham Moffat, the author, has written what is mostly a simple story, without melodrama or hysterics

* * *

Among the attractions booked for early appearance at B. F. Keith's Theatre are the Four Clifftons, Jed and Ethel Dooley, Tim McMahon and Edythe Chappelle and Linden Beckwith

* * *

BASKCOMB'S CAREER.

Comedian Has Had Varied Experiences on Stage.

A W Baskcomb, comedian, who plays the role of the New Warden in "The Merry Countess," under the management of the Messrs Shubert, has had a career of really exceptional interest.

Mr. Baskcomb was born in London, but does not come from a theatrical family. His father, W. A. Baskcomb, was chief clerk to King Edward VII. for twenty-one years of the period during which that monarch was Prince of Wales. His mother taught the present King of England and the other royal children to play the piano.

Mr Baskcomb made his first appearance on the stage when eighteen years of age with Sarah Thorne at the Chatham and Margate in London The characters he was called upon to play varied from those of Shakespeare to modern comedy roles of all types, conditions and ages. He made his debut in musical comedy in "The Gay Gordons," having been induced to enter this field of work by the persuasion of Seymour Hicks. After "The Gay Gordons" he played in "Dear Little Denmark" at the Prince of Wales Theatre.

His most recent dramatic engagement was as the chauffeur in Robert Lorraine's "Man and Superman" at the Criterion. Two years ago Mr. Baskcomb created the role of the New Warden in the London production of "The Merry Countess," which was then called "Nightbirds," and was engaged for the part in this country by Lee Shubert.

BEAUTY PRIZE WINNER CAN TWIST FEATURES

Florence Moore Excels at "Making Faces" That Win Plaudits from Spectators.

Florence Moore of "Hanky Panky" is of the [illegible] class of stage beings who possess more than average beauty and a strong sense of comedy

Miss Moore excels in "making faces" Ever since Florence Moore became the recipient of the adulation of New York's vaudeville audience she has gone along one means way developing new expressions in all possible facial angles, in direct contradiction to "beauty hints," and without any reference to poetry

A stage beauty contest, held at the Hippodrome, London, three years ago, by popular vote awarded Miss Moore one of the prizes. A recent contest, voted by people of the stage as to the most grotesque comedienne in America, likewise brought Miss Moore the first prize.

"I spent a year on the stage in an absurd effort to be funny and for a year was a continuous failure, because I maintained a certain standard of decent looks," asserts Miss Moore

"It was only in a spirit of disgust that I let myself go at a matinee and violated every rule of stage etiquette and one of the schools of acting and made faces as they have seldom been made from any stage My faces were made at an audience that discouraged me, and to my horror they laughed at me; the laughter coming over the footlights deepened my chagrin to an even greater degree and I answered them by more faces. Their laughter increased and to my astonishment I turned and found my partner standing quite still and apparently dumbfounded

I had to continue after that. Mr Montgomery declared that he would not work with me unless I made faces; the stage manager refused its work unless I obliterated every possible claim to beauty I had on the stage."

PLACES IN THE BOOK OF EXODUS MENTIONED IN THE NEW PAPYRUS.

NEW LIGHT ON THE EXODUS

ANCIENT EGYPTIAN PAPYRUS FOUND, MENTIONING THE PLACE WHERE THE ISRAELITES CROSSED THE RED SEA, AND OTHER SCENES IN THEIR FORTY YEARS' WANDERING.

AN ancient Egyptian papyrus has been discovered which throws new light on the Exodus, the Bible story of the forty years' migration of the Israelites from Egypt to the Promised Land.

The papyrus is a gazetteer of the principal places in the Eastern Delta of the Nile from which the migration began. It has been translated by Professor Spiegelberg, of Cairo, and the principal results of his translation are published in the last report of the Palestine Exploration Fund.

The papyrus mentions the places of this region in nearly the same order as they are given in the book of Exodus. The Israelites started from the land of Goshen, which is proved to have been a district of the Eastern Delta called by the Egyptians "Gesem." Their march began at the town of Rameses, in Goshen, on the fifteenth day of the first month.

Their first halt was at Succoth, according to Exodus. The papyrus combines this place with Pithom, a town also mentioned in Exodus. The Egyptian expression is "Pe-Atum-Zuktu," which may easily be identified as "Pithom-Succoth."

The Israelites then proceeded southeast to Pi-hahiroth and encamped between Migdol and the Red Sea, over against Baal-Zephon. It was at this spot that the armies of Pharaoh overtook the Israelites.

What followed is described in the fourteenth chapter of Genesis:

"And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea, and the Lord caused the sea to go back by a strong east wind all that night, and made the sea dry land, and the waters were divided.

"And the Children of Israel went in the midst of the sea upon the dry ground: and the waters were a wall unto them on their right hand and on their left.

"And the Egyptians pursued and went in after them to the midst of the sea, even all Pharaoh's horses, his chariots and his horsemen.

"And the Lord said unto Moses, Stretch out thine hand over the sea, that the waters may come again upon the Egyptians, upon their chariots and upon their horsemen.

'And Moses stretched forth his hand over the sea, and the sea returned to his strength when the morning appeared, and the Egyptians fled against it; and the Lord overthrew the Egyptians in the midst of the sea.

"And the waters returned and covered the chariots, and the horsemen, and all the host of Pharaoh that came into the sea after them; there remained not so much as one of them."

One phrase in the papyrus is "Lake of Kharta," which has been identified with the Pi-hahiroth of Genesis. When you spell the last two syllables, "Khiroth," as the Hebrews pronounced it, you see the resemblance to Kharta.

The papyrus mentions the "Miktal of Baal-Zephon," while the Bible speaks of "Migdol over against Baal-Zephon." A migdol was an Egyptian tower or fort, and possibly this one stood outside the town of Baal-Zephon.

The papyrus strongly confirms the geography of the Book of Exodus, and shows that some of the places bear similar names to the present day.

After crossing the Red Sea the Israelites passed out of Egyptian territory. They turned south to avoid the Philistines and journeyed on to the Wilderness of Sinai, where Moses received the Ten Commandments and the law from the Lord on Mount Sinai. Here they tarried a year.

Then they turned north and after battles with the Amalekites and many trials they slowly struggled on, keeping east of southern Canaan and the Dead Sea. After forty years they reached Mount Nebo, east of the Jordan, whence Moses could see Jericho and the Promised Land

Hang Your Pictures on the Floor.

Montfort Coolidge, the New York Artist, Captivates the Paris Art World by a Very Original Conception of Art

"There is the masterpiece on the floor. No craning of necks to see it, no back-breaking twist. One can walk on its glass even."

A Cubist's Sketch of an Incident in the Turkish War. It Has Been Printed Seriously by a Serious French Magazine.

"After the Theatre"—by Carra. A Futurist's Impression of "Swathed Women's Forms, Huge Black Cabs Like Beetles and Abrupt Floods of Lights."

THAT there is no standard in "art" is, of course, well known. You may be an "impressionist," or admire the technique which paints carefully every button on a coat and the texture of the fabric of a lady's dress. Art is anything that anybody likes—and it comes about that anybody with a new idea may start a new "school" of art at any moment and find an appreciative following.

Mr. Frank Harris, the distinguished English critic and Shakespearean [illegible] of London to-day, [illegible] ten times as well as [illegible].

One of the artists Mr. Harris [illegible] this manner is S. H. Sime, [illegible] fertility of imagination [illegible] and paintings are [illegible] ever had more [illegible] than Mr. Sime.

Pierre Loti bewails the fact that we "value bread more than art," and the new Futurists wildly assert that all art from earliest times is [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Montfort Coolidge, the New York painter, has found [illegible] for his new dictum that pictures should, practically be hung [illegible]

Mr. Coolidge has designed one room for an Italian nobleman, Count Gaudi, at Rimini, Italy, according to his ideas. The decoration is so planned that while sitting in this room you have the sensation of flying in an aeroplane and looking at the earth beneath your feet.

The ceiling of the room is colored to resemble the sky, while in the middle of the floor is seen a large panel of glass. Some distance below the glass and lighted electrically from the sides is a painting representing the Italian Alps as they would appear if seen from an immense height. This wonderful room will be used for musical entertainments. The [illegible] explains that the painting being below the level of the eye it can be enjoyed in comfort while listening to the music, but a decorated ceiling is far too high to be properly appreciated in these circumstances.

The music room is only a mo[illegible] application of the new principle of hanging your pictures on the floor. In this case it is used to produce the illusion of things that would naturally be seen beneath the feet, but it is asserted that every picture, no matter what it represents, would be seen better if hung on the floor.

It is well known that looking at pictures on the wall, especially if they be hung rather high, gives one a headache. This is chiefly due to the action of holding the head in an unnatural position with the neck sharply bent backwards. Few objects in nature have to be viewed at the peculiar angle required in looking at a picture high up on the wall of a room.

On the other hand when you look at a picture on the floor the attitude [illegible] Moreover the action of bending down the head sends the blood toward the brain, and thus produces a more active intelligence and a greater power of concentration and appreciation.

When [illegible] the practise of hanging pictures on the floor Mr. Coolidge and his followers assert we shall have a richer, a [illegible]ler and a more influential art. People will spend hours in contemplation of a recent work of art upon the floor, when they would not spend five minutes in looking at the same picture on the wall.

These enthusiasts say that we shall have great galleries with pictures on the floor, while the walls and ceilings will be covered with restful tones and designs. The vastly increased power of appreciating art brought about by this innovation will, they think, lead to a development of art such as the world has never known before.

Artists have before now glimpsed the possibilities of making the floor attractive but the idea was never developed by a school.

The opposite practise of putting pictures on the ceiling has been tried and, according to the Coolidge school proved to be a mistake. Raphael painted his famous frescoes on the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel.

Not one person in a hundred thousand can see these paintings properly. If it were not for photography the world would be virtually ignorant of these great works.

The ancient Romans, who had correct ideas about most things, discovered the advantage of putting pictures on the floor. The mosaic pavements, which they placed in their [illegible] were floor pictures in the fullest sense of the expression. Every subject in Greek and Roman mythology, every great episode in the history of Rome was depicted in mosaics upon some floor.

The Roman child learnt the wonderful achievements of his race as he ran about the floor of his father's villa. These mosaics have been largely destroyed during the centuries, but we possess enough of them to know how well they were executed.

Perhaps if the Roman Empire had not been swallowed up in the barbarism of the dark ages the art of arranging and painting pictures on the floor would, long before now, have been tremendously developed.

There has been a remarkable effort in our time to make art more original, more expressive of the mind of the artist and less a mere effort to reproduce nature. Fifty or sixty years ago the impressionists came up and asserted that the way to paint was to represent a thing as it appeared to the eye of the artist at a certain moment, and not to hold the mirror up to nature.

The Impressionists were ridiculed at one time, as much as any of the more recent schools of art have been, but now they are admitted to have produced the greatest painters of the nineteenth century.

Just now we have the Post-Impressionists, the Cubists, the Futurists and other schools.

The Futurists take their name because they assert that their way is the way all painting will be done in the future. Otherwise their principal idea, so far as it can be ascertained, is that the artist should paint the impression that a subject creates in his mind, rather than the impression that it throws on the retina of his eye. Here is where they are in advance of the mere impressionists.

If the impression in the artist's mind is a rather chaotic one, then so is the picture and you may have no cause for complaint. It is impossible to obtain a commonplace every-day definition of Futurism, because the artist of this school speaks in futurist language, which is constructed on the same principle as his pictures.

A great Futurist exposition is going to be held in New York. The movement originated in Paris, but it has many American followers.

The Futurist does not aspire or pretend to paint anything that stands still. His ambition is to make the picture wiggle-waggle, figuratively speaking. He wants to give an impression of movement—of constant transformation.

Conventional art has established that when a woman sits for her picture she sits still, and no academic painter has yet endowed a female portrait with several heads, a multiplicity of arms and countless legs. But one of the chef d'oeuvres of Futurist art, shows a woman with three heads, a large collection of arms and numberless legs. If she was a zigzag puzzle she would not be more sorely in need of being put together, if only the cut up parts matched, which they don't.

The Futurist Carra has tried to convey in a painting entitled "Cahots de fiacre" (cab jolts), how many jolts he received while riding in a Paris cab. They look as an ensemble like the realms of a scavenger with an ugly job on hand, and a hideous ghoul or two thrown in.

Near by hangs a rival picture, a horse, and he is endowed with twenty legs. The animal might have been a cog wheel if the extra legs lying around his body had been properly adjusted, each hoof answering to a cog. But the trouble with trying to put anything futurist into order lies in the fact that these artists are enemies of all established laws of order; so in Russolo's picture "La Revolte" there are some hundred of clawing fingers groping up and down what either meant to be window panes or ceiling or wall paper or up-to-date linoleum, for no one can tell just what Russollo wants the guesser to guess those bony [illegible] are clutching after.

For all one knows the mixing up of the window panes, wall paper, ceiling and linoleum effect may be symbolic of the plutocrat who can have anything he wants and all he wants, one right after the other.

The Odd Home Life of Our Earliest 5-Toed Ancestors

RECENTLY a perfect fossil of an Eryops or Mud Puppy, the dominant animal of the Coal age, was found in Texas. The body and bones of the creature itself had disappeared, but in the red rock was a perfect print of it. The [illegible] soil of millions of years ago had made a complete negative of the carcass and in the ages during which it slowly turned to rock, retained the print.

By Prof. W. D. Matthew of the New York Museum of Natural History.

THERE were no broad-leaved trees nor flowering plants, birds nor mammals, nor any of the higher kinds of insects. The swamp vegetation was chiefly ferns and fern-like plants and giant relatives of the modern equisetums and club mosses, while coniferous trees grew in the uplands. The insects were all of the lower orders, dragon flies, cockroaches, millipedes and others; no bees, no ants no butterflies nor beetles.

The land vertebrates were, at this ancient period in the early stages of their adaptation to terrestrial life. Like the modern efts and salamanders, they were amphibious animals, half reptile, half fish, in appearance and habits.

In the carboniferous age the amphibians were the dominant type, and the reptiles were just beginning to evolve from them, becoming adapted to a more strictly terrestrial life. These earliest reptiles are very close to the primitive amphibians, and the wide gap that now separates these two classes of vertebrates was then so slight that it is difficult to draw any separating line between them.

Here, then, is the type of animal that lorded it over the denizens of the gloomy forests and dark morasses of the coal period; a sort of gigantic tadpole or mud puppy, with wide, flat head, no neck, a thick, heavy body, short legs and paddle-like feet and a heavy flattened tail. While able to crawl clumsily and slowly upon the land, he must have been far more at home in the water, lying in the dead pools and backwaters and slow moving streams that traversed the far extended coast marshes of the great interior sea to the west of the Appalachian highlands.

That this beast, slow, heavy and clumsy, small brained and low organized, should be one of the highest types of living beings in his time may help us to realize how remote and far away was the era of the coal forests.

That he is a collateral ancestor of all the higher animals—of reptiles, birds, mammals and of man himself—all evolved through the millions of years which have since elapsed from animals of the same type and grade of organization, may serve at least to raise our respect for the possibilities of development which lay in the primitive amphibia.

The giant dragon fly that darted over the head of the slow-crawling Eryops might seem, except in size, a far more promising candidate for the position of ancestor to the intelligent life which was to appear in the dim future. But the insect had fulfilled the mechanical possibilities of which its structural organization was capable. The future progress of the insect type was to lie not in the direction of a more perfect mechanism, but in the perfection of the metamorphosis during the growth of the individual and in the establishment of elaborate social organizations and instincts.

The amphibian was but beginning the adaptation of the vertebrate structure to a terrestrial habitat, and in his organization lay concealed a potential evolution to a far higher plane of existence than the insect organization has been able to reach. It is not so easy to say just wherein this superiority lay, but probably the possession of an internal instead of an external skeleton was an essential feature of it. The internal skeleton has also certain marked mechanical advantages

Career of a Million Dollar Pleasure Boat Which Has Forced Young Mrs. Goelet to Deny Yachts to Her Sons Even as Playthings, and Has Caused the Family to Deny the Dying Wish of the Elder Mrs. Goelet

The Goelet Yacht Nahma, Which Has Played Such a Mournful Part in the History of the Rich Goelet Family.

THE members of the enormously wealthy Goelet family, of New York, one of the most prominent families of America, either die on board their yachts or are taken from them to die. For this reason, young Mrs. Robert Wilson Goelet, the former Miss Elsie Whelen, will not let her husband own a yacht of any kind, will not let him go cruising, nor will she go herself. And more than this, she is bringing up her two small boys to hate yachts and will not even let them have toy boats of any kind.

"Yachts are evil to the Goelets," she has said many times. Last Summer when the news of Mrs. Robert Goelet's serious illness reached her, young Mrs. Bobby said to her great friend, Mrs. Gordon Douglas:

"The Nahma will claim another victim."

Early in December Mrs. Goelet died, not on board the Nahma, as she desired, however, but in Paris, where her only son, Robert Walton Goelet, insisted on taking her. Mrs. Goelet's illness and death is the latest tragedy of the magnificent pleasure craft that cost the late Robert Goelet more than one million dollars.

So strongly do the whole family feel on the yachting subject in general, so keen is their dread of the Nahma in particular, that they refused to comply with Mrs. Robert Goelet's last wishes and have her body brought back to America on board. It was no easy thing to thus disregard the last request of his mother. Her son Robert was urged by his aunts and cousins to have her body brought over on a regular steamer. Dreading the voyage himself, young Mr. Goelet was persuaded to follow the wishes of his family rather than those of his mother.

But the Nahma was not the first yacht to bring tragedy to the family. Fifteen years ago Ogden Goelet, one of the best-known New York and Newport multi-millionaires, died on board his steam yacht Mayflower. He had been cruising in English waters, and died at Cowes. His body was brought home on board the vessel that he loved, as he did his life. His widow and son, Robert Wilson Goelet, would not keep the Mayflower. Mrs. Goelet said that it would always be a funeral ship to her, and so she sold it to the United States Government. It was used as a converted gunboat during the Spanish war and is now the President's yacht.

It is a noticeable fact that Mrs. Ogden Goelet and her son have never been interested in yachts or yachting since Ogden Goelet's death.

With the other branch of the family it has been different. At the time of Ogden's death his eldest brother Robert was having built a superb vessel designed to put all others to shame. When finished it cost just one million and a quarter dollars, and rivalled every other craft in the register of the New York Yacht Club.

Twenty months after putting the Nahma in commission, Robert Goelet died on board in the Bay of Naples, and his body was brought home to New York in the beautiful little library whose walls were lined with rare first editions and equally rare old prints.

Robert Goelet left the bulk of his fortune, about fifty millions, to his only son, Robert, and one million to his only daughter, Beatrice, who was then a girl of thirteen. Mrs. Goelet was one of the executors of her husband's will. The first two years after his death she was practically a stranger to New York and Newport. The Nahma was always in foreign waters and at that time there was no entertaining. Her son was at college with his cousin, and just here it will be well to straighten out the family relationship, for these two cousins are always being sadly confounded.

8—December, 1912—Mrs. Goelet dies in Paris, leaving request that her body be brought home on Nahma, as was her husband's body.

Ogden and Robert Goelet were the only sons of Robert Goelet, the first member of the family to become widely known socially. Robert was the elder. He had two children, Robert Walton, who is still a bachelor, and Beatrice. His widow called herself "Mrs. Goelet," being the widow of the elder son. Ogden also had two children a son, Robert Wilson, who married Elsie Whelen, and May, who is now the Duchess of Roxburghe. The only heirs to the united Goelet fortunes are the two baby sons of Robert Wilson, as the Roxburghes have no children and probably will not have any. For this reason Mrs. Goelet was very anxious for her son to marry, and to the day of her death urged him to carry on his line.

In January, 1902, after a series of brilliant entertainments on the Nahma, Mrs. Goelet decided to return to New York and bring out her daughter Beatrice. This would be her first appearance in the social world of her own country since her husband's death. The handsome mansion on Fifth avenue was ordered in readiness and great preparations were made for the debut of the girl who was known at home and abroad as a great heiress.

Beatrice was then seventeen years old, a remarkably pretty young person, and one who seemed destined to make a great match, for in Europe she was on friendly terms with the younger members of the royal families of Great Britain and Germany. While speeding across the Atlantic with the future so rosy before her Beatrice was stricken with measles. On reaching New York she was hurried to the mansion so wonderfully prepared for her, but she died on the 10th of February, the second victim of the Nahma.

Even after this tragedy, from which she never recovered, Mrs. Goelet would not sell the yacht. She kept everything in her husband's rooms just as he had left them, and after Beatrice's death she closed her rooms also, leaving all her little things untouched. In planning the Nahma Robert Goelet had stipulated that his wife and daughter should have unusually large rooms. All the rooms were arranged in suites. His own included, besides his bedroom and dressing room, the library in which he spent the greater part of his time, and in which his body lay in state all the way across the Atlantic. These rooms were kept sacred and many of Mrs. Goelet's friends and guests never saw them.

It was one of the interesting side lights on Mrs. Goelet's character that while she continued to live in the funeral ship, and while she kept as shrines the rooms occupied by her husband and daughter, still she did not shut herself away from social pleasures. She did not become a hermit nor did she inflict her grief on the public.

Her daughter's death, however, made her an exile to all intents and purposes. As ever, she made her home on the Nahma, but she gathered about her at first, only the friends of her later days—the friends who had known her daughter. Members of the German, English and French nobility, and particularly the Emperor and Empress of Germany, and the late King Edward were her friends. Queen Alexandra and the then Prince and Princess of Wales were her guests, too, on several occasions. The Emperor Wilhelm sent Admiral von Baudissin, his personal representative to Miss Beatrice's funeral and ordered him to place a wreath on her grave in the name of the Empress and himself.

Then followed many months of wanderings on the part of the Nahma and its heart-sore owner. The craft became as well known in foreign ports from Norway to Constantinople as it was formerly to Newport and New York. In 1905 Mrs. Goelet began to entertain on a more elaborate scale. She gave many cruising parties, particularly after the marriage of her niece May to the Duke of Roxburghe. Late in the Summer of that year one of the sailors, Martin Schiller, a German, fell overboard and was drowned. And just before Christmas one of the assistant engineers was taken ill and died on board.

These were minor tragedies, and in a way did not affect the Goelet family. After the death of the engineer life moved along very smoothly for the wealthy widow. She had the Kaiser as her guest at Kiel during the naval manœuvres one season, and at that time there was a well-founded report that she would marry one of the Kaiser's pet attaches.

The Nahma had other curious incidents in her career. In 1907, while trying to pass through the Dardanelles without a passport, she was held up by the Turkish authorities and much unpleasantness developed. It ended very delightfully, however, for the Sultan himself made the most handsome apologies and presented Mrs. Goelet with the order of the Chefakat, an order established by the Sultan in view of the work accomplished by the Baroness Burdett-Coutts, who instituted the Turkish Compassionate Fund.

In June, 1911, another count was made against the Nahma. The Duchess of Roxburghe was not very strong, and was ordered to take an ocean voyage. With the Duke she sailed away on the Nahma, and while on board was taken dangerously ill. For days it was feared that she would die. On her recovery and her return to Floors Castle she told her family that she would make Ogden, the elder son of the Robert Wilson Goelets, her heir.

Last Winter Mrs. Goelet returned to New York, and was frequently at the opera in her box, but otherwise she did not entertain very formally. She went to Europe last Spring, and after the Nahma had been redecorated, took a cruise to the northward. Her son did not go with her. In July Mrs. Goelet developed a dangerous illness. Specialists hurried to the yacht from London and Paris, said that it was cancer and that there was no hope.

"Let me die on board my boat," said Mrs. Goelet.

Her son hastened to Europe, but refused to grant his mother's request. He dreaded the yacht and insisted that she go to Paris for further treatment. From the beginning, however, there on board the Nahma, Mrs. Goelet was sure that she had no chance to recover. She was almost fatalistic in her attitude.

She went to Paris where she had an apartment, and after several months of suffering died there on December 5.

This request was not granted. Her son, Robert Walton Goelet, hates the Nahma. It may be an unreasoning hate, but it is very strong within him, and he refused to trust his mother's body to that funeral ship. And more than this, so keen is his dread and hate of the yacht, that he will not bring her to this country at all. There is every indication that he will put the million dollar craft out of commission for a year or so and then sell her, but he will not sell her in this country.

Mrs. Goelet's body was brought to New York on board the Provence. Her son was also on board. The funeral occurred on Monday, December 23, in St. Thomas's Church.

The Late Mrs. Robert Goelet, Sr., Who Wanted Her Body to Be Brought to America on the Nahma, as Was Her Husband's Body.

With this cruel list of illnesses and deaths to her count, and the death of Ogden on board the Mayflower, it is not to be wondered at that the members of the Goelet family now living should be filled with horror against yachts of any kind. Young Mrs. Bobby and the Duchess of Roxburghe are the bitterest. The former because of her two small sons.

Her boys, Ogden, born five years ago, and Peter Gerry, born a year ago, are not to play with boats, but are being encouraged to love horses.

The Duchess of Roxburghe says that she will never again go yachting. She urges her brother to marry, else there will be no on left to carry on their branch of the family. If he does not marry he will leave his fifty odd millions to the younger nephew, Peter Gerry Goelet.

How You Inherited the Color of Your Hair

SELDOM a baby comes into the world but what its parents and relatives promptly take notice of the color of its hair. Most babies have quite a lot of hair at birth, although this may later disappear, and it has long been a common belief that the color of this first hair is a certain indication of the color the infant's hair will be when it reaches maturity.

But this is not always the case, as many fond parents know. There is, however, a certain method of learning what color the youngster's hair will be when it grows up, according to Maurice H. Cane, B. A., an English expert in such matters.

A child may have yellow hair or brown hair at birth, but if the eyelashes are black or dark brown, the scalp hair will eventually become black or dark brown. This does not hold good in the case of red-headed infants. "Once a red-head, always a red-head" is the declaration. A child with pronounced red hair of the so-called "carroty type" will retain that color from infancy to old age, or until advancing years change it to white.

In the first place, when both parents have red hair, all the children have red hair, without exception. In other words, if you are redheaded and you marry a redheaded woman, every one of your children will have red hair.

In the second place, when one parent has red hair and the other has hair of some other color, one of two possible alternatives is the result: either none of the children have red hair, or none have red hair, the proportion depending entirely upon how many of the red haired parents' ancestors were red headed.

When both parents have fair hair all the children will have light hair, but if a light-haired person and a dark-haired person marry the dark-haired children are very apt to predominate.

The color of the scalp hair is one of the most permanent characteristics of the human race. If a tribe of people with all black or all blond hair were to be segregated and never intermarry with people having other colored hair there would never be any change in the color of the hair of all their offspring, no matter how many generations there may be.

The Eskimos, for example, have lived apart from other tribes for many generations, and all of them have the same straight black hair. But take the example of the blond Eskimos discovered by Dr. Stefansson; here it is believed that a party of Europeans became lost up in the frozen North and took up their lives with a party of Eskimos; they drifted far from other tribes, and as a result was a tribe of Eskimos with blue eyes and blond hair and beards.

But Mr. Cane is careful to explain that while mathematics provides one with an estimate of the chances against the appearance or non-appearance of a child with a certain type of hair, mathematics cannot now, and probably never can, take into account the vagaries of Nature. Consequently any rule he has laid down is like all other rules—always broken by the exception.

MY LIFE IN THE UNDERWORLD—The Seco Criminals

By Jack Rose

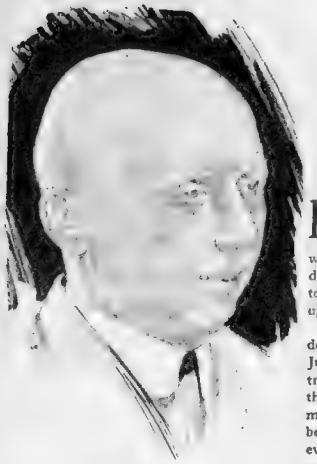
The Gambling Partner of Lieutenant Becker and the Chief Witness Against Him for the Murder of Herman Rosenthal



Jack Rose

IT has been said that I have never done an honest day's work in my life. That is largely true; if gambling is considered dishonest. I have lived by my wits among the criminals of New York's underworld. But that chapter of my life is closed; I will never again take a dishonest dollar. And I shall go further than this. I shall do all I can to make restitution for the years of my life which were spent preying upon the public.

You, the victimized public, must believe me in this. I have already done everything in my power to help District Attorney Whitman and Justice Goff in making sure that justice should not be defeated in the trial of Becker and the four gunmen. But it has been pointed out to me that I still have another duty to perform, a duty to the public. That many things that I have learned in my life in the underworld should be made known for the benefit and protection of the men and women and even the children who cannot possibly know the methods, the secrets and the traps which are set for them by the vultures of the underworld.

Criminals thrive, as I said on this page last Sunday, because the public are innocent, ignorant and unprepared. If everybody knew that a cross in white chalk on the sidewalk in front of the house was the burglar's mark—the owner would not be caught unprepared. If the cook noticed that the basement door didn't latch and found a simple little contrivance (which I will describe later on), she would know that a robbery was planned for that night. If the man who lost his scarfpin or the woman who lost her purse out of her bag had been familiar with the tricks-of-the-trade of pickpockets, they would not have been robbed. I have never lost a scarfpin or a pocketbook. For twenty years I have had an intimate acquaintance with the best pickpockets in New York, and, understanding their ways, I take the precautions which upset their plans.

And I hope in this series of articles which I have written on my life in the underworld that I may do a useful service to the public in revealing the closely guarded secrets of their criminal enemies.

TO get rid of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, cost $1,000 in cash. This was liberal payment. The job might have been done for less. Similar jobs have been done much cheaper.

As a result of the Rosenthal murder the public was introduced to four picturesque characters: "Gyp the Blood," "Dago Frank," "Lefty" Louie and "Whitey" Lewis. They have been referred to as the four gunmen. These were the men who, according to the testimony, got $250 apiece for the murder of Rosenthal.

These four men were not the only gunmen in New York. They were not even the most picturesque. I have known gunmen in New York compared with whom these four were simple "boobs." I might mention the name of "Spanish Louie," one of the boldest gunmen who ever stuck up, slugged or croaked a man.

"Spanish Louie" boasted of twenty-five notches to his gun before he ever saw Broadway. Twenty-five men he had croaked in cold blood! He used to say that in South America, where he had spent several years and first tasted blood, he wasn't recognized as a bad man until he had croaked his fifteenth man.

But more of "Spanish Louie" later. In my association with the underworld I have come in close contact with many of his type and I have learned of the murders they have done for cash.

My first general acquaintance with gunmen came some five years ago when my then gambling partner, Herman Rosenthal, was planning to get control of the afterward notorious Hesper Club.

Up till that time the Hesper Club had been one of the most influential clubs downtown. It was composed of bookmakers, politicians, business and professional men of the district. Afterward when it came under the control of Rosenthal it was turned into a full fledged gambling house and the gunmen who were hired by Rosenthal to get control of the club for him were kept on his pay roll for a long time afterward at $5 a day.

A Thugs' Private Club.

During that time at least forty gunmen could have been found at or obtained through the Hesper Club at any time of the day who, for a cash consideration, would commit any crime asked, from horse-poisoning to murder.

It is necessary to explain briefly how Rosenthal got possession of the Hesper Club, because it will explain how in the fight which followed three well-known business men were black-jacked by thugs hired by Rosenthal.

The club had accumulated $10,000 through annual balls and outings. A building of its own was planned. Somehow Rosenthal got hold of the funds and used them for his own purpose. The members objected and threatened him. To silence them he resorted to a well-planned scheme. Gradually, within a period of six months, he elected about forty gunmen to membership. "Spanish Louie" and "Big Jack" Zelig were the most notorious of them.

With the friends he had in the club Rosenthal was able to control the election. I was elected president. The new building committee I appointed was composed of Rosenthal's hired gunmen. This committee reported that Rosenthal had paid back the $10,000, and exhibited a check. Some of the members declared that the check ought to be certified right away. I resented the insinuation against Rosenthal, and upon charges preferred against the men Rosenthal most feared, they were expelled by the gunmen Board of Guardians and Trustees. Three of the expelled members were awise enough to threaten court proceedings for reinstatement. One was a man in the feather business, another was in the bottling business, the third was a jewelry salesman. It was to take care of men of this stamp that the gunmen had been imported into the club.

Two nights after the expulsion of the three, the feather man was black-jacked by one of the gunmen on Thirteenth street, and was told that if he took the club matter any further he would be croaked. The next night the other two were set upon by "Spanish Louie" and several members of his gang and severely slugged just as they were coming from the home of a lawyer they had been consulting with regard to the club matter, a fact with which Rosenthal was familiar.

A few more broken jaws or cracked skulls and quiet was restored in the new Hesper Club. Rosenthal got full control. He ran it as a full fledged gambling house.

Worst Man in New York.

"Spanish Louie" was perhaps the worst bad man New York ever knew. He arrived in New York with the reputation of being a crack shot, and he was. He had absolutely no respect for human life. To oblige a friend he would do a job for nothing. If the risk were slight, and he needed the money very badly he would do it for next to nothing.

"Spanish Louie" on one occasion killed a man for $20—which, incidentally, he never got.

He was hired for the job by a theatrical agent who frequented the Hesper Club. This theatrical man was being blackmailed by a man and wanted to get his oppressor out of the way. Some one suggested that "Spanish Louie" would do the job for him. Spanish was rounded up, drinks were bought, and that very night Spanish and his employer hunted for their victim.

They found him on Twenty-seventh street just west of Seventh avenue. Without a word Spanish went up to him, struck him a terrific blow on the head with his blackjack, and the man fell to the sidewalk, striking his head with great force on the curb.

The employer of "Spanish Louie," who was standing by to see Louie carry out his contract, was so frightened that he ran away when he saw the man fall. The following day the papers said that a drunken man reeled and fell while crossing the street and fractured his skull. He died the following day without recovering consciousness.

When the man who had the job done read of his oppressor's death and realized he was really the murderer, he immediately left town, and "Spanish Louie" was cheated out of his pay.

"Spanish Louie's" appearance at beat was enough to terrify the average man. His dark skin, shifty black eyes and general villainous appearance combined to make him a man to inspire fear, but when I saw the look in his face when he told me what he would do to the guy who bilked him out of that $20 if he ever laid eyes on him again, the chills went down my back.

"That was the toughest deal I ever got in my life," he complained to me at the Hesper Club a few days later, when he realized that the chances of the theatrical man coming back to town were mighty slim, "there I was broke and hungry with barely enough strength in me to knock the guy out with my jack and then this sucker goes and welches on me after I not only knocked the gink out, but croaked him for good measure. No matter what you do for some people, they don't appreciate it!"

Later on "Spanish Louie" got better prices. Every one knew him as a desperate character who thought nothing of taking human life. In the underworld, where one had to go who wanted jobs of this sort done, "Spanish Louie" was the most sought-after of all the gunmen.

Other gunmen were anxious to work with him. They knew he would make a good job of what there was to be done. If there was pay in it they were sure to get a fair share of it. If trouble followed in the way of an occasional arrest, "Spanish Louie" they knew could be relied on through his influential friends to fix things up.

Some days he would come into the gambling house I was interested in to get the loan of a five-spot. The next day he would return the loan. At the same time "Spanish Louie" would display a big roll of bills—the pay for some murderous job. Then he would start gambling, betting as much as the dealer would permit him to bet on the turn of a card. And if he lost his roll, as he frequently did, he would get up, stretch himself and laughingly say "Well I'm broke. Easy come, easy go!"

One night, while "Spanish Louie" was playing at my house he got a message from a saloon keeper to hurry to the saloon. Arriving at the place he was taken into the back room and introduced to what he afterward described to me as a "swell bloke."

Briefly, the bloke explained to him that he was in love with a girl who lately had formed a mad infatuation for her father's chauffeur. The chauffeur was a big, husky Englishman, it turned out. The swell was a narrow, anemic-looking youth.

"Now, Spanish," concluded the swell, "I want this beast done up and warned to leave the employ of this lady's home. What will you charge to do this job?"

"Wouldn't you rather have him croaked—then you are sure he won't bother your rag any more?" queried Spanish Louie."

An Expensive Murder.

The suddenness with which the word was uttered by "Spanish Louie" took the breath away from the other. He reached with a trembling hand for the drink that was on the table and swallowed it in one gulp.

"Murdered! Gracious heavens, no! Anything but that. I want him to get a sound thrashing, that is all."

The swell thought that would be about it, and after a little more parleying, $1,500 was the amount agreed on for the job, three men to do the job "right" at $500 apiece. One hundred dollars was paid to Louie as a retainer. The rest was to be put up the following day in the hands of the saloon keeper. When the swell was satisfied that the job was done as contracted for, he was to communicate with the saloon keeper and direct him to turn over the $1,400.

That night, at the garage, the chauffeur was pointed out to "Spanish Louie" and the other gunmen.

The following night when the chauffeur brought his car into the garage after taking the family home from the theatre, "Spanish Louie" and his gunmen set upon him and blackjacked him into unconsciousness.

Brass Knuckles for Webber.

It was one of "Spanish Louie's" men who, at the instigation of Rosenthal, had "Bridgie" Webber's jaw broken. Louie stood across the way on Fourteenth street while one of his gang, with a pair of brass knuckles broke Webber's jaw. The man who did this job I know very well. Webber knew him. He was arrested but Webber was wise enough to refuse to identify him, declaring positively that the man arrested was not his assailant, fearing the vengeance of "Spanish Louie." The man was discharged, and is now employed as a chauffeur for a well-known politician.

There were a number of eye-witnesses of the assault who were equally positive of the assailant's identity, but the fact that the man who did it was a member of "Spanish Louie's" gang was sufficient to awe them into silence.

Before dismissing "Spanish Louie," I may mention the time when I hired him myself.

In the days when I dabbled somewhat in theatrical matters, I became acquainted with a man I will call Morton, who was then in the employ of a theatrical firm, the junior member of which was my dearest friend. One day Morton awoke to find himself famous as a playwright. He had one success after another and got rich. He still remained a good friend of mine and in one of my many periods of financial distress I borrowed $800 from him. At the maturity of the note I was unable to pay. Suit was brought, judgment was obtained against me, for I had no defense, and I was harassed with supplementary proceedings. All that the examination revealed was the possession of the average gambler—a load of debts, a bunch of pawn tickets and a positive confidence that tomorrow will bring the winning streak and with it the ability to pay all outstanding claims. The attorney gave it up, but Morton still bothered me. I paid one or two installments of $50 and then I got word from him that he had placed his claim against me in the hands of "Youngie" for collection.

I knew what that meant. "Youngie" was a notorious gangster in the Tenderloin district. That night while in a gambling house at No. 52 West Forty-fifth street I was called aside by a man who said that a gangster had asked him to find out whether I was in the place. "Youngie" had threatened my informant with bodily harm if he tried to doublecross him. "Youngie."

I knew that, next to "Spanish Louie" "Youngie" was supposed to be the best shot in New York. I finally hit upon the plan of trying to reach "Spanish Louie." After a lot of telephoning I got in communication with him and he promised to come right up.

About an hour later the doorman of this gambling house notified me that some one was downstairs to see me. It was "Spanish Louie." He said that he had had a talk with "Youngie's" men, whom he had met on the corner, and that they were ready to double-cross Morton because I was a friend of "Spanish Louie." The bargain "Youngie" had made with Morton was that if his men could collect the money I owed they were to slug me anyway and could keep the money for their own. If they could not collect the debt they were to croak me or beat me up and Morton would pay them $400 for the job.

"Bloody Mike's" Mistake.

I had made a big winning that night and "Spanish Louie" advised me to divvy up the $400 I still owed Morton between "Youngie" and his gunmen, which I did.

"Bloody Mike" was another notorious gangster. He was ready to slug or croak a man for very little money. He was one of the gangsters who did his work for the love of it. He gloried in the sight of blood. That was how he got his nickname. He was never satisfied with beating up a "sucker" unless he left his victim drenched in blood.

In one of the clothing workers' strikes "Bloody Mike" was hired by a manufacturer to slug one of the union delegates. This delegate the manufacturer was convinced was bent on ruining him financially. He had been grafting for a long time and the manufacturer was getting desperate. He promised "Bloody Mike" $150 to "do" the man up.

By some mistake "Bloody Mike" got the wrong man. His victim was nearly killed. The manufacturer paid the $150, having read of the finding of the body of an assaulted man whose identity was then unknown at the very place and at the hour "Bloody Mike" had reported he had beaten up the delegate.

That name day the delegate walked into the manufacturer's workshop, and the manufacturer nearly died of fright, thinking his enemy must have died and this was his ghost. Subsequent editions of the papers showed that "Bloody Mike's" victim was a plumber.

The End of "Spanish Louie."

"Bloody Mike" was looked up and told of his mistake. He agreed to make good for another $50. Two nights later the delegate got his. He nearly died from loss of blood. "Bloody Mike" got the $50.

"Bloody Mike" was frequently called on by strikers to attack scabs. Work of this kind, which involved little risk, he would undertake at $5 a head. It was a pleasant pastime for him. He used brass knuckles rather than a black jack or piece of lead pipe, because in that way he could feast his eyes on more blood. Several times he was arrested because of this strange fascination, which kept him at the scene of his crimes too long. The influence of politicians was usually sufficient to get him off.

But "Bloody Mike" performed one great public service—he murdered "Spanish Louie." Of course "Bloody Mike" didn't do the job for the benefit of the community. He did it for the $200 which Rosenthal paid him for it. After the many jobs "Spanish Louie" had done for Rosenthal, he double-crossed him in one which was very close to Rosenthal's heart, and Rosenthal hired "Bloody Mike" to kill "Spanish Louie."

Before describing how this crime was done, it may be well to tell of the job which "Spanish Louie" had been employed to do for Rosenthal, and which he failed to do. This was the murder of Sam Paul and Louis Kauffman, for which "Spanish Louie" took Rosenthal's money and then fell down on the job. Here is the story:

The Hesper Club, under Rosenthal's management, came to be known as the one big gambling house downtown which the police wouldn't raid. Its influence was believed to be so great that the police

Special Tools of Their Trade Used by New York Gunmen.

"Most wicked of all, perhaps, is the combination pistol and dagger. The thug uses this hideous weapon, striking at his victim first with the dagger, and then, if he misses, shooting him down and trusting to luck to make his get-away."

"Brass knuckles which look like massive gold rings. They are made of steel, gold plated, although instead of being three separate finger rings they are united and reinforced with a steel hook held in the palm."

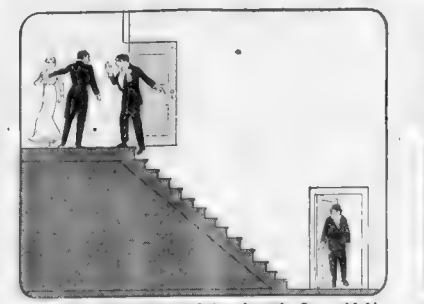
1.—A little after midnight, when things were well under way at the dance, Jack Zelig started a waltz with his wife, who had accompanied him to the pickpockets' ball.



2.—"Big Jack" Zelig was waltzing about the floor, with his arm around his wife's waist, when somebody stuck his head in the door and told Zelig that "Julie" Morell was downstairs gunning for him.

might be openly defied. These boasts got to be very galling to the department, of which Cropsey was then Commissioner. Deputy Commissioner Clement Driscoll assigned officers Cody and Murphy, of his staff, to secure the necessary evidence upon which to make a raid on the Hesper Club. The raid was made. Rosenthal, his pride hurt, was furious. He swore he would have vengeance upon everybody who had a hand in the raid. He heard that Sam Paul and Louie Kauffman, who ran a poolroom on Thirteenth street, could furnish him evidence that Cody and Murphy were grafters. Rosenthal went to Paul and Kauffman and asked them to accompany him on a trip to the City Hall to "squeal" to Mayor Gaynor and thus get even with the detectives who had raided his place

Softened the Murderer's Heart.

Paul and Kauffman said there was nothing in the rumor and refused to help Rosenthal. This brought about a quarrel between them, and Rosenthal decided to put both of them out of the way. Paul was to go first. He hired "Spanish Louie" to do the job.

Two nights later "Spanish Louie" accidentally encountered Sam Paul. "For the sake of conversation the gunman mentioned to Sam Paul that he was "up against it"—"broke."

"Any time you're up against it, Louie" he said, "just come to me. You know I am always ready to help a friend."

"So you think I'm your friend, eh?" asked "Spanish Louie" surprisedly.

"Well, ain't you?"

Reaching down his trouser leg, "Spanish Louie" drew forth the biggest, ugliest looking gun Paul ever laid eyes on.

"To prove it, Sam," said "Spanish Louie," patting up his gun, "I am going to tell you something. For three days I've been trailing you to get a good chance to croak you. Finally, when I run into you I got staked to fifty bucks by you, and you tell me to come and get more any time I want it. Well, that queers me on this job," and then he told Paul the whole plan Rosenthal had outlined. "Spanish Louie" went back and told Rosenthal to get somebody else to do the job as Paul was too good a fellow to croak. Rosenthal did get some one else, but not for Paul. He got "Bloody Mike" to croak "Spanish Louie."

The job was done in the public street. "Spanish Louie" was sitting in a cafe on Second avenue near Thirteenth street when he received word that one of his girls needed him on Thirteenth street. Without a suspicion in the world he started out of his place. As he turned the corner, "Bloody Mike" sent a bullet through his brain. Thus ended the career of the man I believe was the worst bad man in New York.

His murderer soon followed him. In a gang fight on a return trip from Coney Island one night that Summer "Bloody Mike" was shot in the groin. His pals rushed him away before the arrival of the police, and he died in the furnished room to which they took him.

"Big Jack" Zelig's reputation as a gunman was fairly earned. The gang of which he was the head was perhaps one of the most daring New York has ever known. The "Monk Eastman" gang, the "Kid Twist" gang, the "Gopher" gang, and one or two others acquired more publicity perhaps because they were constantly engaged in gang feuds, but if it came to an actual count of crimes committed, "Big Jacks" would probably head the list.

When things are dull in the slugging and croaking line because men in the higher walks of life seem to have forgotten that for a reasonable sum their enemies can easily be put out of the way without risk, the gangster has still got to live.

It is then that he has to resort to "stick-ups." Sticking-up a pedestrian is usually the last resort. There is another kind of "stick-up" that is safer. It is to "stick-up" one of the many stuss games that the East Side abounds in.

Selecting the place, the gangsters with pointed guns back the men in the place against the wall and relieve them of their money. The gangsters then order them to turn about and face the wall and remain in that position for ten minutes until the gangsters make their getaway.

This form of graft grew so popular among the gunmen that the stuss game men combined for mutual protection, and it ended by their selecting "Big Jack" Zelig to protect them at so much a week. He was to avenge every "stick-up."

Jack Zelig earned his first week's salary very promptly. At 5 o'clock one afternoon he was notified by his employers that Frank Niece had just "stuck-up" a stuss game. At 6 o'clock Niece was dead.

Zelig's activity in this case and one or two similar ones soon ended his usefulness to the stuss game men, for rival gangsters were afraid of "Big Jack" and let the stuss men alone

How little the gunmen think of taking human life can hardly be better illustrated than by telling the story of how "Big Jack" killed "Julie" Morrell, bouncer at the Eldorado cafe.

There is a club on the East Side called "The Boys of the Avenue," an organization consisting almost entirely of pickpockets and other members of the underworld. The club arranged to give a ball at the Stuyvesant Casino, on Second avenue, and in looking about for a suitable floor manager decided that Jack Zelig would fill the bill very nicely.

Social functions among pickpockets of the East Side do not require full evening dress, but it is considered good form for the floor manager to wear full dress. This is how it happened that Jack Zelig borrowed a claw-hammer coat from a friend of his, who was a waiter on Broadway, and was the only person who graced the ball of "The Boys of the Avenue" that night in a dress suit.

A little after midnight, when things were well under way at the dance, Jack Zelig started a waltz with his wife, who always attended these functions with her husband in the belief that her presence might somehow afford some means of protection or escape in the event of the affair ending with a fight, as they usually do.

"Big Jack" Zelig was waltzing about the floor with his arm around his wife's waist when somebody stuck his head in the door and told Zelig that "Julie" Morell was downstairs gunning for him. Morell himself was no amateur as a gunman, and had been ready with fists and weapons as "bouncer" for the Eldorado saloon.

Tragedy of the Pickpockets' Ball.

Uncoiling his arm from his partner's waist, "Big Jack" promptly stepped out of the dance hall and hopped briskly down the stairs. Swinging his hand to his hip pocket, Zelig whipped out a pistol, and as he reached the last step on the stairs put a bullet into the base of the brain of Morell, who for the moment had turned his back to the staircase.

With one glance at the fallen figure of Morell, "Big Jack" satisfied himself that he had croaked his victim, and there was no further occasion to interrupt the merriment upstairs. In just two and one-half minutes' time Zelig had rapidly retraced his steps up the stairs, gathered into his arms his waiting partner at the door of the ballroom and was able to continue on with the dance before the orchestra had finished playing the piece—while the body of his victim was still warm and writhing in the death agonies at the bottom of the stairs.

Jack Zelig finished out the dance and then casually mentioned to his wife what he had accomplished in his brief absence from the ballroom, apologizing to her for the apparent rudeness of a gentleman leaving his partner in the middle of a dance.

"Big Jack" himself was at last shot by a gangster named Torti. While lying in Bellevue Hospital on what he believed to be his deathbed "Big Jack" sent for me and there he told me some of the events of his life. He had committed many crimes. He was arrested time and time again as a pickpocket and served his sentences. For his greater crimes, he usually succeeded in escaping punishment. His victims, if they lived, and any eye-witnesses of his crimes, feared the vengeance of his friends if they testified against him, and when they were put on the stand developed a sudden loss of memory or positively declared that "Big Jack" was not the man they had seen commit the crime.

While "Big Jack" had no regard for human life, he seldom committed murder himself for private persons, although he could always furnish men for the purpose.

It was two of Jack Zelig's gang who for $50 agreed to beat up Sam Libowitz, business agent of the Mineral Water Workers' Union.

They got him on Delancey street and slugged him, but they were paid only $25 because the job they did was a poor one. Libbwitz didn't have to go to the hospital.

Down in the Union Market section of New York there is a gangster known in the underworld by the nickname "She." It is this fellow's function to avenge "hold-ups" by other gunmen of the stuss games with which the district abounds. He is the lieutenant of the man who controls the biggest "bang-out" for criminals in the city.

The gangsters headed by "She" have frequently been employed for murders by private individuals, although "She" himself may have had nothing to do with the horrible traffic.

Some time ago livery stable keepers of the district were made the victims of a novel extortion plot. They received letters to the effect that unless they paid certain sums to the horse-poisoner gang the animals in their custody would be poisoned. This, of course, would have meant financial ruin to the business men, and many of them thought it wisest to submit to the extortion and paid the price demanded

Others, more brave, complained to the authorities. These the gangsters who followed "She" were hired to punish. One after another the "squealers" were beaten up. Some of them were crippled for life as a result of the injuries they sustained. A few died.

Because of the influence enjoyed by "She's" employer his men escaped the penalty for their murderous assaults.

A barber who frequently gambled at one of my houses had a very narrow escape. I was able to save his life. A gangster whom I knew had overheard two other gangsters at an opium layoff talking over their plan to cut this barber's throat. They had been promised $2,000 for the job by a man who had reason to believe that the barber was responsible for certain rumors that had been spread around about this man's wife

One night while the barber was playing at my house I got word from a central office detective that two gunmen were laying for the barber. I looked out of the window and saw two men skulking in the doorway opposite. I sent a messenger out for the gangster who had informed me of the plot, and when he appeared I pointed out the men opposite and asked him whether he knew them. He said they were the men he had overheard at the opium layout.

Through some of Zelig's men I was able to make a deal with these gangsters; the barber bought them out. It cost him $500 and even then he knew it was only a matter of time before others would be hired to do the job these men had turned down.

There was a printer I knew who occasionally played at my house. He came in there one night evidently in a hurry under great excitement. At midnight he was cleaned out. As he went out I asked him what the trouble was. He told me that his home had been wrecked, and that he was having all he could do to keep himself from murdering the man who did it with his own hands. Suddenly he turned to me and said: "Jack, don't you know some one who could get one of these guerillas to do the job for me?"

I tried to dissuade him. He went away. The next night he was back again with the same request. More to get rid of him than anything else, I introduced him to "Big Jack" Zelig, and "Big Jack" turned him over to "Kid Mufty," one of his gunmen.

That night the printer came into my place to play faro bank. He had twenty-five dollars. There was a light in his eyes which told me plainer than words that more than his twenty-five dollars was at stake in the game.

How the Sullivan Pistol Law Is the Thug's Friend.

He won. He kept on playing. His luck never turned. When he was four hundred dollars ahead, he quit. He called me aside and asked me where he could get "Kid Mufty." I told him I didn't know, and suggested that he get hold of "Big Jack."

The next night the printer didn't show up, but "Kid Mufty" did, and he had a roll with him. He dropped $350 at roulette before he quit.

Of course I didn't question "Kid Mufty" as to the source of his wealth but I surmised it then, and afterward I learned that he had done the job for the printer.

It was some years ago since "Monk Eastman" went to Long Branch and beat up David Lamar's coachman. Since then similar cases have occurred by the hundreds, although it is only rarely that the real facts become known.

The new Sullivan pistol law, which makes it a felony to be in possession of a pistol, has been a great joy and great protection to the gunmen. This curious law, which was pretended to be framed to put the thug out of business, has had just the opposite effect.

The thug was never able to take human life with less risk than he can to-day.

The Sullivan law has brought this about in several ways.

In the first place, the law has disarmed law-abiding citizens, and thus put them at the mercy of crooks. The honest tradesman, who obeys all laws, however unjust they may be, no longer carries a pistol or other weapon, because the Sullivan law has made it a felony. The thug, who obeys no law, is armed just the same as before. He carries a gun anyhow because it is one of his tools of trade. The thug can therefore pursue his murderous career with very little fear that his victim will be able to put up any resistance.

As a matter of fact, most thugs now carry two guns instead of one. Before starting out on a murderous errand the thug discharges one of the cartridges in one of the pistols. Having trailed his quarry, he shoots him with the other gun. The victim falls and the thug drops by the murdered man's side the gun with the one discharged chamber.

The object of this is apparent. If by any chance the thug should be unable to make good his get-away he is now in a position to point to the gun at the victim's side, declare that the victim was the offender, and that he, the thug, shot in self-defence.

The Murderer's Protection.

The fact that the victim was apparently armed brands him at once as a felon, because a man with a pistol is a felon, thanks to the Sullivan law, and the case against the accused thug is proportionately weakened.

In the second place, this law is so drastic, making the mere possession of a revolver a felony, irrespective of the use to which the possessor intended to put it, that juries are naturally loth to convict. The judge is given no discretion in the matter. If the jury convicts, the prisoner must go to State's prison.

The gunman, who keeps in close touch with the progress of the criminal law, knows just as well as the District Attorney that even if he is arrested with a gun in his pocket he stands a very good chance of being acquitted by a jury. Living in a dangerous district, the gunman can tell a very plausible story that he carried the gun because his life was in jeopardy, and the chances of conviction are very slim.

This is particularly so because of the respectable appearance of the average gunman. He is by no means the heavy-jawed, thick-necked gorilla he is commonly imagined to be. On the contrary, he might more often be taken for an anemic bank clerk or assistant.

His hands are slim like a woman's. He is pale and weak looking. His story of living in fear of the bad characters of the neighborhood sounds plausible enough Certainly without a weapon he would be a match for none of them. The jury refuses to convict him because the State's prison sentence required by the Sullivan law is too severe for a doubtful case.

Men are frequently found unconscious in the streets of New York, clubbed by some unknown thug. Examination of their pockets reveals no possible motive for the crime. When the victim recovers consciousness and finds that his bank roll is intact he realizes that robbery was not the motive for the assault, and concludes that malice must have prompted it.

But the man who struck him was a stranger. Clearly he could have had no malice. Then the conclusion is forced home that the thug must have been hired by some one who had a grudge against the victim, and it doesn't take him long to decide who it was who had reason to do him harm.

Obviously, however it wouldn't do in most cases for the victim to squeal to the police. To give the name of the man he believed responsible for the assault and to have him arrested would invite publicity and scandal which the victim would much rather avert. The victim thinks it all over and suffers in silence.

That is why the guerilla has little to fear if he can once make his safe getaway. There is very little chance that he will be caught through any clew the victim is in a position to furnish, and it is a thousand to one that the victim won't squeal on the man he knows is responsible for the assault.

How do peaceable, law-abiding citizens, absolutely unfamiliar with the ways of the underworld, unknown to a single one of its denizens, men who perhaps, have never even seen a real criminal—how do such men when the occasion arises, manage to procure an agent to commit murder for them for cash?

The task is not so difficult as it might seem. Any one who knows anything at all about the underworld knows that every crook from the petty sneak thief to the murderer-for-hire, spends most of his time and money in gambling houses, the cafes of the East Side, and opium layouts.

It is the keeper of such a resort, then, through whom the inquiry must be pursued and the negotiations conducted

The truth is that the average gunman is a coward. He wouldn't stand for a fair fight with any one his size because he knows he would get the worst of it. The life he leads, late hours, dissipation and the smoking of opium puts him in no physical condition to put up any kind of a fight even if he knows the rudiments of pugilism.

But that is not necessary. The gangster doesn't fight with his hands anyway. A gun, brass knuckles, a blackjack, or a simple piece of lead pipe are the tools he favors, and armed with one of these he is ready to do battle with any one—from behind.

In addition to these weapons, the most common tools of the trade of a thug is sometimes equipped with others of a more ingenious nature

There is, for instance, a combination set of brass knuckles and stiletto, the stiletto protruding from the part of the weapon held in the palm. If the blow aimed at the victim's jaw misses the thug with this double weapon is in a position to stab him through the heart with the stiletto before he can sidestep or defend himself.

Then, for special occasions, there are

The Lessons in My New Lines

Lady Duff-Gordon Describes Three Distinctive Costumes for the Three Ages of Women---Spring, Summer and Autumn

"La Reine Hortense," Superb Evening Costume of Black Velvet and White Crystal Applique. The New Line Given By the Train and the Close-Fitting Cap with Enormous Plume Are Novel.

"Purple Shadows," Elaborate Evening Costume for Young Matron, Created in White Satin Charmeuse and Orchid Net Tunic, Embroidered in Shades of Deep Rose and Purple.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

THIS week it is a pleasure to be able to show you three distinctive evening costumes, one for the debutante, one for her married sister and one for her stately mother. Each one is perfect in its way, and I am of the opinion they are among my most delightful creations. In the double picture you will see the older matron as the foremost figure. The lines of this black velvet costume are simply ideal for the woman who is past her first youth. Any girl would be only too happy to have her mother wear such a costume. I adore designing black velvet costumes. To my mind there is no fabric so perfect for the woman over twenty-five.

In this design you will observe that the entire gown is of the velvet. The skirt is delightfully draped at the sides. The new hobble line is given by the train, which is fastened at the top of the hobble a little to the left of the centre back. This train is very long and is a feature of many of the new opera gowns. It is also interlined with rich rose red satin. The tiny sleeves are of rose red satin. The decoration across the front is duplicated in the back. It is a magnificent motif of crystals and large garnets, cut flat. The band extending from the left shoulder to the right side is of rose red velvet.

The cap headdress is of fine Persian embroidery with an ornament of crystals and garnets matching the bodice decoration. The aigrettes are white and black. Is any wonder that I call this "La Reine Hortense"?

The figure in the background is that of the young matron. I call this my purple shadow gown. The lines of this are particularly graceful for a young married woman, who must portray just a bit of dignity without resigning her girlhood entirely. I think that I have caught just the spirit here. The under robe is of white satin, supple and lustrous. It barely touches the floor in the back. The deep embroidered band is a delightful grape design in shades of purple and deep rose that just verges on the purple. In front the grapes are marvellously natural. The long tunic is more like an apron than anything else. It is of orchid net edged with a band of amethysts. The bodice shows the matron's touch. It is a deep rose satin at fore, perhaps has it had quite so many formidable and fashionable rivals in the way of materials of exquisite and unusual tone and texture.

In fact, this Winter of 1912 is going to be red-lettermarked in the annals of clothes for its positive marvels in the way of rich fabrics. But, at the same time, it will further proclaim the continued supremacy of blue serge, and for this fact and fashion I am proud to think that I may consider myself to a certain extent responsible.

For I would wish—and always advise—every woman to include at least two blue serge models in her outfit—alike for Autumn, Winter and Spring—and then, as one or the other of these can probably, and even certainly, be worn at some time or the other during the Summer, she will be serge-clad and smart all the year round.

One such model will, of course, take coat and skirt form, and, for preference, be one of that "Curate" style whose simplicity is so supremely and universally becoming that, year in and year out, I go on making it for all my clients—and, incidentally, wearing it myself.

For it represents the very gospel of my creed of clothes, and, by thus practising what I preach, I must prove to every one the depth and sincerity of my beliefs.

The next necessity is a one-piece serge dress, which shall be simple and easy enough for wear during the next month or two beneath a long fur coat and at the same time well worthy of full display when this coat is laid aside in restaurant or theatre. Still, again, it must be of such "advance" style that it will be ready and able to prove its possessor up to date in the early days of Spring, when it shall just be completed by a fur stole and muff. And all this I have, I think, secured for you in a certain very favorite new model, where the dark blue coating serge is bordered at the skirt hem with a band of black Ottoman silk, this in its turn being bound with black braid, whose ribbed patterning imitates the texture of the silk. The skirt is quite narrow and straightly hanging, but, to make it immediately and incredibly different from the merely ordinary straight and scanty skirt, which you can see every day in hundreds, I have introduced, low down at the left side a queer little drapery, whose slight fullness is caught into the side seam just above the closely encircling band of silk. There are straps of the braid, too, carried down from the waist line at either side and ending with little pocket flaps where the openwork device of the braid shows the soft, nattier blue of the velvet beneath, one dull gold button being set in the centre to emphasize and complete a color contrast which I always love. At the waist—and almost at the natural waist line—there is a very beautiful belt, formed of alternate square medallions of the blue velvet and black braid, and a chain-work device of little dull gold circlets sewn with soft blue and black silk. The final medallion in front being finished off with long strands of the narrow silken braid, which are all caught together eventually in a wee flower-like cup of blue velvet. Lines of braiding cross the shoulder and end their career in little gold-buttoned motifs, with just a peep—and a piping—of blue velvet to follow their pretty pointed outline, and then far down on the arm (this low shoulder line is so becoming, you will find) the tight, long sleeves of black Ottoman silk are set into the serge with a binding of braid, while at the wrist they are finished off with bedding and gold buttons and a frill of white embroidered muslin. A turn-down collar of this same dainty muslin forms a deep V-shaped opening at the neck and fastens with soft bow loops, this being an addition to a little pearl-buttoned fillet of white lawn, and the serge beneath, being in its turn provided with a roll collar of nattier blue velvet, which eventually merges into the black Ottoman silk. Add three gold buttons for the fastening of the bodice at the left side, and here you have, complete, my ideal blue serge dress.

MY SECRETS OF BEAUTY

No. 208---Brittle Hair, Baldness and the First Gray Locks

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

THIS is the season of brittle hair. A month or two ago was the time of falling hair, a time that may have been extended in some cases, and all seasons, alas, are the time of fading, whitening hair.

What shall be done for all these scalp ailments? We should first ascertain the cause, then remove or correct it. Hair grows brittle usually in the Winter. The cause is that the cold dries the oil, and the hair, deprived of the nourishment by that oil, grows dry and breaks. Broken hair not only gives the head a frowzy, unkempt appearance, but the hair that is broken generally dies.

Balsam of Peru, 60 grams.
Oil of sweet almonds, 40 grams.
Alcoholic extract of cantharides, 1 gram.
Alcohol (30 per cent), 4 grams.

Falling hair, most troublesome in the Autumn, because the dust of the Summer has usually deposited a microbe which causes the root to shrink and the hair to fall out, may be treated in various ways. It were better to prevent its falling by applying during the Summer, when the danger is greatest, strong black tea mixed with half the quantity of alcohol. Apply this every other night before retiring. After rubbing it well into the scalp, soften the harsh treatment by rubbing into the scalp castor oil or arnica oil.

If you permit dandruff to form on the scalp in undue quantities the hair is sure to fall, for the dandruff, dust-like, fills and chokes the pores. Stop its formation by first massaging, then brushing the scalp to remove the scales, then washing it with a weak decoction of Panama wood. After the shampoo rub into the scalp a salve made of:

Oil of birch, 3 grams.
Oil of sandal, 12 drops.

Beef of marrow, 25 grams.
Pulverized sulphur, 1 gram.
Oil of bergamot or other, 5 drops.

Distilled water of sweet clover, 25 grams.
Bicarbonate of soda, 3 grams.
Saponine, 1 gram.

Part the hair many times and in many directions and apply with a soft brush.

This is a valuable tonic for the scalp that has grown dry, a state that will certainly cause falling hair:

Oil of sweet almonds, 100 grams.
Thick oil of nutmeg, 120 grams.
Alcohol (30 per cent.) 30 grams.
Oil of cloves, 15 grams.
Oil of lavender, 15 grams.
Oil of thyme, 15 grams.
Oil of sage, 15 grams.
Oil of rosemary, 15 grams.
Oil of peppermint, 15 grams.
Camphor, 5 grams.
Balsam of tolu, 12 grams.

Mash the marrow and mix it with the oil of nutmeg. Let the balsam dissolve in the alcohol and add the oils and camphor. Blend the marrow and oil of nutmeg by heating them. Pass this mixture through a cloth. Let it cool, then mix with the alcoholic mixture.

Two remedies for falling hair are these, used respectively by Spanish and English women:

Make a decoction of rosemary leaves from 1 pint water and 1 heaping handful of rosemary leaves. After bringing it to a boil, let it stand in a stone jar for six hours. Drop into it bicarbonate of soda the size of a hickory nut. Dampen the hair with this every night.

NO. 8925.—LADIES' ONE PIECE APRON.

HERE is an apron that is not only simple and practical, but becoming as well, and which is cut with a view to the ease and comfort of the wearer. Its good points and its simple construction will at once recommend it to the home dressmaker.

The design is in one piece, and is fitted to the figure under the arm by a dart, and the skirt portion is sin... enough to protect the dress worn underneath.

The back portion is extended to form straps that cross at the centre and fasten over the shoulders in front. Gingham, linen, percale, denim or alpaca are suitable for this garment.

The pattern is cut in three sizes—small, medium and large. It requires 4 yards of 36-inch material for the medium size.

NO. 9450.—LADIES' DRESSING OR HOUSE SACQUE.

FOR eiderdown, flannel, Eden cloth, flannelette, lawn, percale, dimity or nainsook this design will be found most suitable. It is fitted by underarm and shoulder seams, and finished with a neat rolling collar. The sleeve is gathered at the top. Blue flannel, with facings of satin in self-color, or gray eiderdown with a finish of scalloping, would develop this model very effectively. The design is easy to develop, and a very popular style.

The pattern is cut in six sizes—32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. It requires 2¾ yards of 36-inch material for a 36-inch size.

NO. 9480.—BOYS' BLOUSE SUIT, WITH KNICKERBOCKERS.

BLUE serge, with facings of black satin and braid, is here shown. The model is suitable for velvet, corduroy, cashmere, flannel, galatea and linen. The front yoke facings may be omitted or may be made of contrasting material.

The blouse is slipped over the head and worn with a shield. The "knickers" are in regulation style, the fulness at the lower edge being confined by an elastic. The sleeve is finished with a band cuff, and has the popular plait from shoulder to wrist.

The pattern is cut in four sizes—3, 4, 5 and 6 years. It requires 3⅜ yards of 44-inch material for the 6-year size.

NO. 9161.—A CHARMING HOUSE DRESS.

MOST pleasing is this design with its simple lines and simple trimming. The shaped collar facing gives a comfortable neck outline. The sleeve may be finished in full length, with a band cuff, or in shorter length, with a turn back cuff.

The skirt has the popular panel back. Blue and white dotted percale, with facings of white at neck edge, belt and cuffs, would be very pleasing. Striped gray and white galatea, with self trimming, would make a serviceable, neat appearing dress. The model is also suitable for lawn, gingham, linen, linene, chambray or wash silk.

The pattern is cut in six sizes—32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. It requires 6⅞ yards of 36-inch material for the 36 inch size.

Shooting Cameras Through the Air on Rockets to Snap-Shot the Enemy

Astonishing New Device Of the German Army to Take Pictures Of a Hostile Camp Without Endangering the Lives of Its Aviators.

WHILE everyone is talking universal peace there is apparently no disposition on the part of the nations to overlook anything in their preparations for war. The latest development is a fire-rocket camera designed to take pictures of the enemy's encampment or fortifications.

The bird's eye view photograph taken by an airman from a balloon or aeroplane has become familiar, but there are several objections to this method of obtaining information. In the first place, with an ordinary ... it is not always possible to follow the course necessary to obtain the desired picture.

With a dirigible balloon or an aeroplane, another objection appears. While the direction can be obtained, the jarring made by the engines makes the taking of a satisfactory picture very difficult. This can, to some extent, be overcome by the use of very fast shutters and plates. But the principal objection to both of these methods is the fact that it places the photographer in peril. The air vessels from which he must work make an easy target for the sharpshooters, and it is necessary for him to come within rifle range in order to get his picture.

Mr. Alfred Maul, a well-known engineer, has now invented a device calculated to do away with all these objections. His invention consists of a camera shot high into the air as a part of a fire-rocket.

The apparatus was recently demonstrated before the German military authorities and found so satisfactory that it was at once adopted by that Government.

Mr. Maul's device is the result of twelve years of experimentation, and he believes that it has now reached a state of perfection.

It consists of a camera in a pointed hood, at the top of which is a pneumatic electric contact. In addition, there is a "holder," which contains a parachute and the upper part of the rocket, on the top of this holder is a gyroscope.

Further, there is a stick about five yards in length and divided into two parts, the lower fitted with wooden "feathers." The total length of the apparatus is some twenty feet, and it weighs about eighty-four pounds.

The camera proper is equipped with an extremely fine lens and rapid shutter, and takes pictures measuring eight inches by ten. The rocket ... is ... into the air from a trestlelike framework, which may be pointed in any direction. This framework having been set up at the desired angle the rocket is put in place and the gyroscope released electrically from a distance of about two hundred yards.

The starting of the gyroscope fires the rocket and, in eight seconds, the rocket, with the camera held in its proper position by means of the gyroscope, reaches a height of some 2,600 feet. At the moment of attaining its highest point, there is a fraction of a second's rest before the camera begins to fall. Then it is that the camera shutter is released and the photograph taken. At the same moment the parachute is freed the apparatus divides into parts and the whole, attached to the parachute, drops gently to the ground, landing in about fifteen minutes.

The use to which the new device will be put in actual military operations is obvious. The encampment of the enemy having been located, it will be a simple matter to obtain an accurate photograph of the place without endangering a single soldier's life and without any risk that the attempt will be rendered futile through the accuracy of the enemy's sharpshooters—results which could not be guarded against if aeroplanes and balloons were relied upon for this kind of work.

The Camera Clicks as the Rocket Falls, a Parachute Opens and Lets It Drop Unharmed to Earth.

brass knuckles which to all appearance are nothing more than massive gold rings. As a matter of fact, they are made of steel, gold plated, although instead of being three separate finger rings they are united and reinforced with a steel back held in the palm.

It is a felony to carry brass knuckles of any kind, and the thug would not dare to appear in public armed with the ordinary kind, but with these apparently innocuous rings he stands no risk at all, although they are just as effective for his purposes.

Another dangerous weapon, introduced, I believe, by one of the ... apaches, is the palm-spike. This weapon consists of a steel spike ... protruding ... from a holder held in the palm of the hand.

Most wicked of all, perhaps, is the combination pistol and dagger. To insure a safe getaway a thug must sometimes strike his victim down in silence. A pistol shot would be dangerous. But perhaps it is dark and the thug is not quite sure of his mark. Then he uses this hideous weapon, striking at his victim first with the ... and ... if he misses, shooting him down and trusting ... to ... away.

When I was in the gambling business I knew hundreds of gangsters who, at a word from me, would have done my bidding with or without pay, save for a reasonable amount, to make sure of their getaway or to pay expenses while they were trailing the victim.

If one of the frequenters of the place wanted something of this sort done he didn't have to go into particulars with me. He knew as well as I did which of the men he met in my place could best help him out, and he went direct to him. If he had any doubt a question here or there, judiciously put, would set him on the right track.

"Spanish Louie" is dead. "Bloody Mike" is dead. "Kid Twist" is dead. Frankie Nieco is dead. "Jull" Morell is dead. "Big Jack Zelig" is dead. "Lefty Louie," "Dago Frank," "Gyp the Blood" and "Whitey Lewis" ... four gunmen ... in the death house at Sing Sing.

... the fate of the ... whom murder was a source of livelihood and pastime combined, made the purchase of murder in New York impossible?

Perhaps for a time. Certainly the ... Rosenthal case. The ... Rose ... and means for a getaway ... three items which determine the price of this kind of work.

Nevertheless, the guerillas who thought nothing of taking life before the Rosenthal case are still in existence and they have still got their ...

To-day they are lying low. To-morrow, when the uproar raised by the Rosenthal case has died down they will be bold as before.

Then, because it is the only trade they know, they will return to their old vocation—murder for hire!

Society and Foreign News

Society Set of Boston Passes in Review

In reading the other day of Miss Margaret Draper's brilliant dance given by her mother Mrs. William F. Draper, widow of General W. F. Draper, the ambassador to Italy, I could not help but wonder if she has given up her literary efforts in which, when barely in her teens, she bid fair to be a remarkably clever writer of interesting short stories for magazines. She was hardly twelve years of age when her first story was not only accepted by the St. Nicholas Magazine but highly praised.

Of course Miss Draper has had unusual advantages, as she was for some time a resident of Rome, during her late father's appointment in the Italian capital, but even so, few young women with all the same and brilliant environment would have taken a serious or literary view of the situation as she certainly did, and improved every opportunity. I caught a glimpse of her just before she left for the Winter's festivities in Washington and never saw her looking prettier. She wears a remarkably becoming blue cloth gown this Winter with exquisite sable furs, and with her brilliant coloring is one of the most stunning young women I have seen in many moons.

I understand an attache of one of the foreign embassies is paying marked attention to this young heiress who, by the way, is one of the most attractive of Washington coterie as well, as ranking among the richest as from the General she inherited some six millions. Rumor has it that she will visit here with her aunt, Mrs. George A. Draper of Commonwealth avenue, and may come over for one of the assemblies, which are always the event par excellence of the Winter her.

HAPPY IDEA FOR CLUB'S AFFAIR.

It was a remarkably happy thought on somebody's part—on all probability that of Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, president of the club—that a most attractive Christmas box hung in shirred red satin ribbon was placed in the hall of the Chilton Club for the employes of that exclusive organization, which resulted, I understand, in receiving a sum far beyond the expectations of those employed therein.

The club is on a splendid paying basis, and one can hardly wonder at it when one stops to think of the large membership and the dues one hundred dollars a year. In fact a number of the ultra smart set who are not over endowed with an allowance—I am speaking of the younger members—have not felt able to afford that amount much as they would like to be enrolled in that exclusive coterie.

Possibly it is for that reason one sees so many of them leaving the clubhouse by the Dartmouth street door, for no matter how eligible one may be for membership, or how constant a "guest visitor," it is one of the strictest rules that they leave, not only by the side entrance, but use the elevator instead of the main staircase leading down to the Commonwealth avenue entrance. It may have changed in the past few months, but this was the original plan voted on by the ladies in charge of a committee to that effect.

Miss Christine Hunnewell is looking extremely smart this Winter. I met her a few days ago walking with Miss Susie Dabney on Huntington avenue, when she was attired in a becoming and severely-made tailored gown of electric blue broadcloth, with which she wore a stunning set of black fox furs. Her large black velvet hat had hardly any trimming other than a smart white wing, but the whole effect—toute ensemble—was especially suited to her brunette coloring.

EATING LUNCHEON IN CAR OUT OF DOORS.

There has been no end of speculation as to the why and wherefore of a society matron's adopting a new and decidedly novel way of lunching now and then though I have no doubt she has a splendid reason for so doing, in the fact that more than once of late she has enjoyed her luncheon outside the door of her town house on Bay State road in her limousine car, the butler bringing out her light meal or tea as the case may be, and in some instances a most tempting "appetizer." This may be generally done, but I have not heard of any other instance and when one comes to think of it why shouldn't it be in vogue for one as well as many?

Considering the young matron in question has no especial finds I am wondering if this is setting the style for luncheoning "al fresco" amongst others. Some might think it a trifle eccentric, but when one stops to realize that a recent fashionable rehearsal for a charity performance several of the "principals" were delayed for such ridiculous reasons as their pet canines having set for a photo, and a Christmas stocking filled with gifts for the four-footed pets, why should not the lady in question indulge in a light repast in quiet seclusion and cool, particularly if there is a houseful of children who are, naturally, bound to enjoy their indoor frolics and too young to realize even a slight headache may need absolute quiet for the moment and a drive in the open as well.

I was more than sorry to learn that the young son of Mrs. Bradley Cummings of New York, she whose husband was among the Titanic victims, has been suffering from a dangerous case of pneumonia, critical enough to call her mother Mrs. George A. Thayer of Tappan street, Brookline, to New York. The young man, though, I now hear, is past the danger point, which will be good news for the many friends here of the family. Mrs. Cummings, who was formerly Miss Florence Thayer, is a sister-in-law of Mrs Frank B. Bemis of Bea on street and Beverly Farms.

Miss Alison Houghton of the Charlesgate, Beacon street, who has just returned from a visit with Miss Caroline T. Lawrence at her home in Stockbridge, Mass., reports the sledging and skating in the Berkshires was "perfect." She looked especially smart the other day in the Boylston street entrance of the subway when I saw her in a stunning gown of dark lavender broadcloth which fitted her tall figure to perfection, and was especially becoming though severely plain from the fact there was absolutely no trimming on either the coat or skirt. She wore with it gray fox furs, and her toque was a close fitting one of black velvet with a champagne colored ostrich tip at the right of the front bcbin, which was its only trimming.

THREE prominent society girls who are figuring conspicuously in the smartest affairs of fashion and who are well known all over the country are Miss Margaret Draper, daughter of the former Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. Draper; Miss Frances Hoar, debutante daughter of Mrs. Rockwood Hoar of Worcester and Washington, and Miss Ruth Anthony, daughter of the S. Reed Anthonys of Boston.

Gossip of Fashionables Who Lead Hub Society

Invitations have reached here from Warrenton, Va., for the marriage of pretty Miss Anne Camden Spilman, daughter of General and Mrs. Baldwin Day Spilman, to young "Rich" Barrett of Concord, Mass., a son of the late Colonel Richard F. Barrett, on Thursday next at high noon at St. James Church. The affair is to be followed by a large breakfast at the beautiful estate, "Elway Hall," of the Spilmans. The groom-elect is well known here, being identified with the Myopia Hunt and Middlesex Hunt Clubs. He is a splendid whip and cross-country rider, and a close friend of young "Alec" Higginson, M. F. H., of the Middlesex Hunt Club, and owns himself some stunning beagles as well as a number of blue ribbon hunting horses, which are Kentucky thoroughbreds. Miss Spilman, who is a remarkably attractive type of Southern beauty, will be warmly welcomed here among the smart set, as I understand the young people are to make their home at the Barrett homestead with Mrs. Barrett in Concord, which is one of the most attractive estates in that beautiful old historic town.

Few people would look as well as Mrs. Eben D. Jordan in the trying and vivid shade of green silk and chiffon she has been appearing in lately at the opera, which is one of the most effective creations I have seen in the horse show row of boxes. The decollette bodice fairly scintillates in iridescent trimming of green lace in sequins in the green and doll bronze coloring, the same tone color being carried out on the shoulder and short sleeve trimming. With this creation she usually wears a superb display of emeralds and diamonds. Her necklace of these gems is by far one of the most valuable in the city, and I am told was a gift from Mr. Jordan during a recent visit to Paris. The square emerald which forms the pendant is fully an inch and a half long and an inch across and is surrounded by large solitaires, each diamond being a gem in itself. The gold strand on which it hangs has a number of smaller emeralds and diamonds suspended, each of which in itself would make a magnificent showing.

I am not discouraging economy on anyone's part, for the old adage has never been exploded that it is not wealth, but there are so many other ways of saving and not implicating one to whom society must feel largely indebted for not only the success of this season—that of Miss Sister's debut—but annually nobody does more good amongst all classes than Mrs. Sister, whose lax, generous purse strings are always open.

Her Christmas remembrances to her employes of the Webster mills alone illustrates that fact annually. Boston, though, has always had the reputation of including a more or less generous set among the elite, but, even so, just because one is blessed with an annual amount of worldly goods, is at any reason she should be made a target of for some who are living to get "something for nothing?" is at any reason, either, why a woman like Mrs. Gardner should not feel it was equally due her to get her money's worth, as well as that of some personage less prominent socially? I refer to her, because I hear on the best authority she is a splendid housekeeper and has been at times criticised for going into the kitchen at Fenway Court almost daily and personally going through her larder to see how things are, and what is used and not used. I have seen her myself at the village fruit stores in Brookline going from one to the other in purchasing oranges to see which afforded the best fruit for the same money.

Climbers in Society Are Banned by "Trust"

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Is there a social trust in Boston—and have efforts been made to break it? All this anent the assemblies and the increasingly rigid exclusiveness with which the ladies are drawn each season.

He that as it may, the disgruntled ones are many, and in many instances have gotten out of town while the most important events of the Winter are in progress.

The assemblies shone this year with unusual brilliance, and for those fortunate enough to be on the inside they were likewise the most enjoyable. It's by reading these assembly lists that one gathers who's who in Boston society, so no doubt that is the reason the climbers, sore hearted and utterly fagged with the climbing and the fruitlessness of it all, decide when they find themselves among those not invited that it's a beautiful time to take a trip South or to Europe.

And off they go to some far clime to rest, make ready for another effort and at the same time escape the tantalizing gossip of this all-important affair in which they failed to figure.

TAKES TIME AND A FAMILY TREE.

The lines are so closely drawn that anyone who gets through is socially established for good and all, but the trouble with the assemblies is that one has to inherit the right to become a member as "attaining" the assemblies without a long and gilt-edge family history as a backing is beginning to be regarded as the impossible. But nevertheless the test of members is a long one. And so the idea of the Rev. C. W. Leyer Nicholls that there are only fifteen fashionables in Boston is labelled a mistake right there for there are certainly more than that number on the Assembly list and that means they are the very cream of society.

Every year the sifting process goes on and from the list of debutantes only those sift through who have a bulwark of social position, ancestry and a few of the numerous other requirements to boost them along while the less fortunate get the first real jolt of their happy young lives and stand aside watching their romantic dreams fade in the distance, for there never was a debutante who at least didn't hope that she might be on the Assembly list.

But such joy for the girl who does receive one of these dainty invitations! Her social position is assured and she's quite likely to live happily ever after.

Mr. Nicholls has given as the only real society people of Boston Miss Eleonora Sears, the only member of that distinguished family in society; the Lars Andersons, the Prescott Lawrences, the F. V. R. Thayers, the Hollis Hunnewells, Mrs. J. De Forest Danielson, the William Phillipses and the R. Rollins Morses, but there are certainly more than these who attend the exclusive assemblies, and as they represent the very best of what Boston has to offer in the way of society, right there is a flat contradiction to the society expert, Mr. Nicholls.

BRILLIANT EVENT AT COPLEY-PLAZA.

The first in the series of assemblies this year, or rather the first of the two assemblies, took place at the Copley-Plaza Friday night, and will go on record as the most brilliant of any year yet. Formerly they have been held at the Somerset, but the Copley-Plaza was chosen this year, and made a delightful setting for the gorgeous display of gowns and jewels. It was the grand climax for the season's gayeties, and the best part of all, gave a chance to those members of society not of the debutante set, who have been compelled to stand aside all during the season while the buds stormed the stronghold of society.

The younger matrons, the older matrons, the older girls, the younger girls and the chosen few among the debutantes mingled for the first time this season.

Every one saved the very choicest of their gowns and jewels for this occasion and since the new standard set in gowning in Boston, it is needless to say that the best was superb. The best was represented in the list of patronesses, which list included the names of:

Mrs. Clarton Abbott, Mrs. Rudolph L. Agassiz, Mrs. Oliver Ames, 2d, Mrs. C. Kendrick, Jr., Mrs. William Appleton, Mrs. Augustus P. Gardner, Mrs. Henry B. Burnham, Mrs. Henry Homans, Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby, Mrs. Guy Lowell, Mrs. Russell Cheney, Mrs. Francis Peabody, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Jr., Mrs. Quincy Shaw, Mrs. Roger Wolcott, Mrs. Philip S. Sears.

The managers of the affair were S. Hooper Cooper, Philip S. Sears and S. Barrett Wendell, Jr., but on account of mourning in the Sears family Mr. Sears was not present.

Miss Syrita Peabody, who is one of the prettiest of this season's buds, is having a thoroughly delightful time. Among the many events given in her honor is the series of dances which her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Peabody, are having for her at their beautiful suburban home, Highfield, Milton.

Society Finding Recreation Abroad

With society now scattering far and wide, more in search of change than better climes—for the weather so far this season in Boston has been perfect—news is continually coming back to us of the doings of the wanderers.

The Misses Foss, twin daughters of Governor and Mrs. Foss, are returning this week to Paris after spending their Christmas holidays with a party of friends at the Knim Hotel, St. Moritz, Switzerland, where they have been taking an active part in the Winter sports of that famous resort.

Among the Boston society girls enjoying the holidays in Washington is pretty Esther Slater, who went over to attend the ball given last week for Miss Margaret Draper; Miss Violet Thayer and Frances Saltonstal. Lawrence Haughton and J. P. Parker, who are the house guests of Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. George von L. Meyer, Saturday evening Secretary and Mrs. Meyer gave a dance for the younger people.

Mrs. Francis W. Perkins of Brookline has been the guest in Providence the past week of her sisters, the Misses Anthony of Maushie street. Wednesday Miss Louisa C. Beckwith of Providence gave a luncheon at her home in honor of her cousin, Miss Alice Perkins of Brookline. Poinsettia ornamented the table and other Christmas decorations were conspicuous about the house.

Dr. Joseph Grady and Mrs. Grady sailed Thursday from New York on the new steamer, City of Montgomery, for Savannah, Ga. From this point they will go on to Jacksonville, St. Augustine, Ormonde, Sea Breeze, Baton, Palm Beach, Miami, Nassau, Key West and Havana, Cuba. From there they will return by way of St. Petersburg, Tampa, Hot Springs, Asheville, N. C., Atlanta and Washington, D. C. Dr. Grady first planned the trip in his automobile, but later changed his mind. The Gradys will return February 1.

Miss Nora Thayer a New Year's Bride.

Prominent among the New Year's weddings was that on Thursday of Miss Nora Thayer, daughter of the John Eliot Thayers of Boston and Lancaster, to Francis Abbott Goodhue, well known banker and cricketer. The ceremony, which was witnessed by only the members of the two families and a few intimate friends, took place in the Unitarian Church at Lancaster and was followed by a reception at the Thayer home near by. The honeymoon will be spent in a six months' tour of South America, before Mr. Goodhue is to look after business interests. He will be in South America will be for the First National Bank, as he recently resigned as president of the Brookline Trust Company. He is a Harvard, '06, man and an athlete of considerable note.

Miss Thayer is a Vincent Club girl and at the time of her debut, a couple of seasons ago, figured as one of the most popular of the debutante set. She is clever and accomplished and bears a close resemblance to her younger sister, Miss Evelyn Thayer, who is exceedingly popular, and, as rumor has it, will shortly announce her engagement.

An important New Year's wedding in New York which is of high interest to Boston society was that of Miss Helen Cole Whitney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Whitney of Boston and New York, to George G. Bourne, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Bourne of Oakdale, L. I. Mrs. Allan S. Briggs, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and the other attendants included Mrs. Stanley Keith of Chicago and the Misses Mary Bovee, Marjorie Bourne, Elizabeth Kendall and Marie Councus of New York; also Miss Inez Tiedeman of Savannah, Ga.; Miss Hayael Huston of Sewickley, Pa., and Miss Harriet Douglas of Kansas City. Miss Margaret Stewart Mackay was flower girl and Arthur Paul MacArthur was page.

Howard Bourne was his brother's best man, and the ushers included William M. Robinson of Louisville; Elton Hoyt, Jr., of Cleveland; Chandler W. Bleistein, of Buffalo; William W. Eastman, of Minneapolis; William P. Snyder, of Pittsburgh; also Seth Barton French, 2d., George B. Wagstaff, Gerald Vanderbilt Hollins, Reginald Boone, Morgan J. O'Brien, Jr., William S. Lawson, Jr., and Douglas D. Dunn of New York.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore white Russian crepe heavily embroidered and trimmed with shadow lace. She carried gardenias and lillies of the valley.

Draws Throng to See the Opera.

After the modern twentieth century New Year's eve celebration indulged in by Bostonians, who so manifestly set the joy bells a-ringing, society was in a responsive mood, and on Wednesday evening the opera management produced in the proper manner in the brilliantly spectacular "Aida."

New Year's is ever a favored opportunity for the eternal feminine to deck herself in something new, and many were the advanced touches noted in the beautiful toilettes. Mrs. Frederick Converse, alway notable, was admirable in peinula pink chiffon, very fully draped and embroidered with gold, the color again repeated in her gold slippers and necklet.

Mrs. Slater's box was given over to a party of guests, including Heinrich Gebhard and his fascinating sister, who selected a gown of coral pink with jewelled tunic.

In the Mary S. Ames box, Mrs. Nathaniel Simpkins, Jr., gave cordial greeting to a large party of young friends. She was lovely in white charmeuse, veiled in palest green net, the tunic weighted with dewdrop crystals.

Among the hostesses Mrs. Edward Brandegee was quite the most attractive, her gown of white lace fairly dazzling with jewels and in her hair a Victorian tiara of diamonds. Her daughter, Miss Marion Sprague, who has been the recipient of so many pleasant attentions this season, was lovely in a gown of white meteor, with scarfings of rose pink.

While the younger circle was not much in evidence, an attractive debutante-to-be was Miss Margery Crocker, who wore a gown of white satin, adorned with festoons of soft rose tulle; her sister, Miss Eleanor Crocker, who was so brilliantly presented at a carnival party at the Boston Arena a few seasons ago, was lovely in blush pink chiffon, the triple skirt inset with folds of elephant gray tulle, which also fashioned her scarf.

Quite the syncure of all eyes in the orchestra stalls was Mrs. F. W. L. Richardson, whose stately figure was set off to much good advantage in a gown of emerald green satin, the double pointed train ornamented with sheafs of silver embroideries, a shroud of the silver woven throughout the gown. In her hair was an upright pilot bandeau of the green, with jetted sprays. Her sister, Mrs. William Nickerson, was artistic in a gown of richly brocaded coral pink, a Russian bandeau of pink, with the picturesque bangle pendants hanging almost to the shoulder line adorning her coiffure.

Mrs. Gardner in Opal Pink Gown.

Mrs. John L. Gardner followed tradition in appearing in a new gown. She selected a ravishing creation of opal pink which shows flame in one light, interchanging with deep pink. A Persian embroidered border gave an Oriental effect to the accordion plaited skirt, over which fell a polonaise of black panne velvet, draping to a voluminous train. From the many bright hues one turned alluringly to the gown of Mrs. F. Gordon Dexter, which was of softest faille francaise in the dull toned black, the decolletage outlined with jet. A Marlborough collar of jet with diamond sibles encircled her neck, and a paradise aigrette was gracefully placed in her beautiful gray tresses.

Mrs. Eleanor Allen received much attention during the promenade, her gown being of white crepe meteor, draped almost to the hem in raspberry chiffon, with bead embroideries of gold. Miss Elizabeth Gray was charming in ivory-toned satin, with drape of gold tinted lace and decollete fichu of Spanish lace.

Mrs. John T. Lisnee's patrician beauty was enhanced by her gown of hunter's green, with gold embroideries. Mrs. Lowell Blake selected ombre-toned tulle, with crystal passementeries and diamond necklace.

Mrs. Eben Jordan was in black jetted lace, en traine, and her daughter selected china blue, with ruchings of white tulle. Miss Eleanor Cotton wore yellow satin and marten fur, and Miss Alice Burr—the sister of Barbara, the younger—was lovely in rose chiffon over white satin. Mrs. Dudley B. Fay wore the black and white maple combination so favored by my lady of quality, and black satin was the gown selected by Mrs. William A. Gaston.

Brilliant Week at the Opera; New Gowns of Mrs. Gardner

SO far as the opera was concerned the week was a brilliant one, Monday evening especially so. On that occasion Mrs. John L. Gardner, who is making an enviable record for herself this Winter in the matter of gowning and apparently has been spending some real money for her clothes, entertained a large box party.

She was among the first of the box holders to arrive and instead of removing her beautiful royal purple wrap when entering the box, kept it on while arranging the chairs in her box and waiting for the first of her guests. So naturally there was no little amount of speculating among those who were watching her as to what the gown under the wrap would be. Mrs. Gardner, who, in other Winters has appeared for the most part in rather antique looking creations of black lace or black satin, this year is adopting all the latest in colors as well as models. On Monday evening her gown was of reddish purple satin draped in the very smartest effect and trimmed with gold lace and a bandeau of shiny material of the same color was worn about her hair.

The Most Beautiful Gown.

The most beautiful gown there that evening, however, was that worn by Miss Helen Sears who, with her mother, Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, were among those in the boxes. Miss Sears' gown, which seemed to perfection the beauty of her neck and shoulders, and gave her the desired tall, slender appearance, was of brocaded old rose and gold satin, trimmed with gold and cream lace, the skirt opening over a drop skirt of ruffles of cream lace. Her only jewels were a string of pearls. Mrs. Sears wore black satin, the upper part of the bodice of cream lace.

Miss Elizabeth Porter, who has been going about comparatively little this Winter, especially for her, came early, and from her seat in the rear of the orchestra was kept busy greeting her many friends who strolled in later. She was looking especially attractive in a gown of black chiffon over cardinal satin.

Miss Porter is one of the best possible examples of what a real society girl with little money can do and how it, after all, depends upon the girl herself whether she will keep her position or not. She is working especially hard, giving violin lessons, and on Tuesday morning bright and early while waiting for Boston street I met her carrying her violin and evidently hustling off to give a lesson. She was looking smart in a dark blue suit and dark blue rather close fitting hat, trimmed with a plume of a lighter blue shade.

Dorothy Jordan's Gown.

Mrs. Josiah Hayden, who entertained several guests in her box, was quite as animated as usual and wore a gown of black satin with upper part of the bodice of white lace, and a deep red rose on the corsage.

Pretty Dorothy Jordan, who must have more gowns than any other girl in Boston society, wore a handsome new one of cerise chiffon beautifully embroidered in crystals and draped over white satin. During part of the evening she visited Miss Miriam Shaw, with whom she chatted incessantly until it was time to return to her father's box.

Miss Shaw, who is one of the wealthiest girls in her set, was in a becoming gown of King's blue satin trimmed with white lace and made with the same simplicity which distinguishes all her gowns.

Mrs. Jordan, who had as a guest in her box that distinguished matron, Mrs. James Jackson, was in black satin trimmed with beaded white chiffon. Mrs. Jackson, whose quantities of white hair and young, fresh-looking face as well as her gracious manner make her a distinguished figure always on Monday night wore a gown of deep purple velvet trimmed with gold and silver lace and had a white aigrette in her hair.

The Misses Edwards who are prominent among the box holders also entertained a party. Miss Edwards in pale blue satin and chiffon and a small blue ornament in her hair. Her sister was in black satin and white lace.

A Striking Gown.

Mrs. S. Reed Anthony who has been doing considerable entertaining during the holidays, wore a striking gown of black satin trimmed with wide bands of white lace on the skirt and bodice.

Her pretty daughter, Miss Ruth Anthony who went to Providence the following day where she was a guest over New Year's at the house party entertained by Judge and Mrs. Colt, was in white satin and chiffon trimmed with pink rose buds and turquois blue velvet.

On New Year's eve, Miss Anthony was among the guests entertained at a large dinner by the Colts who later took the ...ers on to the Assembly. On that occasion Miss Anthony wore rose colored moire.

Mrs. Edwin Upton Curtis, one of the most beautiful of our smart set matrons, was in old gold velvet with panels of embroidered gold net.

Mrs. Gordon Abbott wore a stunning gown of King's blue and gold brocaded velvet and blue slippers with gold heels.
